That all in England did repute him dead: [tages
And from this swarm of fair advan-
You took occasion to be quickly woo'd
To gripe the general sway into your hand;
Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster;
And being fed by us, you used us so
As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird,
Useth the sparrow; did oppress our nest; [bulk
Grew by our feeding to so great a
That even our love durst not come near your sight [nimble wing
For fear of swallowing; but with
We were enforced, for safety, sake, to fly [sent head;
Out of your sight, and raise this pre-
Whereby we stand opposed by such means [yourself
As you yourself have forged against
By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.
K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articulated, [churches,
Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in

To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour that may please the eye [tents,
Of fickle changelings and poor discon-
Which gape and rub the elbow at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation:
And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colours to impaint his cause;
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
Of pellmell havoc and confusion.

P. Hen. In both our armies there is many a soul
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew, [the world
The Prince of Wales doth join with all
In praise of Henry Percy: by my hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head,
I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant or more valiant-young,
More daring or more bold, is now alive
To grace this latter age with noble deeds. [shame,
For my part, I may speak it to my
I have a truant been to chivalry;
And so I hear he doth account me too;
Yet this before my father's majesty—
I am content that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation;
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight.

K. Hen. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee,
Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it. No, good Worcester, no, [we love
We love our people well; even those
That are misled upon your cousin's part; [grace,
And, will they take the offer of our
Both he and they and you, yea, every man [his:
Shall be my friend again, and I'll be
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What he will do: but if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone; [ply:
We will not now be troubled with re-
We offer fair; take it advisedly.

[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON.

P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life:
The Douglas and the Hotspur both together
Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge; [them:
For, on their answer, will we set on
And God befriend us, as our cause is just!

[Exeunt all but PRINCE HENRY and FALSTAFF.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well.

P. Hen. Why, thou owest God a death. [Exit.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet; I would be loth to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no matter; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg? no: or an arm? no: or take away the grief of a wound? no. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? no. What is honour? a word. What is in that word honour? what is that honour? air. A trim reckoning! Who hath it? he that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? no. Doth he hear it? no. 'Tis insensible, then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? no. Why? detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it. Honour is a mere scutcheon: and so ends my catechism. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Rebel Camp.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberal kind offer of the king.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone.
It is not possible, it cannot be, [ing us;
The king should keep his word in lov-
He will suspect us still, and find a time
To punish this offence in other faults:
Suspicion all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes;

For treason is but trusted like the fox;
Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd and lock'd up,
Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.
Look how we can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks;
And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd, still the nearer death. [got;
My nephew's trespass may be well for-
It hath the excuse of youth and heat of blood,
And an adopted name of privilege,
A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen:
All his offences live upon my head
And on his father's; we did train him on; [us,
And, his corruption being ta'en from
We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.
Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know,
In any case, the offer of the king.

Ver. Deliver what you will; I'll say 'tis so.
Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS; Officers and Soldiers behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd: deliver up [what news?
My Lord of Westmoreland.—Uncle,

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently. [Westmoreland.

Doug. Defy him by the Lord of

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly. [Exit.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid!

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances, [ed thus,
Of his oath-breaking; which he mend-
By now forswearing that he is forsworn:
He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge [in us.
With haughty arms this hateful name

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen; to arms! for I have thrown [teeth,
A brave defiance in King Henry's
And Westmoreland, that was engaged, did bear it; [quickly on.
Which cannot choose but bring him

Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king, [fight.
And, nephew, challenged you to single

Hot. O, would the quarrel lay upon our heads, [breath to-day
And that no man might draw short
But I and Harry Monmouth! Tell me, tell me, [contempt?
How show'd his tasking? seem'd it in

Ver. No, by my soul; I never in my life [estly,
Did hear a challenge urged more mod-
Unless a brother should a brother dare
To gentle exercise and proof of arms.
He gave you all the duties of a man;
Trimm'd up your praises with a princely tongue;
Spoke your deservings like a chronicle;
Making you ever better than his praise
By still dispraising praise valued with you; [indeed,
And, which became him like a prince
He made a blushing cital of himself;
And chid his truant youth with such a grace
As if he master'd there a double spirit
Of teaching and of learning instantly.
There did he pause: but let me tell the world,—
If he outlive the envy of this day,
England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his wantonness. [oured

Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enam-
Upon his follies; never did I hear
Of any prince so wild a libertine.
But be he as he will, yet once ere night
I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
That he shall shrink under my courtesy.
Arm, arm with speed: and, fellows, soldiers, friends,
Better consider what you have to do
Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now.
O gentlemen, the time of life is short!
To spend that shortness basely were too long,
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour.
An if we live, we live to tread on kings;

If die, brave death, when princes die with us! [fair,
Now, for our consciences, the arms are
When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes on apace.

Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale,
For I profess not talking; only this—
Let each man do his best: and here draw I
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal
In the adventure of this perilous day.
Now, Esperance! Percy! and set on.
Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace;
For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall
A second time do such a courtesy.

[The Trumpets sound. They embrace, and exeunt.

SCENE III.—Plain between the Camps.

Excursions, and Parties fighting. Alarum to the Battle. Then enter DOUGLAS and BLUNT, meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle thus [thou seek Thou crossest me? what honour dost
Upon my head? [las;

Doug. Know then, my name is Doug-
And I do haunt thee in the battle thus
Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The Lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought
Thy likeness; for instead of thee, King Harry, [thee,
This sword hath ended him: so shall it
Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot; [revenge
And thou shalt find a king that will Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight, and BLUNT is slain.

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou fought at
Holmedon thus, I never had triumph'd upon a Scot.

Doug. All's done, all's won; here breathless lies the king.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here. [face full well:

Hot. This, Douglas? no: I know this
A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt; [self.
Semblably furnish'd like the king him-

Doug. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes!
A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear: [a king?
Why didst thou tell me that thou wert

Hot. The king hath many marching in his coats. [all his coats;

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill
I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up, and away!
Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here; here's no scoring but upon the pate. Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt: there's honour for you! here's no vanity! I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too: God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels. I have led my ragamuffins where they are peppered: there's but three of my hundred and fifty left alive; and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

P. Hen. What, stand'st thou idle here? lend me thy sword:
Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff
Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths are unrevenged: I prithee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal, I prithee, give me leave to breathe awhile. Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure.

P. Hen. He is, indeed; and living to kill thee. I prithee lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou gett'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

P. Hen. Give it me: what, is it in the case?

Fal. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot; there's that will sack a city.

[The PRINCE draws out a bottle of sack.

P. Hen. What, is't a time to jest and dally now?

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a carbonado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: give me life: which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there's an end. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter KING HENRY, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, and WESTMORELAND.

K. Hen. I prithee,
Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much.
Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

Lanc. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

P. Hen. I beseech your majesty, make up,
Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

K. Hen. I will do so.
My Lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent.

West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

P. Hen. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help:
And God forbid a shallow scratch should drive me
The Prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

Lanc. We breathe too long: come, cousin Westmoreland,
Our duty this way lies; for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt PRINCE JOHN and WESTMORELAND.

P. Hen. By Heaven, thou hast deceived me, Lancaster;
I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:
Before, I loved thee as a brother, John;
But now, I do respect thee as my soul.

K. Hen. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown warrior.

P. Hen. O, this boy
Lends mettle to us all! [Exit.

Alarums. Enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Another king! they grow like Hydra's heads:
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those
That wear those colours on them: what art thou,
That counterfeit'st the person of a king?

K. Hen. The king himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart
So many of his shadows thou hast met
And not the very king. I have two boys
Seek Percy and thyself about the field:
But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee: so defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit; [a king:
And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like
But mine I am sure thou art, whoe'er thou be,
And thus I win thee.

[They fight; the KING being in danger, re-enter P. HENRY.

P. Hen. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like
Never to hold it up again! the spirits
Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms: [thee;
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens
Who never promiseth but he means to pay.

[They fight: DOUGLAS flies.

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your grace?
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent, [straight.
And so hath Clifton: I'll to Clifton

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe awhile:
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion,
And show'd thou makest some tender of my life, [to me.
In this fair rescue thou hast brought

P. Hen. O heaven! they did me too much injury [death.
That ever said I hearken'd for your
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you, [your end
Which would have been as speedy in
As all the poisonous potions in the world, [your son.
And saved the treacherous labour of

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton: I'll to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit.

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.
Hot. My name is Harry Percy.
P. Hen. Why, then I see
A very valiant rebel of the name.
I am the Prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere; [reign,
Nor can one England brook a double
Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales. [hour is come
Hot. Nor shall it, Harry; for the
To end the one of us; and would to God [as mine!
Thy name in arms were now as great
P. Hen. I'll make it greater ere I part from thee; [crest
And all the budding honours on thy
I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.
Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities. [They fight.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal! Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Re-enter DOUGLAS; he fights with FALSTAFF, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit DOUGLAS. HOTSPUR is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast robb'd me of my youth!
I better brook the loss of brittle life
Than those proud titles thou hast won of me;
They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh:
But thought's the slave of life, and life time's fool; [world,
And time, that takes survey of all the
Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy,
But that the earthy and cold hand of death [art dust,
Lies on my tongue: no, Percy, thou
And food for—— [Dies.
P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy: fare thee well, great heart!
Ill-weaved ambition, how much art thou shrunk! [spirit,
When that this body did contain a
A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
But now two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough: this earth that bears thee dead
Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.
If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
I should not make so dear a show of zeal: [face;
But let my favours hide thy mangled
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven! [grave,
Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the
But not remember'd in thy epitaph!
[He spieth FALSTAFF on the ground.
What, old acquaintance! could not all this flesh [well!
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, fare-
I could have better spared a better man:
O, I should have a heavy miss of thee,
If I were much in love with vanity!
Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day, [fray.
Though many dearer, in this bloody
Embowell'd will I see thee by and by:
Till then in blood by noble Percy lie.
[Exit.

Fal. [Rising slowly.] Embowelled! if thou embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me and eat me too to-morrow. 'Sblood, 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I lie, I am no counterfeit: to die, is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man who hath not the life of a man: but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of valour is—discretion; in the which better part I have saved my life. 'Zounds, I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead: how, if he should counterfeit too, and rise? By my faith, I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure; yea, and I'll swear I killed him. Why may not he rise as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me. Therefore, sirrah [Stabbing him], with a new wound in your thigh, come you along with me.

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY and PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER.

P. Hen. Come, brother John; full bravely hast thou flesh'd
Thy maiden sword.

Lanc. But, soft! whom have we here?
Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

P. Hen. I did; I saw him dead,
Breathless and bleeding on the ground. Art thou alive? or is it fantasy
That plays upon our eyesight? I prithee, speak; [ears:
We will not trust our eyes without our
Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certain; I am not a double man: but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy [Throwing the body down]: if your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou? Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying! I grant you I was down and out of breath; and so was he: but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, 'zounds! I would make him eat a piece of my sword. [e'er I heard.

Lanc. This is the strangest tale that

P. Hen. This is the strangest fellow, brother John. [your back:
Come, bring your luggage nobly on
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace, I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have. [A Retreat is sounded.
The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours. [the field,
Come, brother, let us to the highest of
To see what friends are living, who are dead.

[Exeunt PRINCE HENRY and PRINCE JOHN.

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly as a nobleman shoul do. [Exit, bearing off the Body.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

The Trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, and Others, with WORCESTER and VERNON prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke. [grace,
Ill-spirited Worcester! did we not send
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary? [trust?
Misuse the tenour of thy kinsman's
Three knights upon our party slain today,
A noble earl and many a creature else
Had been alive this hour, [borne
If like a Christian thou hadst truly
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done my safety urged me to;
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too:
Other offenders we will pause upon.

[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON, guarded.

How goes the field?

P. Hen. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw [from him,
The fortune of the day quite turn'd
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill, he was so bruised [tent
That the pursuers took him. At my
The Douglas is; and I beseech your grace
I may dispose of him.

K. Hen With all my heart.

P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you
This honourable bounty shall belong:
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless and free:
His valour shown upon our crests today [high deeds
Hath taught us how to cherish such
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

Lan. I thank your grace for this high courtesy,
Which I shall give away immediately.

K. Hen. Then this remains, that we divide our power.
You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland
Towards York shall bend you with your dearest speed,
To meet Northumberland and the prelate Scroop,
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:
Myself and you, son Harry, will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower and the Earl of March.
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won.
[Exeunt.

INDUCTION

Warkworth. Before NORTHUMBERLAND'S Castle.

Enter RUMOUR, painted full of tongues.

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop
The vent of hearing when loud Rumour speaks?
I, from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride;
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
I speak of peace, while covert enmity,
Under the smile of safety, wounds the world:
And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful musters and prepared defence,
Whilst the big year, swoln with some other grief,
Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures;
And of so easy and so plain a stop
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known body to anatomize
Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
I run before King Harry's victory;
Who, in a bloody field by Shrewsbury,
Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops,
Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? my office is
To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell

Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword
And that the king before the Douglas' rage [death.
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as
This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns
Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone, [berland,
Where Hotspur's father, old Northum-
Lies crafty-sick: the posts come tiring on, [news
And not a man of them brings other
Than they have learn'd of me: from Rumour's tongues
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter LORD BARDOLPH.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho?
[The Porter opens the gate.
Where is the Earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?

L. Bard. Tell thou the earl
That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him here. [the orchard:

Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into
Please it your honour, knock but at the gate,
And he himself will answer.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

L. Bard. Here comes the earl.
[Exit Porter.

North. What news, Lord Bardolph? every minute now [gem:
Should be the father of some strata-
The times are wild; contention, like a horse [loose
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke
And bears down all before him.

L. Bard. Noble Earl,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an God will!

L. Bard. As good as heart can wish:
The king is almost wounded to the death; [son,
And, in the fortune of my lord your Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts [Prince John
Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young
And Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field; [hulk Sir John,
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the
Is prisoner to your son: O, such a day,
So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won,
Came not till now to dignify the times,
Since Cæsar's fortunes!

North. How is this derived?
Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence;
A gentleman well bred and of good name, [true,
That freely render'd me these news for

North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent
On Tuesday last to listen after news.

L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way;
And he is furnish'd with no certainties
More than he haply may retail from me.

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfrevile turn'd me back [horsed,
With joyful tidings; and, being better
Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard [speed,
A gentleman, almost forspent with
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.
He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him [bury:
I did demand what news from Shrews-
He told me that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold. [head,
With that, he gave his able horse the
And bending forward struck his armed heels [jade
Against the panting sides of his poor
Up to the rowel-head, and starting so
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! Again:
Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion
Had met ill luck? [what;

L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you
If my young lord your son have not the day,

Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barony: never talk of it.
North. Why should that gentleman that rode by Travers
Give then such instances of loss?
L. Bard. Who, he?
He was some hilding fellow that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life, [more news.
Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf,
Foretells the nature of a tragic volume:
So looks the strond whereon the imperious flood
Hath left a witness'd usurpation.
Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury? [noble lord;
Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask
To fright our party.
North. How doth my son and brother?
Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand. [less,
Even such a man, so faint, so spirit-
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, [was burnt;
And would have told him half his Troy
But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue, [report'st it.
And I my Percy's death ere thou
This thou wouldst say, 'Your son did thus and thus; [Douglas:'
Your brother thus: so fought the noble
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds: [deed,
But in the end, to stop mine ear in-
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, [are dead.'
Ending with 'Brother, son, and all
Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;
But, for my lord your son,——
North. Why, he is dead.
See what a ready tongue suspicion hath!
He that but fears the thing he would not know [others' eyes
Hath, by instinct, knowledge from
That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton;
Tell thou thy earl his divination lies,
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace,
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong. [gainsaid:
Mor. You are too great to be by me
Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain. [Percy's dead.
North. Yet, for all this, say not that
I see a strange confession in thine eye:
Thou shakest thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin [so:
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say
The tongue offends not that reports his death: [dead,
And he doth sin that doth belie the
Not he which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news
Hath but a losing office, and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Remember'd knolling a departing friend. [your son is dead.
L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord,
Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe [not seen;
That which I would to heaven I had
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, [outbreathed,
Rendering faint quittance, wearied and
To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat down
The never-daunted Percy to the earth,
From whence with life he never more sprung up. [fire

Being bruited once, took fire and heat away [troops;

For from his metal was his party steel'd;
Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead:
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, [loss,
So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's
Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear [their aim
That arrows fled not swifter toward
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, [noble Worcester
Fly from the field. Then was that Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot, [ing sword
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labour-

Stumbling in fear, was took. The
Is that the king hath won; and hath sent out [lord,
A speedy power to encounter you, my
Under the conduct of young Lancaster
And Westmoreland. This is the news at full. [enough to mourn.

North. For this I shall have time
In poison there is physic; and these news, [made me sick,
Having been well, that would have
Being sick, have in some measure made me well: [en'd joints,
And as the wretch, whose fever-weak-
Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life,
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, [ed with grief,
Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag-
Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch!
A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel, [sickly quoif!
Must glove this hand: and hence, thou
Thou art a guard too wanton for the head [aim to hit.
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest,
Now bind my brows with iron; and approach [dare bring
The ragged'st hour that time and spite
To frown upon the enraged Northumberland! [ture's hand
Let heaven kiss earth! now let not Na-
Keep the wild flood confined! let order die!
And let this world no longer be a stage
To feed contention in a lingering act;
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set [end,
On bloody courses, the rude scene may
And darkness be the burier of the dead!

Tra. This strained passion doth you wrong, my lord.

L. Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices [you give'o'er
Lean on your health; the which, if
To stormy passion, must perforce decay.
You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
And summ'd the account of chance, before you said
'Let us make head.' It was your presurmise,
That, in the dole of blows, your son might drop: [edge,
You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an
More likely to fall in than to get o'er;
You were advised his flesh was capable
Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit [danger ranged:
Would lift him where most trade of
Yet did you say 'Go forth;' and none of this, [restrain
Though strongly apprehended, could
The stiff-borne action: what hath then befallen, [brought forth,
Or what hath this bold enterprise
More than that being which was like to be? [this loss

L. Bard. We all that are engaged to
Knew that we ventured on such dangerous seas [to one;
That if we wrought out life 'twas ten
And yet we ventured, for the gain proposed [fear'd;
Choked the respect of likely peril
And since we are o'erset, venture again.
Come, we will all put forth, body and goods. [most noble lord,

Mor. 'Tis more than time: and, my
I hear for certain, and do speak the truth,
The gentle Archbishop of York is up
With well-appointed powers: he is a man [followers.

As men drink potions; that their weap-
Seem'd on our side; but, for their spirits and souls, [up,
This word, rebellion, it had froze them
As fish are in a pond. But now the bishop
Turns insurrection to religion:
Supposed sincere and holy in his thoughts, [mind;
He's follow'd both with body and with
And doth enlarge his rising with the blood

Of fair King Richard, scraped from Pomfret stones ;
Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause ; [land,
Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding
Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke ; [him.
And more and less do flock to follow
North. I knew of this before ; but, to speak truth, [my mind.
This present grief had wiped it from
Go in with me ; and counsel every man
The aptest way for safety and revenge :
Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed :
Never so few, and never yet more need.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Street.

Enter FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his Sword and Buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water ?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water ; but, for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me : the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me ; I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an agate till now : but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel, —the juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one on his cheek ; and yet he will not stick to say his face is a face-royal : God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet : he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it ; and yet he'll be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he's almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dombledon about the satin for my short cloak and my slops ?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph : he would not take his bond and yours ; he liked not the security.

Fal. Let him be damned, like the glutton ! pray God his tongue be hotter ! A whoreson Achitophel ! a rascally yea-forsooth knave ! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security ! The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles ; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then must they stand upon—security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two-and-twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security ; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it ; and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him. Where's Bardolph ?

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield : an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, and an Attendant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close ; I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there ?

Attend. Falstaff, an't please your lordship. [for the robbery ?

Ch. Just. He that was in question

Attend. He, my lord : but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury ; and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York ? Call him back again.

Attend. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder; my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Attend. Sir John!

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there not wars? is there not employment? doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Attend. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiership aside, I had lied in my throat, if I had said so.

Attend. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gettest any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter: hence! avaunt!

Attend. Sir, my lord would speak with you. [with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad: I heard say your lordship was sick: I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty: you would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, God mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief; from study, and perturbation of the brain: I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease; for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer. [youthful prince.

Ch. Just. You have misled the

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loth to gall a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action.

Fal. My lord?

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord, all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light; but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go: I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermonger times that true valour is turned bear-herd: pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you do measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls: and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? is not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with antiquity? and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John!

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with halloing and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it, and the young lion repents; marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, God send the prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry: I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my Lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, an I brandish any thing but a bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head, but I am thrust upon it: well, I cannot last ever: but it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death with rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth?

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well: commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness than he can part young limbs and lechery: but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the degrees prevent my curses. Boy!

Page. Sir?
Fal. What money is in my purse?
Page. Seven groats and two pence.
Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster: this to the prince; this to the Earl of Westmoreland; and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin. About it: you know where to find me. [Exit Page.] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of any thing: I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.

SCENE III.—York. The ARCHBISHOP'S Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the LORDS HASTINGS, MOWBRAY, and BARDOLPH.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means;
And, my most noble friends, I pray you all,
Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:
And first, lord marshal, what say you to it?
Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms;
But gladly would be better satisfied
How in our means we should advance ourselves
To look with forehead bold and big enough
Upon the power and puissance of the king.
Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file
To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice;
And our supplies live largely in the hope
Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns
With an incensed fire of injuries.
L. Bard. The question then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus;
Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand
May hold up head without Northumberland?
Hast. With him, we may.
L. Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought too feeble,
My judgment is, we should not step too far
Till we had his assistance by the hand;
For in a theme so bloody-faced as this
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise
Of aids uncertain should not be admitted.
Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for indeed
It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.
L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lined himself with hope,
Eating the air on promise of supply,
Flattering himself with project of a power
Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts:
And so, with great imagination
Proper to madmen, led his powers to death
And winking leap'd into destruction.
Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt
To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope.
L. Bard. Yes, if this present quality of war,
Indeed the instant action, a cause on foot,
Lives so in hope, as in an early spring
We see the appearing buds; which to prove fruit,
Hope gives not so much warrant as despair
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,
We first survey the plot, then draw the model;
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection;
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or at last desist
To build at all? Much more, in this great work,
Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down
And set another up, should we survey
The plot of situation and the model;
Consent upon a sure foundation,
Question surveyors, know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo,
To weigh against his opposite; or else
We fortify in paper and in figures,
Using the names of men instead of men:
Like one that draws the model of a house

Beyond his power to build it; who, half through, [cost
Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,
Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd
The utmost man of expectation;
I think we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

L. Bard. What! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand?

Hast. To us no more; nay, not so much, Lord Bardolph.
For his divisions, as the times do brawl, [the French,
Are in three heads: one power against
And one against Glendower; perforce a third
Must take up us: so is the unfirm king
In three divided; and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together,
And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh
Baying him at the heels: never fear that.

L. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces hither?

Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmoreland; [Monmouth:
Against the Welsh, himself and Harry
But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on,
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited:
An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart. [applause
O thou fond many, with what loud
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke, [him be!
Before he was what thou wouldst have
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him,
That thou provokest thyself to cast him up. [disgorge
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard; [vomit up,
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? [have him die,
They that, when Richard lived, would
Are now become enamour'd on his grave: [goodly head
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his
When through proud London he came sighing on
After the admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Criest now 'O earth, yield us that king again, [men accurst!
And take thou this!' O thoughts of
Past and to come seem best; things present, worst.

Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on?

Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter Hostess, FANG and his Boy with her, and SNARE following.

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the action?

Fang. It is entered.

Host. Where's your yeoman? Is't a lusty yeoman? will 'a stand to 't?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Host. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff.

Host. Yea, good Master Snare; I have entered him and all.

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Host. Alas the day! take heed of him; he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly: in good faith, 'a cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out: he will foin like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust. [your elbow.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'll be at

Fang. An I but fist him once; an 'a come but within my vice,—

Host. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score. Good Master Fang, hold him sure: good Master Snare, let him not 'scape. 'A comes continuantly to Pie-corner,—saving your manhoods,—to buy a saddle; and he's indited to dinner to the Lubber's-head in Lumbert street, to Master Smooth's the silkman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear: and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong.—Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare; do me, do me, do me your offices.

Enter FALSTAFF, PAGE, and BARDOLPH.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets!—Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain's head: throw the quean in the channel.

Host. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardly rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's? Ah, thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two. Thou wo't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't ta? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, attended.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me!

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what, are you brawling here?
Doth this become your place, your time and business? [to York.
You should have been well on your way
Stand from him, fellow: wherefore hang'st thou on him?

Host. O my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his:—but I will have some of it out again, or I'll ride thee o' nights, like the mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some; whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people; saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath: deny it, if thou canst.

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you: she hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and person.

Host. Yea, in troth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Prithee, peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villany you have done with her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness: if a man will make courtesy and say nothing, he is virtuous: no, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor. I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong: but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess.

Enter GOWER.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower, what news?

Gow. The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand: the rest the paper tells.

Fal. As I am a gentleman.

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an 'twere not for thy humours, there's not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw the action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Pray thee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles: i' faith, I am loth to pawn my plate, in good earnest, la!

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together?

Fal. Will I live? [To BARDOLPH] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her.

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord? [night?

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what's the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse,

Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster, [bishop.

Against Northumberland and the arch-

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently: [Gower.
Come, go along with me, good Master

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here; I thank you, good Sir John.

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Ch. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

P. Hen. Faith, it does me; though it discolours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

P. Hen. Belike then, my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it in me to remember thy name! or to know thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superfluity, and one other for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom: but the midwives say the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins? [excellent good thing.

Poins. Yes, faith; and let it be an

P. Hen. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

P. Hen. Why, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee, as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend, I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

P. Hen. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency: let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick: and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

Poins. The reason?

P. Hen. What wouldst thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

P. Hen. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd, and so much engraffed to Falstaff.

P. Hen. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoken of; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.

P. Hen. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Bard. God save your grace! [dolph!

P. Hen. And yours, most noble Bar-

Bard. [To the Page.] Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at-arms are you become! Is't such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead?

Page. He called me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last I spied his eyes; and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and so peeped through.

P. Hen. Hath not the boy profited?

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away! [dream, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althæa's

P. Hen. Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althæa dreamed she was delivered of a firebrand; and therefore I call him her dream.

P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interpretation: there it is, boy.

Poins. O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers! Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong. [Bardolph?

P. Hen. And how doth thy master,

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not.

P. Hen. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place; for look you how he writes.

Poins. [Reads.]

'John Falstaff, knight,'—

every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself: even like those that are kin to the king; for they never prick their finger but they say, 'There's some of the king's blood spilt.' 'How comes that?' says he, that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, 'I am the king's poor cousin, sir.'

P. Hen. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter:

Poins. [Reads.]

'Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting.'

Why, this is a certificate.

P. Hen. Peace!

Poins. [Reads.]

'I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity:'

he sure means brevity in breath; short-winded.

'I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayest; and so, farewell.

Thine, by yea and no, which is as much as to say, as thou usest him, JACK FALSTAFF with my familiars; JOHN with my brothers and sisters; and SIR JOHN with all Europe.'

My lord, I will steep this letter in sack, and make him eat it.

P. Hen. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune! But I never said so.

P. Hen. Well, thus we play the fools with the time; and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us.—Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yea, my lord.

P. Hen. Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord; in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. What company?

P. Hen. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet.

P. Hen. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

P. Hen. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull.—Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

P. Hen. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph, no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence.

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

P. Hen. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt BARD. and PAGE.] This Doll Tearsheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London.

P. Hen. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

P. Hen. From a god to a bull? a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? a low transformation! that shall be mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Warkworth. Before the Castle.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, LADY NORTHUMBERLAND, and LADY PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,
Give even way unto my rough affairs:
Put not you on the visage of the times,
And be, like them, to Percy troublesome. [speak no more:

Lady N. I have given over, I will
Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide. [is at pawn;

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour
And, but my going, nothing can redeem it. [not to these wars!

Lady P. O yet, for God's sake, go
The time was, father, that you broke your word, [than now;
When you were more endear'd to it
When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry,
Threw many a northward look to see his father [in vain.
Bring up his powers; but he did long
Who then persuaded you to stay at home? [and your son's.
There were two honours lost; yours
For yours, the God of heaven brighten it!
For his, it stuck upon him, as the sun
In the grey vault of heaven, and by his light
Did all the chivalry of England move
To do brave acts: he was indeed the glass [themselves:
Wherein the noble youth did dress
He had no legs that practised not his gait; [his blemish,
And speaking thick, which nature made
Became the accents of the valiant;
For those that could speak low and tardily [abuse,
Would turn their own perfection to
To seem like him: so that in speech, in gait,
In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humours of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book, [wondrous him!
That fashion'd others. And him, O
O miracle of men! him did you leave,
Second to none, unseconded by you,
To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage; to abide a field
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name
Did seem defensible: so you left him.
Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong [and nice
To hold your honour more precise
With others than with him! let them alone: [strong:
The marshal and the archbishop are
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers, [neck,
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me
With new lamenting ancient oversights.
But I must go and meet with danger there,
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided.
Lady N. O, fly to Scotland,
Till that the nobles and the armed commons [taste.
Have of their puissance made a little
Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king, [steel,
Then join you with them, like a rib of
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves, [your son;
First let them try themselves. So did
He was so suffer'd: so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough [eyes,
To rain upon remembrance with mine
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband.
North. Come, come, go in with me.
'Tis with my mind [height,
As with the tide swell'd up unto his
That makes a still-stand, running neither way:
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. The Boar's-Head Tavern in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

First Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there? apple-johns? thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john.

Sec. Draw. Mass, thou sayest true. The prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns, and, putting off his hat, said 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights.' It angered him to the heart: but he hath forgot that.

First Draw. Why, then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise; Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch: the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight.

Sec. Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince and Master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

First Draw. By the mass, here will be old Utis: it will be an excellent stratagem.

Sec. Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak. [Exit.

Enter Hostess and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Host. I'faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality: your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose, in good truth, la! But, i'faith, you have drunk too much canaries; and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say 'What's this?' How do you now?

Dol. Better than I was: hem!

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Look, here comes Sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. [Singing.]
'When Arthur first in court'—
Empty the jordan. [Exit First Drawer.
[Singing.] 'And was a worthy king.'
How now, Mistress Doll! [sooth.

Host. Sick of a calm; yea, good

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Dol. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me? [Doll.

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress

Dol. I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Dol. Ay, marry; our chains and our jewels.

Fal. 'Your brooches, pearls, and ouches:' for to serve bravely is to come halting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely;—

Dol. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet but you fall to some discord: you are both, in good troth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year! one must bear, [To Doll.] and that must be you: you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him; you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter First Drawer.

First Draw. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouthedst rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live among my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name and fame with the very best:—shut the door;—there comes no swaggerers here: I have not lived all this while, to have swaggering now:—shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Host. Pray you, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the debuty, t'other day; and, as he said to me,—'twas no longer ago than Wednesday last,—'Neighbour Quickly,' says he;—Master Dumbe, our minister, was by then;—'Neighbour Quickly,' says he, 'receive those that are civil; for,' saith he, 'you are in an ill name:' now 'a said so, I can tell whereupon; 'for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive: receive,' says he, 'no swaggering companions.' There comes none here: you would bless you to hear what he said: no, I'll no swaggerers.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, i' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he'll not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance.—Call him up, drawer. [Exit First Drawer.

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater: but I do not love swaggering; by my troth, I am the worse, when one says swagger: feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Pist. God save you, Sir John!

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy; I will charge you,

Dol. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy.

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung, away! by this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when, I pray you, sir! God's light! with two points on your shoulder? much!

Pist. God let me not live, but I will murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol; I would not have you go off here: discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good Captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain.

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house? He a captain! hang him, rogue! he lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light! these villains will make the word as odious as the word 'occupy;' which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted: therefore captains had need look to't.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I; I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph, I could tear her: I'll be revenged on her.

Pist. I'll see her damned first; to Pluto's damned lake, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down! down, dogs! down, faitors! Have we not Hiren here?

Host. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet; 'tis very late, i' faith: I beseek you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall pack-horses,
And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia,
Which cannot go but thirty mile a-day.
Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals, [them with
And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn
King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar.
Shall we fall foul for toys?

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs! give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here?

Host. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think I would deny her? For God's sake, be quiet. [Calipolis.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair
Come, give's some sack.
'Si fortune me tormente, sperato me contento.' [give fire:
Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend
Give me some sack: and, sweetheart, lie thou there.
[Laying down his sword.
Come we to full points here; and are etceteras nothing?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif: what! we have seen the seven stars.

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs: I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! know we not Galloway nags?

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling: nay, if he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision? shall we imbrue?
[Snatching up his sword.
Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days! [ing wounds
Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gap-
Untwine the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you downstairs.

[Drawing, and driving PISTOL out.

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these tirrits and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas! put up naked your weapons, put up your naked weapons.

[Exeunt PISTOL and BARDOLPH.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal's gone. Ah, you whoreson little valiant villain, you!

Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought 'a made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

Fal. Have you turned him out o' doors?

Bard. Yea, sir. The rascal's drunk: you have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal! to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweatest!

come, let me wipe thy face; come on, you whoreson chops: ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee: thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Dol. Do, an thou darest for thy heart: an thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Fal. Let them play. Play, sirs.—Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I' faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days and foining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter behind, PRINCE HENRY and POINS, disguised like Drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a Death's-head; do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour's the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: he would have made a good pantler, he would ha' chipped bread well.

Dol. They say Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit? hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard; there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness; and he plays at quoits well; and eats conger and fennel; and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons; and rides the wild mare with the boys; and jumps upon joint-stools; and swears with a good grace; and wears his boot very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg; and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties he hath, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois.

P. Hen. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore.

P. Hen. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisping to his master's old tables; his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Dol. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday: shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me when I am gone.

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a-weeping, an thou sayest so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken at the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis.

P. Hen. } Anon, anon, sir.
Poins. }

[Advancing.

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's?—And art not thou Poins his brother?

P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead!

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

P. Hen. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears.

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome.

[Leaning his hand upon DOLL.

Dol. How, you fat fool! I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

P. Hen. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Host. God's blessing o' your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

P. Hen. Yea, and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gads-hill: you knew I was at your back; and spoke it on purpose, to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

P. Hen. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you. [no abuse.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour;

P. Hen. Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler and bread-chipper and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse?

Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him; in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal: none, Ned, none: no, faith, boys, none.

P. Hen. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy, there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too.

P. Hen. For the women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns, poor soul! For the other, I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Host. All victuallers do so: what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

P. Hen. You, gentlewoman,—

Dol. What says your grace?

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against.

[Knocking within

Host. Who knocks so loud at door? look to the door there, Francis.

Enter PETO.

P. Hen. Peto, how now! what news? [Westminster.

Peto. The king your father is at
And there are twenty weak and wearied posts [along,
Come from the north: and, as I came
I met and overtook a dozen captains,
Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns, [Falstaff.
And asking every one for Sir John

P. Hen. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame,
So idly to profane the precious time;
When tempest of commotion, like the south [melt,
Borne with black vapour, doth begin to
And drop upon our bare unarmed heads. [staff, good night.
Give me my sword and cloak. Fal-

[Exeunt PRINCE HENRY, POINS, PETO, and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpicked. [Knocking within.] More knocking at the door?

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently;
A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. [To the Page.] Pay the musicians, sirrah. Farewell, hostess; farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after:

the undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches: if I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go.

Dol. I cannot speak; if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod-time; but an honester and truer-hearted man,—well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tearsheet!

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Within.] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

Host. O run, Doll, run; run, good Doll. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Westminster. The Palace.

Enter KING HENRY in his Nightgown, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick;
But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,
And well consider of them: make good speed. [Exit Page.
How many thousand of my poorest subjects [gentle sleep,
Are at this hour asleep! O sleep, O
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee, [down,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber, [great,
Than in the perfumed chambers of the
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sounds of sweetest melody?
O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile [kingly couch
In loathsome beds; and leavest the
A watch-case or a common 'larum-bell?
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast [his brains
Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock
In cradle of the rude imperious surge,
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top, [ing them
Curling their monstrous heads and hang-
With deafening clamour in the slippery clouds, [awakes?
That, with the hurly, death itself
Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude;
And, in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then happy low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

War. Many good-morrows to your majesty!

K. Hen. Is it good-morrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

K. Hen. Why, then, good-morrow to you all, my lords. [sent you?
Have you read o'er the letters that I

War. We have, my liege.

K. Hen. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom [grow,
How foul it is; what rank diseases
And with what danger, near the heart of it. [per'd;

War. It is but as a body yet distem-
Which to his former strength may be restored
With good advice and little medicine:
My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

K. Hen. O God! that one might read the book of fate,
And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent,
Weary of solid firmness, melt itself
Into the sea! and, other times, to see
The beachy girdle of the ocean
Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,
And changes fill the cup of alteration
With divers liquors! O, if this were seen,
The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,
What perils past, what crosses to ensue,
Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.
'Tis not ten years gone

K. Hen. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities: And that same word even now cries out on us: [land

K. Hen. I will take your counsel: And, were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Gloucestershire. Before JUSTICE SHALLOW'S House.

Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting; MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULLCALF, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good-morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a black ousel, cousin Shallow!

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar: he is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. 'A must, then, to the inns o' court shortly: I was once of Clement's Inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called 'lusty Shallow' then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing; and I would have done any thing, indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele, a Cotswold man—you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns o' court again: and I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court-gate, when 'a was a crack not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu, Jesu, the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure: death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu, Jesu, dead! 'a drew a good bow;—and dead!—'a shot a fine shoot: John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead!—'a would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.—How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead!

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Enter BARDOLPH, and one with him.

Bard. Good-morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff; a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backsword man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated! it is good; yea, indeed, is it: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of 'accommodo:' very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. Phrase, call you it? by this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or when a man is, being, whereby 'a may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just. Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand: by my troth, you like well, and bear your years very well: welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow:—Master Surecard, as I think?

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather. Gentlemen, have you provided me here half-a-dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so, so, so: yea, marry, sir:—Ralph Mouldy!—Let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so. Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Mout. Here, an't please you.

Shal. What think you, Sir John?

a good-limbed fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, an't please you. [used.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good! In faith, well said, Sir John; very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to: peace, Mouldy; you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside: know you where you are?—For the other, Sir John: let me see:—Simon Shadow!

Fal. Yea marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough; and thy father's shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male: it is often so, indeed; but much of the father's substance!

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer; prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well.—Francis Feeble!

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir?

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may: but if he had been a man's tailor, he'd ha' pricked you.—Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat?

Fee. I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse.—Prick the woman's tailor well, Master Shallow; deep, Master Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier, that is the leader of so many thousands: let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble.—Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let us see Bullcalf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again. [tain,—

Bull. O Lord! good my lord cap-

Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art pricked? [man.

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir; which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation-day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown; we will have away thy cold: and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee.—Is here all?

Shal. Here is two more called than your number; you must have but four here, sir: and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, in good troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's fields?

Fal. No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that.

Shal. Ha! 'twas a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain, she's old; and had Robin Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five year ago.

Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen! Ha, Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have: our watchword was 'Hem, boys!' Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner: Jesus, the days that we have seen! Come, come.

[Exeunt FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, and SILENCE.

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend; and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends; else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And, good Master Corporal Captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody to do any thing about her when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself: you shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fee. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once: we owe God a death: I'll ne'er bear a base mind: an't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so: no man's too good to serve his prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou'rt a good fellow.

Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, and SILENCE.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you: I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf.

Fal. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me.

Shal. Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy and Bullcalf: for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service: and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong: they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow; give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And for a retreat; how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So: very well: go to: very good, exceeding good. O, give me always a little, lean, old, chapped, bald shot. Well said, i' faith, Wart; thou'rt a good scab: hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's master; he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn,—I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show,—there was a little quiver fellow, and 'a would manage you his piece thus; and 'a would about and about, and come you in and come you in: 'rah, tah, tah,' would 'a say; 'bounce' would 'a say; and away again would 'a go, and again would 'a come: I shall ne'er see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. God keep you, Master Silence; I will not use many words with you. Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night.—Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you and prosper your affairs! God send us peace! As you return, visit our house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with you to the court.

Fal. 'Fore God, I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well.

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen.

[Exeunt SHALLOW and SILENCE.

On, Bardolph; lead the men away.

[Exeunt BARDOLPH, Recruits, etc.

As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turnbull street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when 'a was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: 'a was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible: 'a was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake: 'a came ever in the rearward of the fashion, and sung those tunes to the over-scutched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire; and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn 'a ne'er saw him but once in the Tilt-yard; and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it; and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have trussed him and all his apparel into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court: and now has he land and beeves. Well, I'll be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me: if the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Yorkshire. Gaultree Forest.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS, and Others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Host. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an't shall please your grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords; and send discoverers forth
To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.
My friends and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you that I have received
New-dated letters from Northumberland;
Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortance with his quality,
The which he could not levy; whereupon
He is retired, to ripe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland: and concludes in hearty prayers
That your attempts may overlive the hazard
And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground,
And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?
Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy;
And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number [and.
Upon or near the rate of thirty thous-

Let us sway on, and face them in the Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?
Mowb. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general, [Lancaster.
The prince, Lord John and Duke of
Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace:
What doth concern your coming?
West. Then, my lord,
Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion [routs,
Came like itself, in base and abject
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags, [gary;
And countenanced by boys and beg-

Into the harsh and boisterous tongue
Turning your books to greaves, your ink to blood, [divine
Your pens to lances, and your tongue
To a loud trumpet and a point of war?
Arch. Wherefore do I this? so the question stands.
Briefly to this end: we are all diseased,
And with our surfeiting and wanton hours [fever,
Have brought ourselves into a burning
And we must bleed for it; of which disease [died.
Our late king, Richard, being infected,
But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician;
Nor do I as an enemy to peace
Troop in the throngs of military men;
But rather show awhile like fearful war,
To diet rank minds sick of happiness
And purge the obstructions which begin to stop [plainly.
Our very veins of life. Hear me more
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer, [offences.
And find our griefs heavier than our

With yet-appearing blood, and the examples [now;
Of every minute's instance, present
Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms;
Not to break peace or any branch of it,
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

Or if there were, it not belongs to you.
Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us all [fore,
That feel the bruises of the days be-
And suffer the condition of these times
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honours?
West. O, my good Lord Mowbray,
Construe the times to their necessities,
An you shall say indeed, it is the time,
And not the king, that doth you injuries.
Yet for your part, it not appears to me,
Either from the king or in the present time, [ground
That you should have an inch of any
To build a grief on: were you not restored
To all the Duke of Norfolk's signiories,
Your noble and right well remember'd father's? [my father lost,
Mowb. What thing, in honour, had
That need to be revived and breathed in me? [stood then,
The king that loved him, as the state
Was force perforce compell'd to banish him: [he,
And then that Harry Bolingbroke and
Being mounted and both roused in their seats,
Their neighing coursers daring of the spur, [beavers down,
Their armed staves in charge, their
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel, [together;
And the loud trumpet blowing them
Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd [broke,
My father from the breast of Boling-
O, when the king did throw his warder down, [threw;
His own life hung upon the staff he
Then threw he down himself and all their lives [sword
That by indictment and by dint of
Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.
West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what,
The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman:
Who knows on whom fortune would then have smiled?
But if your father had been victor there,
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry:
For all the country in a general voice
Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers and love [on,
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted
And bless'd and graced indeed, more than the king. [purpose.
But this is mere digression from my
Here come I from our princely general
To know your griefs; to tell you from his grace [wherein
That he will give you audience; and
It shall appear that your demands are just, [off
You shall enjoy them, every thing set
That might so much as think you enemies. [pel this offer;
Mowb. But he hath forced us to com-
And it proceeds from policy, not love.
West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so; [fear:
This offer comes from mercy, not from
For, lo! within a ken our army lies;
Upon mine honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our battle is more full of names than yours, [arms,
Our men more perfect in the use of
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best; [good:
Then reason will our hearts should be as
Say you not then our offer is compell'd.
Mowb. Well, by my will, we shall admit no parley.
West. That argues but the shame of your offence:
A rotten case abides no handling.
Hast. Hath the Prince John a full commission,
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?
West. That is intended in the general's name:
I muse you make so slight a question.
Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,
For this contains our general grievances:
Each several article herein redress'd;
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinew'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form;
And present execution of our wills

To us and to our purposes consign'd;
We come within our awful banks again,
And knit our powers to the arm of peace. [Please you, lords,
West. This will I show the general.
In sight of both our battles we may meet;
And either end in peace, which God so frame! [swords
Or to the place of difference call the
Which must decide it.
Arch. My lord, we will do so. [Exit WEST.
Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me [stand.
That no conditions of our peace can
Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace
Upon such large terms and so absolute
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains. [be such Mowb. Yea, but our valuation shall
That every slight and false-derived cause, [reason
Yea, every idle, nice and wanton
Shall to the king taste of this action;
That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
And good from bad find no partition.
Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this; the king is weary
Of dainty and such picking grievances:
For he hath found to end one doubt by death
Revives two greater in the heirs of life;
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance; for full well he knows
He cannot so precisely weed this land
As his misdoubts present occasion:
His foes are so enrooted with his friends
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend:
So that this land, like an offensive wife
That hath enraged him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his intant up,
And hangs resolved correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.
Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods
On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement:
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.
Arch. 'Tis very true:
And therefore be assured, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.
Mowb. Be it so.
Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. The prince is here at hand: pleaseth your lordship
To meet his grace just distance 'tween our armies?
Mowb. Your grace of York, in God's name, then, set forward.
Arch. Before, and greet his grace: —my lord, we come.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the ARCHBISHOP, HASTINGS, and Others: from the other side, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, Officers and Attendants.

Lanc. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray:
Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop; [to all.
And so to you, Lord Hastings, and
My Lord of York, it better show'd with you [bell,
When that your flock, assembled by the
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text,
Than now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum, [to death.
Turning the word to sword, and life
That man that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would he abuse the countenance of the king, [abroach
Alack, what mischiefs might he set

In shadow of such greatness! With you, lord bishop, [spoken
It is even so. Who hath not heard it
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us the speaker in his parliament;
To us the imagined voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligencer
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven, [believe
And our dull workings. O, who shall
But you misuse the reverence of your place; [heaven;
Employ the countenance and grace of
As a false favourite doth his prince's name, [taken up,
In deeds dishonourable? You have
Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father; [and him
And both against the peace of heaven
Have here up-swarm'd them.

Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace; [land,
But, as I told my Lord of Westmore-
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense, [strous form,
Crowd us and crush us to this mon-
To hold our safety up. I sent your grace [grief;
The parcels and particulars of our

Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep [desires;
With grant of our most just and right
And true obedience, of this madness cured,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt:
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them; [born,
And so success of mischief shall be
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up
Whiles England shall have generation.

Lanc. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,
To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your grace to answer them directly
How far forth you do like their articles?

Lanc. I like them all, and do allow them well;
And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook;
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd; [please you,
Upon my soul, they shall. If this may
Discharge your powers unto their several counties, [armies
As we will ours: and here between the
Let's drink together friendly and embrace; [tokens home
That all their eyes may bear those
Of our restored love and amity.

Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.

Lanc. I give it you, and will maintain my word:
And thereupon I drink unto your grace.

Hast. Go, captain, and deliver to the army [and part:
This news of peace: let them have pay,
I know it will well please them. Hie thee, captain. [Exit Officer.

Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland.

West. I pledge your grace; and, if you knew what pains [peace,
I have bestow'd to breed this present
You would drink freely: but my love to you [after.
Shall show itself more openly here-

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.
Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray. [happy season;

Mowb. You wish me health in very
For I am, on the sudden, something ill.

Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry;
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow
Serves to say thus, 'Some good thing comes to-morrow.'

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true.

[Shouts within.

Lanc. The word of peace is render'd : hark, how they shout !

Mowb. This had been cheerful after victory. [conquest ;

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a

And let our army be discharged too. [Exit WEST.
And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains [men
March by us, that we may peruse the
We should have coped withal.

Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings,
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by. [Exit HASTINGS.

Lanc. I trust, lords, we shall lie tonight together.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still ?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand,
Will not go off until they hear you speak.

Lanc. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispersed already ; [their courses
Like youthful steers unyoked, they take
East, west, north, south ; or, like a school broke up,
Each hurries toward his home and sporting-place.

West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings ; for the which [son :
I do arrest thee, traitor, of high trea-
And you, lord archbishop, and you, Lord Mowbray,
Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable ?

West. Is your assembly so ?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith ?

Lanc. I pawn'd thee none :
I promised you redress of these same grievances
Whereof you did complain ; which, by mine honour,
I will perform with a most Christian care. [due

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir ? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray ?

Cole. I am a knight, sir ; and my name is Colevile of the dale.

Fal. Well, then, Colevile is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place, the dale : Colevile shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place,—a place deep enough ; so shall you still be Colevile of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff ?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. Do ye yield, sir ? or shall I sweat for you ? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death : therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe : my womb, my womb, my womb, undoes me. Here comes our general.

Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, BLUNT, and Others.

Lanc. The heat is past ; follow no further now :
Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland. [Exit WESTMORELAND.
Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while ? [come :
When every thing is ended, then you

These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, [back.
One time or other break some gallows'

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have foundered nine score and odd posts: and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colevile of the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded; what I may justly say, with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, 'I came, saw, and overcame.'

Lanc. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him: and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on 't, Colevile kissing my foot: to the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt twopences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble: therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

Lanc. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine, then.

Lanc. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lanc. Is thy name Colevile?

Cole. It is, my lord.

Lanc. A famous rebel art thou, Colevile. [took him.

Fal. And a famous true subject

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are [ruled by me,
That led me hither: had they been
You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves: but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Lanc. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd. [erates

Lanc. Send Colevile with his confed-
To York, to present execution:
Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure.

[Exeunt BLUNT and others with [COLEVILE.

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords:
I hear the king my father is sore sick:
Our news shall go before us to his majesty, [fort him;
Which, cousin, you shall bear to com-
And we with sober speed will follow you. [leave to go

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me
Through Gloucestershire: and, when you come to court,
Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report. [my condition,

Lanc. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

[Exeunt all except FALSTAFF.

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never any of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches: they are generally fools and cowards;—which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery and delectable shapes; which delivered o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice; but the sherris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme: it illumineth the face, which as a beacon give warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners, and inland petty spirits, muster me all to their captain, the heart; who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing, without sack; for that sets it a-work: and learning a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil, till sack commences it, and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile and bare land, manured, husbanded and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris; that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them, should be, to forswear thin potations, and to addict themselves to sack.

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph!

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, PRINCE HUMPHREY OF GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And every thing lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty
Shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester,
Where is the prince your brother?

Glou. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

Glou. I do not know, my lord.

K. Hen. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

Glou. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Cla. What would my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.
How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother?
He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas;
Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou mayst effect
Of mediation, after I am dead,
Between his greatness and thy other brethren:
Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love,
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace
By seeming cold or careless of his will;
For he is gracious, if he be observed:
He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day for melting charity:
Yet notwithstanding, being incensed, he's flint;
As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws congealed in the spring of day.
His temper, therefore, must be well observed:
Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,
When you perceive his blood inclined to mirth;
But, being moody, give him line and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,
And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends;
A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in;
That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion,—

As, force perforce, the age will pour it in,— [strong
Shall never leak, though it do work as
As aconitum or rash gunpowder.

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas?

Cla. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

K. Hen. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that?

Cla. With Poins, and other his continual followers.

K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;
And he, the noble image of my youth,
Is overspread with them: therefore my grief [death:
Stretches itself beyond the hour of
The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape
In forms imaginary the unguided days
And rotten times that you shall look upon [tors.
When I am sleeping with my ances-

When rage and hot blood are his coun-
When means and lavish manners meet together, [fly
O, with what wings shall his affections
Towards fronting peril and opposed decay! [yond him quite:

War. My gracious lord, you look be-
The prince but studies his companions
Like a strange tongue; wherein, to gain the language, [word
'Tis needful that the most immodest
Be look'd upon and learn'd; which once attain'd, [further use
Your highness knows, comes to no

The prince will in the perfectness of
Cast off his followers; and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
By which his grace must mete the lives of others,
Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb
In the dead carrion.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Who's here? Westmoreland?

West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness
Added to that that I am to deliver!
Prince John your son doth kiss your grace's hand: [and all
Mow bray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings
Are brought to the correction of your law; [sheath'd,
There is not now a rebel's sword un-
But Peace puts forth her olive every where. [borne

Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

K. Hen. O Westmoreland, thou art a summer bird, [sings
Which ever in the haunch of winter

Enter HARCOURT.

Look! here's more news.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty; [may they fall
And, when they stand against you,
As those that I am come to tell you of!
The Earl Northumberland and the Lord Bardolph, [Scots,
With a great power of English and of
Are by the Sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown:
The manner and true order of the fight
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?
Will Fortune never come with both hands full, [letters?
But write her fair words still in foulest
She either gives a stomach and no food; [a feast,
Such are the poor, in health; or else
And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,
That have abundance and enjoy it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news;
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy:
O me! come near me; now I am much ill. [Swoons.

Glou. Comfort, your majesty!

Cla. O my royal father!

West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself, look up!

War. Be patient, princes; you do know, these fits
Are with his highness very ordinary.

Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well.
Cla. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs: [mind
The incessant care and labour of his
Hath wrought the mure, that should confine it in, [break out.
So thin that life looks through and will

Unfather'd heirs and loathly birds of
The seasons change their manners, as the year [leap'd them over.

KING HENRY lying on a bed: CLARENCE, PRINCE HUMPHREY OF GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and Others, in attendance.

Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.
War. Call for the music in the other room. [pillow here.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

P. Hen. Who saw the Duke of Clarence? [ness.
Cla. I am here, brother, full of heavi-
P. Hen. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!
How doth the king?
Glou. Exceeding ill.
P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet? Tell it him.
Glou. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.
P. Hen. If he be sick with joy, he'll recover without physic.
War. Not so much noise, my lords: sweet prince, speak low;
The king your father is disposed to sleep.
Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room. [go along with us?
War. Will't please your grace to
P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.
[Exeunt all but P. HENRY.
Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?
O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide [it now!
To many a watchful night! sleep with
Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet [bound

K. Hen. Warwick! Gloucester! Clarence!

Re-enter WARWICK, GLOUCESTER! CLARENCE, and the rest.

Cla. Doth the king call ?
War. What would your majesty ? How fares your grace ?
K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords ?
Cla. We left the prince my brother here, my liege, [you.
Who undertook to sit and watch by
K. Hen. The Prince of Wales! Where is he ? let me see him :
He is not here. [this way.
War. This door is open ; he is gone
Glou. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.
K. Hen. Where is the crown ? who took it from my pillow ?
War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.
K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence : go, seek him out.
Is he so hasty that he doth suppose
My sleep my death ?
Find him, my Lord of Warwick ; chide him hither.
[Exit WARWICK.
This part of his conjoins with my disease, [things you are !
And helps to end me. See, sons, what
How quickly nature falls into revolt
When gold becomes her object !
For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep with thoughts, their brains with care,
Their bones with industry ;
For this they have engrossed and piled up [gold ;

K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away the crown ?

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY.

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me, Harry. [alone.
Depart the chamber ; leave us here
[Exeunt WARWICK and the rest.
P. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak again.
K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought :
I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair [my honours
That thou wilt needs invest thee with
Before thy hour be ripe ? O foolish youth ! [overwhelm thee.
Thou seek'st the greatness that will
Stay but a little ; for my cloud of dignity [wind
Is held from falling with so weak a
That it will quickly drop : my day is dim. [few hours,
Thou hast stolen that which, after some
Were thine without offence ; and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation :
Thy life did manifest thou lovedst me not, [it.
And thou wilt have me die assured of
Thou hidest a thousand daggers in thy thoughts, [heart,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What ! canst thou not forbear me half an hour ? [thyself,
Then get thee gone and dig my grave
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear [dead.
That thou art crowned, not that I am
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head :
Only compound me with forgotten dust;
Give that which give thee life unto the worms. [crees ;
Pluck down my officers, break my de-
For now a time is come to mock at form:
Harry the Fifth is crown'd : up, vanity !

Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors, hence! [now,
And to the English court assemble
From every region, apes of idleness!
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum: [drink, dance,
Have you a ruffian that will swear,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit [ways?
The oldest sins the newest kind of
Be happy, he will trouble you no more;
England shall double gild his treble guilt, [might;
England shall give him office, honour,
For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks [dog
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild
Shall flesh his tooth on every innocent.
O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows! [thy riots,
When that my care could not withhold
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O, thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!

P. Hen. [Kneeling.] O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears,
The moist impediments unto my speech.
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke [had heard
Ere you with grief had spoke, and I
The course of it so far. There is your crown; [tally
And He that wears the crown immor-
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more [renown,
Than as your honour and as your
Let me no more from this obedience rise, [ous spirit
Which my most true and inward dute-
Teacheth, this prostrate and exterior bending. [in,
God witness with me, when I here came
And found no course of breath within your majesty, [feign,
How cold it struck my heart! If I do
O, let me in my present wildness die,
And never live to show the incredulous world
The noble change that I have purposed!
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead, [you were,
And dead almost, my liege, to think
I spake unto this crown as having sense,
And thus upbraided it: 'The care on thee depending
Hath fed upon the body of my father;
Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold: [ous,
Other, less fine in carat, is more preci-
Preserving life in medicine potable;
But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd,
Hast eat thy bearer up.' Thus, my most royal liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head;
To try with it, as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

K. Hen. O my son,
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou mightst win the more thy father's love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it!
Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed; [sel
And hear, I think, the very latest coun-
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son, [ways
By what by-paths and indirect crook'd
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it sat upon my head.
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me [ous hand;
But as an honour snatch'd with boister-
And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed, [bold fears
Wounding supposed peace: all these
Thou seest with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene [death
Acting that argument; and now my
Changes the mode; for what in me was purchased,
Falls upon thee in a most fairer sort;

So thou the garland wear'st successively. [than I could do,
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green ; [make thy friends,
And all my friends, which thou must
Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out ; [vanced
By whose fell working I was first ad-
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displaced : which to avoid,
I cut them off, and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land ;
Lest rest and lying still might make them look [my Harry,
Too near unto my state. Therefore,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels ; that action, hence borne out, [days.
May waste the memory of the former
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so [me.
That strength of speech is utterly denied
How I came by the crown, O God forgive ; [peace live !
And grant it may with thee in true
P. Hen. My gracious liege, [me ;
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it
Then plain and right must my possession be : [mon pain
Which I with more than with a com-
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER.

K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.
Lanc. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father !
K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John ;
But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown [thy sight
From this bare wither'd trunk : upon
My worldly business makes a period.
Where is my Lord of Warwick ?
P. Hen. My Lord of Warwick !

Re-enter WARWICK, and Others.

K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong [swoon ?
Unto the lodging where I first did
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord. [my life must end.
K. Hen. Laud be to God ! even there
It hath been prophesied to me many years,
I should not die but in Jerusalem ;
Which vainly I supposed the Holy Land :
But bear me to that chamber ; there I'll lie ;
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Gloucestershire. SHALLOW'S House.

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night.—What, Davy, I say !
Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow.
Shal. I will not excuse you ; you shall not be excused ; excuses shall not be admitted ; there is no excuse shall serve ; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy !

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.
Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see, Davy ; let me see : yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.
Davy. Marry, sir, thus ; those precepts cannot be served : and, again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat ?
Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook : are there no young pigeons ?
Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons.
Shal. Let it be cast and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused.
Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had : and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair ?
Shal. A shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook. [night, sir ?
Davy. Doth the man of war stay all Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well : a friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are backbitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen. [thy business, Davy.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy: about

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit DAVY.] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots. —Give me your hand, Master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph: [To the Page] and welcome, my tall fellow. Come, Sir John. [Robert Shallow.

Fal. I'll follow you, good Master

[Exit SHALLOW.

Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt BARD. and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermits' staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing of him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man: their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, which is four terms, or two actions, and he shall laugh without intervallums. O, it is much that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up!

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Fal. I come, Master Shallow; I come, Master Shallow. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Westminster. The Palace.

Enter WARWICK, and the Lord Chief Justice.

War. How now, my lord chief justice! whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature;
And, to our purposes, he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me with him:
The service that I truly did his life
Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed I think the young king loves you not. [arm myself

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do
To welcome the condition of the time;
Which cannot look more hideously upon me
Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter LANCASTER, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WESTMORELAND, and Others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry:
O that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen! [their places,
How many nobles then should hold
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort! [overturn'd.

Ch. Just. O God! I fear all will be

Lanc. Good-morrow, cousin Warwick, good-morrow.

Glou. } Good-morrow, cousin.
Cla. }

Lanc. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

Lanc. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier! [a friend indeed;

Glou. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed;
And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow; it is sure your own.

Lanc. Though no man be assured what grace to find,
You stand in coldest expectation:
I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise [John Falstaff fair;

Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair;
Which swims against your stream of quality. [did in honour,

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,
Led by the impartial conduct of my soul; [beg
And never shall you see that I will beg
A ragged and forestall'd remission.
If truth and upright innocency fail me,
I'll to the king my master that is dead,
And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH, attended.

Ch. Just. Good-morrow; and God save your majesty!

King. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,
Sits not so easy on me as you think.
Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear: [court;
This is the English, not the Turkish
Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers, [you:
For, by my faith, it very well becomes
Sorrow so royally in you appears
That I will deeply put the fashion on,
And wear it in my heart: why then, be sad; [brothers,
But entertain no more of it, good
Than a joint burden laid upon us all.
For me, by heaven, I bid you be assured,
I'll be your father and your brother [too;
Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares: [will I;
Yet weep that Harry's dead; and so
But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears
By number into hours of happiness.

Princes. We hope no other from your majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me: [To the Chief Justice] and you most;
You are, I think, assured I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assured, if I be measured rightly, [hate me.
Your majesty hath no just cause to

King. No! [forget
How might a prince of my great hopes
So great indignities you laid upon me?
What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison [this easy?
The immediate heir of England! Was
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten? [of your father;

Ch. Just. I then did use the person
The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law,
Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth, [place,
Your highness pleased to forget my
The majesty and power of law and justice, [sented,
The image of the king whom I pre-
And struck me in my very seat of judgment;
Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill, [garland,
Be you contented, wearing now the
To have a son set your decrees at nought; [bench;
To pluck down justice from your awful
To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword [person;
That guards the peace and safety of your
Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image, [body.
And mock your workings in a second
Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours;
Be now the father, and propose a son;
Hear your own dignity so much profaned, [slighted,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely
Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd;

And then imagine me taking your part,
And in your power soft silencing your son:
After this cold considerance, sentence me;
And, as you are a king, speak in your state
What I have done that misbecame my place,
My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

King. You are right, justice, and you weigh this well;
Therefore still bear the balance and the sword:
And I do wish your honours may increase,
Till you do live to see a son of mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I live to speak my father's words:
'Happy am I, that have a man so bold,
That dares do justice on my proper son;
And not less happy, having such a son,
That would deliver up his greatness so
Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me:
For which, I do commit into your hand
The unstain'd sword that you have used to bear;
With this remembrance, that you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit
As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand.
You shall be as a father to my youth:
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear;
And I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well-practised wise directions.
And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;
My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my affections;
And with his spirit sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the world;
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:
Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods,
And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
Now call we our high court of parliament:
And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go
In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
That war, or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us;
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.
Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember'd, all our state:
And, God consigning to my good intents,
No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry's happy life one day!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Gloucestershire. SHALLOW'S Orchard.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, BARDOLPH, the Page, and DAVY.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard; where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own graffing, with a dish of caraways, and so forth:—come, cousin Silence:—and then to bed.

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John: marry, good air. Spread, Davy; spread, Davy: well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John: by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper: a good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down: come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth-a, we shall [Singing.

'Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer
And praise heaven for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there
So merrily,
And ever among so merrily.'

Fal. There's a merry heart! Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon. [wine, Davy.

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; [Seating BARDOLPH and the Page at another table.] I'll be with you anon; most sweet sir, sit. Master page, good master page, sit. Proface! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink: but you must bear; the heart's all. [Exit.

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; and, my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. [Singing.]

'Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;
For women are shrews, both short and tall:
'Tis merry in hall when beards wag all,
And welcome merry Shrove-tide.
Be merry, be merry, etc.'

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. There's a dish of leather-coats for you. [Setting them before BARDOLPH.

Shal. Davy!

Davy. Your worship! [To BARD.] I'll be with you straight.—A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. [Singing.]

'A cup of wine that's brisk and fine,
And drink unto the leman mine;
And a merry heart lives long-a.'

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master Silence.

Sil. [Singing.]

'Fill the cup, and let it come;
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.'

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou wantest any thing, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. [To the Page] Welcome, my little tiny thief; and welcome indeed, too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph, and to all the cavaleros about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die. [Davy,—

Bard. An I might see you there,

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together, ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. By god's liggens, I thank thee. the knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that. 'A will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing: be merry. [Knocking within.] Look who's at door there, ho! who knocks? [Exit DAVY.

Fal. [To SILENCE, who drinks a bumper.] Why, now you have done me right.

Sil. [Singing.]

'Do me right
And dub me knight:
Samings.'

Is't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why then, say an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. An't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news. [in.

Fal. From the court! let him come

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol!

Pist. God save you, Sir John!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol? [no man to good.

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think 'a be, but goodman Puff of Barson.

Pist. Puff! [ard base!
Puff in thy teeth, most recreant cow-
Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend,
And helter-skelter have I rode to thee;
And tidings do I bring and lucky joys
And golden times and happy news of price.

Fal. I prithee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A foutre for the world and worldlings base!
I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? [thereof.
Let King Cophetua know the truth

Sil. [Singing.]

'And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.'

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?
And shall good news be baffled? [lap.
Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies'

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir: if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways; either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority. [speak, or die.

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian?

Shal. Under King Harry.
Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?
Shal. Harry the Fourth.
Pist. A foutre for thine office!
Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king; [the truth:
Harry the Fifth 's the man. I speak
When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like
The bragging Spaniard.
Fal. What! is the old king dead?
Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just.
Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse.—Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.
Bard. O joyful day! [fortune.
I would not take a knighthood for my
Pist. What! I do bring good news?
Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow,—be what thou wilt; I am Fortune's steward—get on thy boots: we'll ride all night.—O, sweet Pistol!—Away, Bardolph! [Exit BARD.] Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and, withal, devise something to do thyself good.—Boot, boot, Master Shallow: I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Blessed are they which have been my friends; and woe to my lord chief justice!
Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also! [they:
'Where is the life that late I led?' say
Why, here it is; welcome these pleasant days! [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. A Street.

Enter Beadles, dragging in Hostess QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Host. No, thou arrant knave; I would to God that I might die, that I might have thee hanged: thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.
First Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me; and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her.
Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on; I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal; an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain!
Host. O the Lord, that Sir John were come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!
First Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat amongst you.
Dol. I'll tell thee what, thou thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swinged for this,—you bluebottle rogue! you filthy famished correctioner! if you be not swinged, I'll forswear half-kirtles.
First Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.
Host. O God, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease. [me to a justice.
Dol. Come, you rogue, come; bring
Host. Ay, come, you starved bloodhound! [bones!
Dol. Goodman death! goodman
Host. Thou atomy, thou!
Dol. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal!
First Bead. Very well. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A public place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter Two Grooms, strewing Rushes.

First Groom. More rushes, more rushes! [sounded twice.
Sec. Groom. The trumpets have
First Groom. 'Twill be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation: dispatch, dispatch. [Exeunt.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and the Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace: I will leer upon him, as 'a comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.
Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.
Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me. [To SHALLOW] O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection,—

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion,—

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me,—

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis 'semper idem,' for 'absque hoc nihil est': 'tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,
And make thee rage.
Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts,
Is in base durance and contagious prison;
Haled thither
By most mechanical and dirty hand:
Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Alecto's snake,
For Doll is in: Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

[Shouts within, and the trumpets sound.

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangour sounds.

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH and his Train, the Lord Chief Justice among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hal!

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy!

King. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak? [to thee, my heart!

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak

King. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers; [jester!
How ill white hairs become a fool and I have long dream'd of such a kind of man, [fane;
So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so pro-
But, being awaked, I do despise my dream. [thy grace;
Make less thy body hence, and more
Leave gormandizing; know the grave doth gape [men.
For thee thrice wider than for other
Reply not to me with a fool-born jest:
Presume not that I am the thing I was;
For God doth know, so shall the world perceive, [self;
That I have turn'd away my former
So will I those that kept me company.
When thou dost hear I am as I have been, [thou wast,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as
The tutor and the feeder of my riots:
Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death, [leaders,
As I have done the rest of my mis-

EPILOGUE.

SPOKEN BY A DANCER.

First my fear; then my courtesy; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure; my courtesy, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me: for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what indeed I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you, as it is very well, I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I did mean indeed to pay you with this; which, if like an ill venture it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some and I will pay you some, and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me: if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for any thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already 'a be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you; that self bill is urged,
Which in the eleventh year o' the last king's reign — [pass'd,
Was like, and had indeed against us
But that the scambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.
Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?
Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us, [sion:
We lose the better half of our possessions
For all the temporal lands which men devout

Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the river Sala, in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say,

That fair Queen Isabel, his grand-
Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare,
Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Lorraine:
By the which marriage the line of Charles the Great
Was re-united to the crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female:
So do the kings of France unto this day;
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law [the female;
To bar your highness claiming from
And rather choose to hide them in a net
Than amply to imbar their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

For in the Book of Numbers is it writ,
When the son dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord, [bloody flag;

Cant. O, let their bodies follow, my dear liege, [your right
With blood and sword and fire to win
In aid whereof we of the spiritualty

Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.
K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the French,
But lay down our proportions to defend
Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.
Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign,
Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.
K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force;
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays;
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook and trembled at the ill neighbourhood.
Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege;
For hear her but exampled by herself:
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended
But taken and impounded as a stray
The King of Scots; whom she did send to France,
To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings
And make her chronicle as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sumless treasuries.
West. But there's a saying very old and true,
'If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin:'
For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs;
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,
To tear and havoc more than she can eat.
Exe. It follows then the cat must stay at home:
Yet that is but a crush'd necessity;
Since we have locks to safeguard necessaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
The advised head defends itself at home;
For government, though high and low and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one consent;
Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like music.
Cant. True: therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience: for so work the honey-bees;
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king, and officers of sorts;
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor;
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold;
The civil citizens kneading up the honey;
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate;
The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,
That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously:
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Fly to one mark;
As many several ways meet in one town;
As many fresh streams run in one self sea;
As many lines close in the dial's centre;
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege.

Divide your happy England into four;
Whereof take you one quarter into France, [shake.
And you withal shall make all Gallia

Cannot defend our own doors from the
Let us be worried, and our nation lose

SCENE I.—London. Eastcheap.

Enter NYM and BARDOLPH.

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good-morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little; but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles; but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink, and hold out mine iron: it is a simple one; but what though? it will toast cheese; and it will endure cold as another man's sword will: and there's the humour of it.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France: let it be so, good Corporal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly: and, certainly, she did you wrong; for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell: things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may: though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter PISTOL and Hostess.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife: good corporal, be patient here.—How now, mine host Pistol!

Pist. Base tike, call'st thou me host?
Now, by this hand I swear, I scorn the term;
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Host. No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. [NYM draws his sword.] O well-a-day, Lady! if he be not drawn: now we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed. Good lieutenant! good corporal! offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog! thou prick-ear'd cur of Iceland!

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show the valour of a man, and put up thy sword. [have you solus.

Nym. Will you shog off?—I would [Sheathing his sword.

Pist. 'Solus,' egregious dog? O viper vile! [face;
The 'solus' in thy most mervailous
The 'solus' in thy teeth, and in thy throat, [maw, perdy,
And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy
And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth!
I do retort the 'solus' in thy bowels;
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason; you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may; and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggart vile and damned furious wight!
The grave doth gape, and doting death is near;
Therefore exhale. [They both draw.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.

Pist. An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate. [give:
Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me
Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms: that is the humour of it.

Pist. 'Coupe la gorge!'
That is the word. I thee defy again.
O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?
No; to the spital go, [famy
And from the powdering-tub of in-
Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind, [espouse:
Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her
I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly [enough.
For the only she; and—pauca, there's

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master,—and you, hostess: he is very sick, and would to bed.

Good Bardolph, put thy nose between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan. Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue!

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days. The king has killed his heart.—Good husband, come home presently.

[Exeunt Hostess and Boy.

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together: why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have: that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push home. [They both draw.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will. [Draws.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why, then, be enemies with me too. Prithee, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay;
And liquor likewise will I give to thee,
And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood: [by me;
I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live
Is not this just? for I shall sutler be
Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.
Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. Well, then, that's the humour of it.

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shaked of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight; that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right;
His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king: but it must be as it may; he passes some humours and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lambkins, we will live.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Southampton. A Council-Chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold, to trust these traitors. [and by.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves!
As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
Crowned with faith and constant loyalty. [they intend,

Bed. The king hath note of all that
By interception which they dream not of. [bedfellow,

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his
Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours, [sell
That he should, for a foreign purse, so
His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, Lords, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard.
My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masham,
And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts: [with us
Think you not that the powers we bear
Will cut their passage through the force of France;
Doing the execution and the act
For which we have in head assembled them? [man do his best.

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each

K. Hen. I doubt not that; since we are well persuaded [hence
We carry not a heart with us from
That grows not in a fair consent with ours; [wish
Nor leave not one behind that doth not
Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and loved

Than is your majesty: there's not, I think, a subject
That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness
Under the sweet shade of your government. [father's enemies
Grey. Even those that were your
Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do serve you
With hearts create of duty and of zeal.
K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness;
And shall forget the office of our hand,
Sooner than quittance of desert and merit [ness.
According to the weight and worthi-
Scroop. So service shall with steeled sinews toil; [hope,
And labour shall refresh itself with
To do your grace incessant services.
K. Hen. We judge no less. Uncle of Exeter,
Enlarge the man committed yesterday,
That rail'd against our person: we consider
It was excess of wine that set him on;
And on his more advice we pardon him.
Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security: [example
Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest
Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.
K. Hen. O, let us yet be merciful.
Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too.
Grey. Sir, [life,
You show great mercy, if you give him
After the taste of much correction.
K. Hen. Alas, your too much love and care of me [wretch!
Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor
If little faults, proceeding on distemper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye
When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd and digested, [that man,
Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge
Though Cambridge, Scroop and Grey, in their dear care
And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes:
Who are the late commissioners?
Cam. I one, my lord: [day,
Your highness bade me ask for it to-
Scroop. So did you me, my liege.
Grey. And me, my royal sovereign.
K. Hen. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge, there is yours;
There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham; and, sir knight,
Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours: [worthiness.
Read them; and know, I know your
My Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter,
We will aboard to-night.—Why, how now, gentlemen! [lose
What see you in those papers, that you
So much complexion?—Look ye, how they change! [read you there,
Their cheeks are paper.—Why, what
That hath so cowarded and chased your blood
Out of appearance?
Cam. I do confess my fault;
And do submit me to your highness' mercy.
Grey. } To which we all appeal.
Scroop. }
K. Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but late, [kill'd:
By your own counsel is suppress'd and
You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy; [bosoms,
For your own reasons turn into your
As dogs upon their masters, worrying you. [peers,
See you, my princes and my noble
These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here, [accord
You know how apt our love was to
To furnish him with all appertinents
Belonging to his honour; and this man [conspired,
Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly
And sworn unto the practices of France,
To kill us here in Hampton: to the which
This knight, no less for bounty bound to us [sworn. But, O,
Than Cambridge is, hath likewise
What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop? thou cruel, [ture!
Ingrateful, savage and inhuman crea-
Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels, [soul,
That knew'st the very bottom of my
That almost mightst have coin'd me into gold, [thy use,
Wouldst thou have practised on me for
May it be possible, that foreign hire
Could out of thee extract one spark of evil

That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange,
That, though the truth of it stands off as gross [scarcely see it.
As black from white, my eye will
Treason and murder ever kept together, [purpose,
As two yoke-devils sworn to either's
Working so grossly in a natural cause,
That admiration did not whoop at them: [bring in
But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst
Wonder to wait on treason and on murder:
And whatsoever cunning fiend it was
That wrought upon thee so preposterously [lence:
Hath got the voice in hell for excel-
All other devils that suggest by treasons
Do botch and bungle up damnation
With patches, colours, and with forms being fetch'd
From glistering semblances of piety;
But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up,
Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason, [traitor.
Unless to dub thee with the name of
If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus [world,
Should with his lion gait walk the whole
He might return to vasty Tartar back,
And tell the legions 'I can never win
A soul so easy as that Englishman's.'
O, how hast thou with jealousy infected
The sweetness of affiance! Show men dutiful?
Why, so didst thou: seem they grave and learned? [family?
Why, so didst thou: come they of noble
Why, so didst thou: seem they religious? [in diet,
Why, so didst thou: or are they spare
Free from gross passion or of mirth or anger, [the blood,
Constant in spirit, not swerving with
Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement, [fear,
Not working with the eye without the
And but in purged judgment trusting neither? [seem:
Such and so finely bolted didst thou
And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot, [indued
To mark the full-fraught man and best
With some suspicion. I will weep for thee; [like
For this revolt of thine, methinks, is
Another fall of man.—Their faults are open:
Arrest them to the answer of the law;
And God acquit them of their practices!

Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland.

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd; [death;
And I repent my fault more than my
Which I beseech your highness to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the gold of France did not seduce;
Although I did admit it as a motive,
The sooner to effect what I intended:
But God be thanked for prevention;
Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice, [me.
Beseeching God and you to pardon

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice [treason
At the discovery of most dangerous
Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
Prevented from a damned enterprise:
My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.
You have conspired against our royal person, [from his coffers
Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and
Received the golden earnest of our death; [king to slaughter,
Wherein you would have sold your
His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt, [tion.
And his whole kingdom into desola-
Touching our person, seek we no revenge; [tender,
But we our kingdom's safety must so
Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws [hence,
We do deliver you. Get you therefore
Poor miserable wretches, to your death:
The taste whereof, God of his mercy give

You patience to endure, and true repentance
Of all your dear offences!—Bear them hence.
[Exeunt CAMBRIDGE, SCROOP, and GREY, guarded.
Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.
We doubt not of a fair and lucky war,
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous treason lurking in our way
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now
But every rub is smoothed on our way.
Then forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver
Our puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Cheerly to sea; the signs of war advance:
No King of England, if not King of France. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—London. Before a Tavern in Eastcheap.

Enter PISTOL, Hostess, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Host. Prithee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.
Bardolph, be blithe: Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins:
Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is dead,
And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell!

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end, and went away an it had been any christom child; 'a parted even just between twelve and one, e'en at turning o' the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and 'a babbled of green fields. 'How now, Sir John!' quoth I; 'what, man! be o' good cheer.' So 'a cried out 'God, God, God!' three or four times. Now I, to comfort him, bid him 'a should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that 'a did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that 'a did not.

Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said they were devils incarnate.

Host. 'A could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never liked.

Boy. 'A said once, the devil would have him about women.

Host. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell-fire?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintained that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? The king will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy lips.
Look to my chattels and my moveables: [and Pay:'
Let senses rule; the word is 'Pitch
Trust none; [wafer-cakes,
For oaths are straws, men's faiths are
And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck:
Therefore, Caveto be thy counsellor.
Go, clear thy crystals.—Yoke-fellows in arms,
Let us to France! like horse-leeches, [my boys;
To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck! [food, they say.

Boy. And that is but unwholesome

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but, adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close, I thee command.

Host. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—France. The FRENCH KING'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter the FRENCH KING attended; the DAUPHIN, the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, the Constable of France, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus comes the English with full power upon us;
And more than carefully it us concerns
To answer royally in our defences.
Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Bretagne, [forth,
Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make
And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch, [war
To line and new repair our towns of
With men of courage and with means defendant; [fierce
For England his approaches makes as
As waters to the sucking of a gulf.
It fits us then to be as provident
As fear may teach us out of late examples [lish
Left by the fatal and neglected Eng-
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe; [kingdom,
For peace itself should not so dull a
Though war nor no known quarrel were in question, [tions,
But that defences, musters, prepara-
Should be maintain'd, assembled and collected,
As were a war in expectation.
Therefore, I say 'tis meet we all go forth [France:
To view the sick and feeble parts of
And let us do it with no show of fear;
No, with no more than if we heard that England [dance:
Were busied with a Whitsun morris-
For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
Her sceptre so fantastically borne
By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,
That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king:
Question your grace the late ambassadors, [embassy,
With what great state he heard their
How well supplied with noble counsellors,
How modest in exception, and withal
How terrible in constant resolution,
And you shall find his vanities forespent [Brutus,
Were but the outside of the Roman
Covering discretion with a coat of folly;
As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots [cate.
That shall first spring and be most deli-

Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high constable; [ter:
But though we think it so, it is no mat-
In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems:
So the proportions of defence are fill'd;
Which, of a weak and niggardly projection, [scanting
Doth, like a miser, spoil his coat with
A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we King Harry strong; [meet him.
And, princes, look you strongly arm to
The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us; [strain
And he is bred out of that bloody
That haunted us in our familiar paths:
Witness our too much memorable shame
When Cressy battle fatally was struck,
And all our princes captived by the hand [Prince of Wales;
Of that black name, Edward, Black
Whiles that his mountain sire, on mountain standing, [sun,
Up in the air, crown'd with the golden
Saw his heroical seed, and smiled to see him,
Mangle the work of nature, and deface
The patterns that by God and by French fathers [is a stem
Had twenty years been made. This
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England
Do crave admittance to your majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present audience. Go, and bring them. [Exeunt Mess. and certain Lords.
You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends.

Dau. Turn head, and stop pursuit; for coward dogs

Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten Runs far before them. Good my sovereign, [them know
Take up the English short; and let
Of what a monarchy you are the head:
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with EXETER and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother England?

Exe. From him; and thus he greets your majesty. [mighty,
He wills you, in the name of God Al-
That you divest yourself, and lay apart
The borrow'd glories that by gift of heaven,
By law of nature and of nations, 'long
To him and to his heirs; namely, the crown [pertain,
And all wide-stretched honours that
By custom and the ordinance of times,
Unto the crown of France. That you may know
'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim,
Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd days,
Nor from the dust of old oblivion raked,
He sends you this most memorable line, [Gives a paper.
In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you overlook this pedigree:
And when you find him evenly derived
From his most famed of famous ancestors, [resign
Edward the Third, he bids you then
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held [ger.
From him the native and true challen-

Fr. King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown [for it:
Even in your hearts, there will he rake
And therefore in fierce tempest is he coming, [Jove;
In thunder and in earthquake, like a
That, if requiring fail, he will compel;
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
On the poor souls for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head [phans' cries,
Turns he the widows' tears, the orThe dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans, [lovers,
For husbands, fathers and betrothed
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy. [my message;
This is his claim, his threatening and
Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further: [tent
To-morrow shall you bear our full in-
Back to our brother England.

Dau. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England?

Exe. Scorn and defiance; slight regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not misbecome [at.
The mighty sender, doth he prize you
Thus says my king; an if your father's highness [large,
Do not, in grant of all demands at
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer for it,
That caves and womby vaultages of France [your mock
Shall chide your trespass, and return
In second accent of his ordnance.

Dau. Say, if my father render fair reply,
It is against my will; for I desire
Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity,
I did present him with those Paris balls. [shake for it,

Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre
Were it the mistress-court of mighty Europe:
And, be assured, you'll find a difference,
As we, his subjects, have in wonder found, [days
Between the promise of his greener
And these he masters now: now he weighs time [shall read
Even to the utmost grain: which you
In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full.

Exe. Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our king [delay;
Come here himself to question our
For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions:

A night is but small breath and little pause
To answer matters of this consequence.
[Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT III.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Thus with imagined wing our swift scene flies,
In motion of no less celerity
Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen [pier
The well-appointed king at Hampton
Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet [bus fanning:
With silken streamers the young Phœ-
Play with your fancies, and in them behold [climbing;
Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys
Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give [den sails,
To sounds confused; behold the threa-
Borne with the invisible and creeping wind, [furrow'd sea,
Draw the huge bottoms through the Breasting the lofty surge: O, do but think
You stand upon the rivage and behold
A city on the inconstant billows dancing;
For so appears this fleet majestical,
Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow! [navy;
Grapple your minds to sternage of this
And leave your England, as dead midnight still, [women,
Guarded with grandsires, babies and old
Either past or not arrived to pith and puissance; [rich'd
For who is he, whose chin is but en-
With one appearing hair, that will not follow [to France?
These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers
Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege;
Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.
Suppose the ambassador from the French comes back;
Tells Harry that the king doth offer him [to dowry,
Katharine his daughter; and with her,
Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
The offer likes not: and the nimble gunner [touches,
With linstock now the devilish cannon
[Alarum, and chambers go off.
And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eke out our performance with your mind. [Exit.

SCENE I.—France. Before Harfleur.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers, with scaling-ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;
Or close the wall up with our English dead! [man
In peace there's nothing so becomes a
As modest stillness and humility:
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood, [rage;
Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head [o'erwhelm it
Like the brass cannon; let the brow
As fearfully as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base, [ocean.
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful
Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide; [every spirit
Hold hard the breath, and bend up
To his full height! On, on, you noblest English, [proof!
Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-
Fathers that, like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from morn till even fought, [argument:
And sheathed their swords for lack of
Dishonour not your mothers; now attest [beget you!
That those whom you call'd fathers did
Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
And teach them how to war! And you, good yeomen, [show us here
Whose limbs were made in England,
The mettle of your pasture; let us swear [which I doubt not;
That you are worth your breeding;
For there is none of you so mean and base,
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.

I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game's afoot:
Follow your spirit, and upon this charge
Cry 'God for Harry, England, and Saint George!'
Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay: the knocks are too hot; and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives: the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it.

Pist. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound:

'Knocks go and come; God's vassals drop and die;
And sword and shield,
In bloody field,
Doth win immortal fame.'

Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

Pist. And I:

'If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I hie.'

Boy.

'As duly,
But not as truly,
As bird doth sing on bough.'

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Got's plood! Up to the preaches, you rascals! will you not up to the preaches?

Driving them forward.

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould!
Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage;
Abate thy rage, great duke!
Good bawcock, bate thy rage! use lenity, sweet chuck!

Nym. These be good humours! your honour wins bad humours.

Exeunt all but Boy.

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am boy to them all three: but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for indeed three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, he is white-livered and red-faced; by the means whereof 'a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword; by the means whereof 'a breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest 'a should be thought a coward: but his few bad words are matched with as few good deeds; for 'a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal anything, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three half-pence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers: which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villany goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. Exit.

Re-enter FLUELLEN, GOWER following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines; the Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke, it is not so good to come to the mines; for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war: the concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th' athversary, you may discuss unto the duke, look you, is digt himself four yard under the countermines: by Cheshu, I think 'a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman; a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the 'orld: I will verify as much in his peard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter MACMORRIS and JAMY, at a distance.

Gow. Here 'a comes; and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition and knowledge in th' aunchient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the 'orld, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say gud-day, Captain Fluellen. [Captain Jamy.

Flu. God-den to your worship, goot

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given o'er?

Mac. By Chrish, la! tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and by my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la! in an hour: O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I peseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly, to satisfy my opinion, and partly, for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline; that is the point.

Jamy. It sall be vary gud, gud feith, gud captains bath: and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet calls us to the breach; and we talk, and, by Chrish, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all: so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand: and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done; and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la!

Jamy. By the mess, ere theise eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, ay'll de gud service, or ay'll lig i' the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and ay'll pay't as valorously as I may, that sall I surely do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain hear some question 'tween you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

Mac. Of my nation! what ish my nation? Ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal? What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation?

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as goot a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head.

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. A! that's a foul fault.

[A Parley sounded.

Gow. The town sounds a parley.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Gates.

The Governor and some Citizens on the walls; the English Forces below. Enter KING HENRY and his Train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?
This is the latest parle we will admit:
Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves;
Or like to men proud of destruction
Defy us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier, [me best,
A name that in my thoughts becomes

If I begin the battery once again,
I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur
Till in her ashes she lie buried.
The gates of mercy shall be all shut up,
And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,
In liberty of bloody hand shall range
With conscience wide as hell; mowing like grass
Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants.
What is it then to me, if impious war,
Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends,
Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats
Enlink'd to waste and desolation?
What is 't to me, when you yourselves are cause,
If your pure maidens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing violation?
What rein can hold licentious wickedness
When down the hill he holds his fierce career?
We may as bootless spend our vain command
Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil
As send precepts to the leviathan
To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur,
Take pity of your town and of your people,
Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command;
Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace
O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds
Of deadly murder, spoil, and villany.
If not, why, in a moment look to see
The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand
Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;
Your fathers taken by the silver beards,
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;
Your naked infants spitted upon pikes,
Whiles the mad mothers with their howls confused
Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry
At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.
What say you? will you yield, and this avoid?
Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The Dauphin, whom of succour we entreated,
Returns us that his powers are yet not ready
To raise so great a siege. Therefore, dreadful king,
We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy.
Enter our gates; dispose of us and ours;
For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates.—Come, uncle Exeter,
Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain,
And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French:
Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,
The winter coming on, and sickness growing
Upon our soldiers, we'll retire to Calais.
To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest;
To-morrow for the march are we addrest.

[Flourish. K. HEN. and his Train enter the Town.

SCENE IV.—Rouen. The FRENCH KING'S Palace.

Enter KATHARINE and ALICE.

Kath. Alice, tu as été en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseignez; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez-vous la main en Anglois?

Alice. La main? elle est appelée de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? ma foi, j'oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts? je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingres; oui, de fingres.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon écolier. J'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglois vitement. Comment appelez-vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles? nous les appelons de nails.

Kath. De nails. Écoutez; dites-moi, si je parle bien: de hand, de fingres, de nails.

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon Anglois.

Kath. Dites-moi l'Anglois pour le bras.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude?

Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez-moi, Alice; écoutez; de hand, de fingres, de nails, de arma, de bilbow.

Alice. De elbow, madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu! je m'en oublie; de elbow. Comment appelez-vous le col?

Alice. De neck, madame.

Kath. De nick. Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick; le menton, de sin.

Alice. Oui. Sauf votre honneur, en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre, par la grace de Dieu; et en peu de temps.

Alice. N'avez-vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ai enseigné?

Kath. Non, je reciterai à vous promptement: de hand, de fingres, de mails,—

Alice. De nails, madame.

Kath. De nails, de arm, de ilbow.

Alice. Sauf votre honneur, de elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis-je;—de elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez-vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. De foot, madame; et de coun.

Kath. De foot et de coun! O Seigneur Dieu! ce sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user: je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France pour tout le monde. Foh! de foot et de coun. Néanmoins, je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: de hand, de fingres, de nails, de arm, de elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, de coun.

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois: allons-nous à diner. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same.

Enter the FRENCH KING, the DAUPHIN, the DUKE OF BOURBON, the Constable of France, and Others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,
Let us not live in France; let us quit all,
And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dau. O Dieu vivant! shall a few sprays of us,
The emptying of our fathers' luxury,
Our scions, put in wild and savage stock,
Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds,
And overlook their grafters?

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards!
Mort de ma vie! if they march along
Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom,
To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm
In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle? [dull?
Is not their climate foggy, raw, and
On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, [sodden water,
Killing their fruit with frowns? Can
A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley broth, [heat?
Decoct their cold blood to such valiant
And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine, [land,
Seem frosty? O, for honour of our
Let us not hang like roping icicles
Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people [fields!—
Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich
Poor we may call them in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honour, [say
Our madams mock at us, and plainly
Our mettle is bred out, and they will give [youth
Their bodies to the lust of English
To new-store France with bastard warriors. [dancing-schools,

Bour. They bid us to the English
And teach lavoltas high and swift corantos;
Saying our grace is only in our heels,
And that we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy, the herald? speed him hence:
Let him greet England with our sharp defiance. [edged
Up, princes! and, with spirit of honour
More sharper than your swords, hie to the field:
Charles Delabreth, high constable of France;
You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri,
Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;
Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,

Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg,
Foix, Lestrale, Bouciqualt, and Charolois; [lords and knights,
High dukes, great princes, barons,
For your great seats now quit you of great shames, [our land
Bar Harry England, that sweeps through
With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur:
Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow [seat
Upon the valleys; whose low vassal
The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon: [enough,—
Go down upon him,—you have power
And in a captive chariot into Rouen
Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great.
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His soldiers sick, and famish'd in their march; [army,
For I am sure, when he shall see our
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear [som.
And for achievement offer us his ran-

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy, [send
And let him say to England that we
To know what willing ransom he will give. [in Rouen.
Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty. [remain with us.

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall
Now forth, lord constable and princes all,
And quickly bring us word of England's fall. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The English Camp in Picardy.

Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN, meeting.

Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the pridge.

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my livings, and my uttermost powers: he is not—Got be praised and plessed!—any hurt in the 'orld; but keeps the pridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient lieutenant there at the pridge,—I think in my very conscience he is as valiant as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the 'orld; but I did see him do gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called Aunchient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours: [well.
The Duke of Exeter doth love thee

Flu. Ay, I praise Got; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of heart,
Of buxom valour, hath, by cruel fate,
And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel,
That goddess blind,
That stands upon the rolling restless stone—

Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol. Fortune is painted plind, with a muffler before her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is plind; and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and variations, and mutabilities: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls: in good truth, the poet is make a most excellent description of Fortune: Fortune, look you, is an excellent moral.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him; [must 'a be:
For he hath stolen a pix, and hanged
A damned death!
Let gallows gape for dog; let man go free, [cate:
And let not hemp his windpipe suffo-
But Exeter hath given the doom of death
For pix of little price.
Therefore, go speak; the duke will hear thy voice; [be cut
And let not Bardolph's vital thread
With edge of penny cord and vile reproach: [thee requite.
Speak, captain, for his life, and I will

Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at: for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his goot pleasure, and put him to executions; for disciplines ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd! and figo for thy friendship!

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit.

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal; I remember him now; a bawd, a cutpurse.

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a uttered as prave 'ords at the pridge as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue; that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in great commanders' names: and they will learn you by rote where services were done; at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on; and this they con perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths: and what a beard of the general's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on! But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower; I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the 'orld he is: if I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.] Hark you, the king is coming, and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

Flu. Got pless your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen! camest thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the pridge: the French is gone off, look you; and there is gallant and most prave passages: marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pridge; but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge: I can tell your majesty, the duke is a prave man. [Fluellen?

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' athversary hath been very great, very reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church, one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all bubukles, and whelks, and knobs, and flames o' fire: and his lips plows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give express charge, that in our marches through the country, there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king: Say thou to Harry of England: Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep: advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuked him at Harfleur; but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe: now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him, therefore, consider of his ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master; so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back, [now;
And tell thy king I do not seek him
But could be willing to march on to Calais [sooth,
Without impeachment: for, to say the
Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much
Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,
My people are with sickness much enfeebled, [have
My numbers lessen'd, and those few I
Almost no better than so many French;
Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herald,
I thought upon one pair of English legs
Did march three Frenchmen. Yet, forgive me, God, [France
That I do brag thus! This your air of Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent.
Go therefore, tell thy master here I am;
My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk,
My army but a weak and sickly guard;
Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, [other neighbour
Though France himself and such an-
Stand in our way. There's for thy labour, Montjoy.
Go, bid thy master well advise himself:
If we may pass, we will; if we be hinder'd, [red blood
We shall your tawny ground with your
Discolour; and so, Montjoy, fare you well.
The sum of all our answer is but this:
We would not seek a battle, as we are;
Nor, as we are, we say we will not shun it:
So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. [Exit.

Glou. I hope they will not come upon us now.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.
March to the bridge; it now draws toward night: [selves,
Beyond the river we'll encamp our-
And on to-morrow bid them march away. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The French Camp, near Agincourt.

Enter the Constable of France, the LORD RAMBURES, the DUKE OF ORLEANS, the DAUPHIN, and Others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My Lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour—

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ça, ha! he bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes. [meg.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nut-

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him: he is indeed a horse; and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as fluent as the sea: turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all: 'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world, familiar to us and unknown, to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise, and began thus: 'Wonder of Nature,'—

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Ma foi! the other day, methought, your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So perhaps did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O then belike she was old and gentle; and you rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait trossers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress. [a jade.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. 'Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au bourbier:' thou makest use of any thing.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress, or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord. [row, I hope.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-mor-

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well, were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way: but I would it were morning; for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty English prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.

Dau. 'Tis midnight; I'll go arm myself. [Exit.

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity; and he will still be doing. [of.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he?

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour; and when it appears, it will bate.

Orl. Ill will never said well.

Con. I will cap that proverb with 'There is flattery in friendship.'

Orl. And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due.'

Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil: have at the very eye of that proverb with 'A pox of the devil.'

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot.'

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents. [ground?

Con. Who hath measured the Mess. The Lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman. Would it were day! Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the dawning as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples. You may as well say, that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives: and then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils. [shrewdly out of beef.

Orl. Ay, but these English are

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat and none to fight. Now is it time to arm: come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two o'clock: but, let me see, by ten

We shall have each a hundred Englishmen. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time [dark

When creeping murmur and the poring

Fills the wide vessel of the universe.

From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night,

The hum of either army stilly sounds,

That the fix'd sentinels almost receive

The secret whispers of each other's watch: [paly flames

Fire answers fire, and through their

Each battle sees the other's umber'd face; [ful neighs

Steed threatens steed, in high and boast-

Piercing the night's dull ear, and from the tents [knights,

The armourers, accomplishing the

With busy hammers closing rivets up,

Give dreadful note of preparation.

The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll, [name.

And the third hour of drowsy morning

Proud of their numbers and secure in soul,

The confident and over-lusty French

Do the low-rated English play at dice;

And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night [limp

Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth

So tediously away. The poor condemned English,

Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires

Sit patiently, and inly ruminate

The morning's danger; and their gesture sad, [worn coats,

Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-

Presenteth them unto the gazing moon

So many horrid ghosts. O now, who will behold

The royal captain of this ruin'd band

Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent, [head!'

Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his

For forth he goes and visits all his host,

Bids them good-morrow with a modest smile, [countrymen.

And calls them brothers, friends and

Upon his royal face there is no note

How dread an army hath enrounded him;

Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour

Unto the weary and all-watched night;

But freshly looks and over-bears attaint

With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty; [before,

That every wretch, pining and pale

Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks:

A largess universal like the sun

His liberal eye doth give to every one,

Thawing cold fear. Then, mean and gentle all,

Behold, as may unworthiness define,

A little touch of Harry in the night.

SCENE I.—The English Camp at Agincourt.

Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOUCESTER.

K. Hen. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are in great danger;
The greater therefore should our courage be. [Almighty!
Good-morrow, brother Bedford. God
There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distil it out;

With casted slough and fresh legerity.

Erp. Shall I attend your grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight;
Go with my brothers to my lords of England:
I and my bosom must debate awhile,
And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry! [Exit.

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speakest cheerfully.

Pist. The figo for thee, then!

K. Hen. I thank you: God be with you!

Pist. My name is Pistol call'd. [Exit.

K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Flu. So! in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the universal 'orld, when the true and aunchient prerogatifes and laws of the wars is not kept: if you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle taddle or pibble pabble in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise.

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you hear him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb? in your own conscience, now?

Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you and beseech you that you will.

[Exeunt GOWER and FLUELLEN.

Enter BATES, COURT, and WILLIAMS.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

Bates. I think it be: but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend. [you?

Will. Under what captain serve

K. Hen. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?

K. Hen. Even as men wrecked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide. [to the king?

Bates. He hath not told his thought

K. Hen. No; nor it is not meet he should. For, though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man, as I am: the violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions: his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet, when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are: yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army.

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will; but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king: I think he would not wish himself any where but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.

K. Hen. I dare say you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this to feel other men's minds: methinks I could not die any where so contented as in the king's company; his cause being just and his quarrel honourable.

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough, if we know we are the king's subjects: if his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.

Will. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make, when all those legs and arms and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day and cry all 'We died at such a place;' some swearing; some crying for a surgeon; some upon their wives left poor behind them; some upon the debts they owe; some upon their children rawly left. I am afeard there are few die well that die in battle; for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it; whom to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him: or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconciled iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation: but this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his beadle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished for before-breach of the king's laws, in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and where they would be safe, they perish: then if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained; and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, He let him outlive that day to see His greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill is upon his own head: the king is not to answer for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransomed.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully: but when our throats are cut, he may be ransomed, and we ne'er the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. 'Mass, you'll pay him then! That's a perilous shot out of an elder gun, that a poor and private displeasure can do against a monarch! you may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round: I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou darest acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove: give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, 'This is my glove,' by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou darest as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company. [well.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends: we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter French Soldier, PISTOL, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur!

Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous êtes gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quality? Callino, castore me! Art thou a gentleman? what is thy name? discuss.

Fr. Sol. O Seigneur Dieu!

Fr. Sol. O, prenez miséricorde ! ayez pitié de moi !

Pist. Moy shall not serve ; I will have forty moys ;
Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat
In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est-il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras ?

Pist. Brass, cur !
Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat,
Offer'st me brass ?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez-moi !

Pist. Say'st thou me so ? is that a ton of moys ?
Come hither, boy : ask me this slave in French
What is his name.

Boy. Écoutez : comment êtes-vous appelé ?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is Master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer ! I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him : discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.

Pist. Bid him prepare ; for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur ?

Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faites vous prêt ; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Owy, cuppele gorge, permafoy,
Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns ;
Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie, pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner ! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison : gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents écus.

Pist. What are his words ?

Boy. He prays you to save his life : he is a gentleman of a good house ; and for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il ?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier ; néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchisement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remercimens ; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks ; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one, as he thinks, the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show.
Follow me, cur !

Boy. Suivez-vous le grand capitaine.

[Exeunt PISTOL, and French Soldier.

I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart : but the saying is true, 'The empty vessel makes the greatest sound.' Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil i' the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger ; and they are both hanged ; and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp : the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it ; for there is none to guard it but boys.

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame ! let's stab ourselves.
Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for ?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom ? [thing but shame !

Bour. Shame and eternal shame, nothing but shame !
Let us die in honour : once more back again ;
And he that will not follow Bourbon now,
Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand,

Let us in heaps go offer up our lives
Unto these English, or else die with fame. [the field
Orl. We are enough yet living in
To smother up the English in our throngs,
If any order might be thought upon.
Bour. The devil take order now! I'll to the throng:
Let life be short; else shame will be too long. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY and Forces; EXETER, and Others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice-valiant countrymen:
But all's not done; yet keep the French the field.
Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your majesty.
K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice within this hour
I saw him down; thrice up again, and fighting; [was.
From helmet to the spur all blood he
Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie, [side,
Larding the plain; and by his bloody
Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,
The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies.
Suffolk first died: and York, all hag-gled over, [steep'd,
Comes to him, where in gore he lay in-
And takes him by the beard; kisses the gashes
That bloodily did yawn upon his face;
And cries aloud 'Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk! [heaven;
My soul shall thine keep company to
Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast, [field
As in this glorious and well-foughten
We kept together in our chivalry!'
Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up: [his hand,
He smiled me in the face, raught me
And, with a feeble gripe, says 'Dear my lord,
Commend my service to my sovereign.'
So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck
He threw his wounded arm and kiss'd his lips; [he seal'd
And so espoused to death, with blood
A testament of noble-ending love.
The pretty and sweet manner of it forced [have stopp'd;
Those waters from me which I would
But I had not so much of man in me,
And all my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears.
K. Hen. I blame you not;
For, hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mistful eyes, or they will issue too. [Alarum.
But, hark! what new alarum is this same? [ter'd men:
The French have reinforced their scat-
Then every soldier kill his prisoners;
Give the word through. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms: 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer't; in your conscience now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain there's not a boy left alive; and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle ha' done this slaughter: besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent; wherefore the king, most worthily, hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant king!

Flu. Ay, he was porn at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was porn?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig great? the pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon: his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is porn. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant you sall find, in the comparisons, between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth: it is called Wye at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis so like as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things. Alexander, God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his pest friend, Cleitus.

Gow. Our king is not like him in that: he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made an end and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander is kill his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups; so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his goot judgments, is turn away the fat knight with the great pelly-doublet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks; I am forget his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he: I can tell you there is goot men porn at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, with a Part of the English Forces; WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, and Others.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to France
Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald;
Ride thou unto the horsemen on yon hill:
If they will fight with us, bid them come down,
Or void the field; they do offend our sight:
If they'll do neither, we will come to them,
And make them skirr away, as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings:
Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have,
And not a man of them that we shall take,
Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Exe. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glou. His eyes are humbler than they used to be.

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald? know'st thou not that I have fined these bones of mine for ransom?
Comest thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great king:
I come to thee for charitable licence,
That we may wander o'er this bloody field to look our dead, and then to bury them;
To sort our nobles from our common men;
For many of our princes—woe the while!—
Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood;
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In blood of princes; and their wounded steeds
Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,
Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great king,
To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies!

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald,
I know not if the day be ours or no;
For yet a many of your horsemen peer
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!
What is this castle call'd that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,
Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true: if your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did goot service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which, your majesty knows, to this hour is an honourable padge of the service; and I do believe your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day. [honour;

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable
For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh plood out of your pody, I can tell you that: Got pless it and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Cheshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the 'orld: I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so!—Our heralds go with him: [dead
Bring me just notice of the numbers
On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to WILLIAMS. Exeunt MONTJOY and Others.

Exe. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wearest thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night; who, if 'a live and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear: or if I can see my glove in his cap, which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear if alive, I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as goot a gentleman as the tevil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath: if he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack-sauce, as ever his plack shoe trod upon Got's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la!

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meetest the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live

K. Hen. Who servest thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a goot captain; and is good knowledge and literature in the wars. [soldier.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me,

Will. I will, my liege. [Exit.

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me and stick it in thy cap: when Alençon and myself were down together, I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon, and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.

Flu. Your grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once; and please Got of his grace that I might see it.

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, and an't please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him. [Exit.

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloucester,
Follow Fluellen closely at the heels:
The glove which I have given him for a favour [ear;
May haply purchase him a box o' the
It is the soldier's; I by bargain should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin
Warwick: [judge
If that the soldier strike him, as I
By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,
Some sudden mischief may arise of
it;
For I do know Fluellen valiant,

And, touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury:
Follow, and see there be no harm between them.
Go you with me, uncle of Exeter.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Before KING HENRY'S Pavilion.

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Got's will and his pleasure, captain, I peseech you now, come apace to the king: there is more goot toward you, peradventure, than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove! I know the glove is a glove. [lenge it.

Will. I know this; and thus I chal-
[Strikes him.

Flu. 'Sblood! an arrant traitor as any's in the universal 'orld, or in France, or in England!

Gow. How now, sir! you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat.—I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him: he's a friend of the Duke Alençon's.

Enter WARWICK and GLOUCESTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is —praised be Got for it!—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter KING HENRY and EXETER.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter?

Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap: I promised to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your majesty hear now, saving your majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is: I hope your majesty is pear me testimony, and witness, and avouchments, that this is the glove of Alençon, that your majesty is give me; in your conscience, now?

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier: look, here is the fellow of it. [strike; 'Twas I, indeed, thou promised'st to And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the 'orld.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my liege, come from the heart: never came any from mine that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen. It was ourself thou didst abuse.

Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your highness suffered under that shape, I beseech you take it for your own fault and not mine; for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore, I beseech your highness, pardon me.

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns, [fellow; And give it to this fellow.—Keep it, And wear it for an honour in thy cap Till I do challenge it.—Give him the crowns: [with him. And, captain, you must needs be friends

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his pelly. Hold, there is twelve pence for you; and I pray you to serve Got, and keep you out of prawls, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I warrant you, it is the petter for you.

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a goot will; I can tell you, it will serve you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so pashful? your shoes is not so goot: 'tis a goot silling, I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald, are the dead number'd?

Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French.

[Delivers a Paper.

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to the king; [qualt:
John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouci-
Of other lords and barons, knights and squires, [men.
Full fifteen hundred, besides common

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French
That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this number, [dead
And nobles bearing banners, there lie
One hundred twenty-six: added to these, [men,
Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentle-
Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which,
Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights:
So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, [aries;
There are but sixteen hundred mercen-
The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,
And gentlemen of blood and quality.
The names of those their nobles that lie dead: [France;
Charles Delabreth, high Constable of
Jacques of Chatillon, Admiral of France; [Rámbures;
The master of the cross-bows, Lord
Great-master of France, the brave Sir Guischard Dauphin;
John Duke of Alençon, Anthony Duke of Brabant,
The brother to the Duke of Burgundy;
And Edward Duke of Bar: of lusty earls, [Foix,
Grandpré and Roussi, Fauconberg and
Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrale.
Here was a royal fellowship of death!
Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another Paper.

Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk,
Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire:
None else of name; and of all other men [was here;
But five-and-twenty. O God, thy arm
And not to us, but to thy arm alone,
Ascribe we all! When, without stratagem, [battle,
But in plain shock and even play of
Was ever known so great and little loss
On one part and on the other? Take it, God,
For it is only thine!

Exe. 'Tis wonderful!

K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village: [our host
And be it death proclaimed through
To boast of this, or take that praise from God
Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is killed?

K. Hen. Yes, captain; but with this acknowledgment,
That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, He did us great goot.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites;
Let there be sung 'Non nobis' and 'Te Deum;'
The dead with charity enclosed in clay:
We'll then to Calais; and to England then;
Where ne'er from France arrived more happy men. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story, [as have,
That I may prompt them: and of such
I humbly pray them to admit the excuse [of things
Of time, of numbers and due course
Which cannot in their huge and proper life [king
Be hear presented. Now we bear the Toward Calais: grant him there: there seen, [thoughts
Heave him away upon your winged
Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach [and boys
Pales in the flood with men, with wives

Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea, [king
Which like a mighty whiffler 'fore the Seems to prepare his way: so let him land, [don.
And solemnly see him set on to Lon-
So swift a pace hath thought that even now [heath;
You may imagine him upon Black-
Where that his lords desire him to have borne [sword
His bruised helmet and his bended Before him through the city: he for-bids it, [ous pride;
Being free from vainness and self-glori-
Giving full trophy, signal and ostent
Quite from himself to God. But now behold, [of thought,
In the quick forge and working-house
How London doth pour out her citizens!
The mayor and all his brethren in best sort, [Rome,
Like to the senators of the antique
With the plebeians swarming at their heels, [Cæsar in:
Go forth and fetch their conquering
As, by a lower but loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress, [coming,
As in good time he may, from Ireland
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword, [quit,
How many would the peaceful city
To welcome him! much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him;—
As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the King of England's stay at home; [France,
The emperor coming in behalf of
To order peace between them;—and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanced,
Till Harry's back-return again to France; [have play'd
There must we bring him; and myself
The interim, by remembering you 'tis past. [advance,
Then brook abridgment, and your eyes
After your thoughts, straight back again to France. [Exit.

SCENE I.—France. The English Camp.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you, asse my friend, Captain Gower: the rascally, scald, beggarly, lousy, pragging knave, Pistol, which you and yourself, and all the 'orld, know to be no petter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits, he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek: it was in a place where I could not breed no contentions with him; but I will be so pold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter PISTOL.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. Got pless you, Aunchient Pistol! you scurvy, lousy knave, Got pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirst, base Trojan,
To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek: because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections and your appetites and your digestions does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it. [his goats.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.] Will you be so goot, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when Got's will is: I will desire you to live in the meantime, and eat your victuals: come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again.] You called me yesterday mountain-squire; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to: if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain: you have astonished him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days.—Pite, I pray you; it is goot for your green wound and your ploody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly; and out of doubt, and out of questions too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge: I eat and eke I swear—.

Flu. Eat, I pray you: will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel; thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much goot do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is goot for your proken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is goot: hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes, verily and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. Got be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable aspect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit.

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now? [the spital
News have I, that my Nell is dead i'
Of malady of France; [off.
And there my rendezvous is quite cut
Old I do wax; and from my weary limbs [I turn,
Honour is cudgell'd. Well, bawd will
And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand. [steal:
To England will I steal, and there I'll
And patches will I get unto these scars,
And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The French Court at Troyes in Champagne.

Enter, at one Door, KING HENRY, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords; at another, the FRENCH KING, QUEEN ISABEL, the PRINCESS KATHARINE, ALICE, and other Ladies; the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met! [sister,
Unto our brother France, and to our
Health and fair time of day; joy and good wishes [Katharine;
To our most fair and princely cousin
And, as a branch and member of this royalty, [trived,
By whom this great assembly is con-
We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy;
And, princes French, and peers, health to you all!

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face, [met:
Most worthy brother England; fairly
So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England, [meeting,
Of this good day and of this gracious
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them [their bent,
Against the French, that met them in
The fatal balls of murdering basilisks:
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality, and that this day [into love.
Shall change all griefs and quarrels

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear. [salute you.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do

Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love,
Great kings of France and England! That I have labour'd,

With all my wits, my pains and strong endeavours,
To bring your most imperial majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness. [vail'd
Since then my office hath so far pre-
That, face to face and royal eye to eye,
You have congreeted, let it not disgrace me,
If I demand, before this royal view,
What rub or what impediment there is,
Why that the naked, poor and mangled Peace, [births,
Dear nurse of arts, plenties and joyful
Should not in this best garden of the world, [visage ?
Our fertile France, put up her lovely
Alas! she hath from France too long been chased, [heaps,
And all her husbandry doth lie on
Corrupting in its own fertility. [heart,
Her vine, the merry cheerer of the
Unpruned dies; her hedges even-pleach'd, [hair,
Like prisoners wildly overgrown with
Put forth disorder'd twigs; her fallow leas
The darnel, hemlock and rank fumitory
Doth root upon; while that the coulter rusts
That should deracinate such savagery;
The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth [clover,
The freckled cowslip, burnet and green
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank, [teems
Conceives by idleness; and nothing
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs,
Losing both beauty and utility.
And as our vineyards, fallows, meads and hedges, [wildness,
Defective in their natures, grow to
Even so our houses and ourselves and children [time,
Have lost, or do not learn for want of
The sciences that should become our country;
But grow like savages,—as soldiers will
That nothing do but meditate on blood,— [attire,
To swearing and stern looks, diffused
And every thing that seems unnatural.
Which to reduce into our former favour [entreats
You are assembled: and my speech
That I may know the let, why gentle Peace
Should not expel these inconveniencies
And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the peace,
Whose want gives growth to the imperfections [that peace
Which you have cited, you must buy
With full accord to all our just demands;
Whose tenours and particular effects
You have, enscheduled briefly, in your hands. [to the which as yet

Bur. The king hath heard them; There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well, then, the peace,
Which you before so urged, lies in his answer. [ary eye

Fr. King. I have but with a cursor-
O'erglanced the articles: pleaseth your grace [ently
To appoint some of your council pres-
To sit with us once more, with better heed
To re-survey them, we will suddenly
Pass our accept and peremptory answer. [uncle Exeter,

K. Hen. Brother, we shall. Go,
And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester, [king;
Warwick and Huntingdon, go with the
And take with you free power to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best [dignity,
Shall see advantageable for our
Any thing in or out of our demands;
And we'll consign thereto.—Will you, fair sister, [us ?
Go with the princes, or stay here with

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with them: [good,
Haply a woman's voice may do some
When articles too nicely urged be stood on,

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here with us:
She is our capital demand, comprised
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all but HENRY, KATHARINE, and ALICE.

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair, [terms
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier
Such as will enter at a lady's ear

And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your England.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell vat is 'like me.'

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges? [grace, ainsi dit-il.

Alice. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Oui; dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits: dat is de princess.

K. Hen. The princess is the better Englishwoman. I' faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding: I am glad thou canst speak no better English; for, if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say 'I love you:' then, if you urge me further than to say 'do you in faith?' I wear out my suit. Give me your answer; i' faith, do: and so clap hands and a bargain: how say you, lady?

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, me understand vell.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me: for the one, I have neither words nor measure; and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off. But, before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of any thing he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier: if thou canst love me for this, take me; if not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true; but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy; for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places: for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater; a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white; a curled pate will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow: but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and moon; or, rather, the sun, and not the moon; for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I sould love de enemy of France?

K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate: but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France; for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine: and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French; which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Quand j'ai le possession de France, et quand vous avez le possession de moi,—let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!—

donc votre est France et vous êtes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, le François que vous parlez est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle.

K. Hen. No, faith, is't not, Kate: but thy speaking of my tongue, and I think, most truly-falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English? Canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me: and at night, when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou beest mine, Kate, as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt, I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder. Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and, for my English moiety, take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon très chèr et devin deesse?

Kath. Your majestee ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage demoiselle dat is en France.

K. Hen. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate: by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now, beshrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me: therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies, I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better. And therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say 'Harry of England, I am thine:' which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud 'England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine;' who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is music and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English; wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is as it sall please de roi mon père.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it sall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez; ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissiez votre grandeur en baisant la main d'une votre indigne serviteur; excusez-moi, je vous supplie, mon très-puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames et demoiselles pour être baisées devant leur noces, il n'est pas la coutume de France.

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell vat is baiser en Anglish.

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entendre bettre que moi.

K. Hen. It is not the fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Oui, vraiment.

K. Hen. O Kate, nice customs curtsy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouth of all find-faults; as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently and yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Re-enter the FRENCH KING and QUEEN, BURGUNDY, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, WESTMORELAND, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! my royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English.

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind. Can you blame her then, being a maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to.

K. Hen. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do.

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness; who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspectively, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her: so the maid that stood in the way of my wish shall show me the way to my will. [terms of reason.

If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? what treachery was used?

Mess. No treachery; but want of men and money.
Amongst the soldiers this is muttered,
That here you maintain several factions;
And, whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your generals.
One would have lingering wars with little cost; [wings;

Third Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments,
Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's hearse,
I must inform you of a dismal fight
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French. [came? is't so?

Win. What! wherein Talbot over-

To keep the horsemen off from breaking in. [continued;
More than three hours the fight
Where valiant Talbot above human thought [lance.
Enacted wonders with his sword and
Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand him; [he flew:
Here, there, and every where, enraged
The French exclaim'd the devil was in arms; [him:
All the whole army stood agazed on
His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! a Talbot! cried out amain,
And rush'd into the bowels of the battle. [seal'd up,

His crown shall be the ransom of my
Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours. [I;
Farewell, my masters; to my task will
Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make, [withal:
To keep our great Saint George's feast
Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take, [Europe quake.
Whose bloody deeds shall make all

Third Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is besieged; [faint:
The English army is grown weak and
The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
And hardly keeps his men from mutiny,
Since they, so few, watch such a multitude. [Henry sworn;

Exe. Remember, lords, your oaths to Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it; and here take my leave,
To go about my preparation. [Exit.

Glou. I'll to the Tower with all the haste I can,
To view the artillery and munition;
And then I will proclaim young Henry king. [Exit.

Exe. To Eltham will I, where the young king is,
Being ordain'd his special governor;

And for his safety there I'll best devise.
[Exit.

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend:
I am left out; for me nothing remains.
But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office: [steal,
The king from Eltham I intend to
And sit at chiefest stern of public weal.

SCENE II.—France. Before Orleans.

Flourish. Enter CHARLES, with his Forces; ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens [known:
So in the earth, to this day is not
Late did he shine upon the English side;
Now we are victors; upon us he smiles.
What towns of any moment but we have?
At pleasure here we lie near Orleans;
Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,
Faintly besiege us one hour in a month.

Alen. They want their porridge and their fat bull-beeves:
Either they must be dieted like mules
And have their provender tied to their mouths,
Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice. [live we idly here?

Reig. Let's raise the siege: why
Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear:
Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury; [gall,
And he may well in fretting spend his
Nor men nor money hath he to make war. [will rush on them.

Char. Sound, sound alarum! we
Now for the honour of the forlorn French!
Him I forgive my death that killeth me
When he sees me go back one foot or fly. [Exeunt.

Alarums. Excursions; afterwards a Retreat. Re-enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I!
Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne'er have fled,
But that they left me 'midst my enemies. [homicide;

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate
He fighteth as one weary of his life.
The other lords, like lions wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alen. Froissard, a countryman of ours, records,
England all Olivers and Rowlands bred
During the time Edward the Third did reign.
More truly now may this be verified;
For none but Samsons and Goliases
It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten! [e'er suppose
Lean raw-boned rascals! who would
They had such courage and audacity?

Char. Let's leave this town; for they are hair-brain'd slaves, [eager:
And hunger will enforce them be more
Of old I know them; rather with their teeth [sake the siege.
The walls they'll tear down than for-

By my consent, we'll e'en let them

Alen. Be it so.

Enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS.

Bast. Where's the Prince Dauphin? I have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appall'd:
Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?
Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:
A holy maid hither with me I bring,
Which by a vision sent to her from heaven
Ordained is to raise this tedious siege,
And drive the English forth the bounds of France.
The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,
Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome:
What's past and what's to come she can descry. [words,
Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my
For they are certain and unfallible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit BASTARD.] But first, to try her skill, [place:
Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my Question her proudly; let thy looks be stern: [she hath.
By this means shall we sound what skill

Re-enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, with JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Reig. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats?
Puc. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to beguile me? [from behind:
Where is the Dauphin? Come, come
I know thee well, though never seen before. [from me:
Be not amazed, there's nothing hid
In private will I talk with thee apart.
Stand back, you lords, and give us
leave awhile. [first dash.
Reig. She takes upon her bravely at Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter,
My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.
Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleased
To shine on my contemptible estate:
Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs,
And to sun's parching heat display'd
my cheeks,
God's mother deigned to appear to me;
And, in a vision full of majesty,
Will'd me to leave my base vocation
And free my country from calamity:
Her aid she promised and assured success:
In complete glory she reveal'd herself;
And, whereas I was black and swart
before, [on me
With those clear rays which she infused
That beauty am I bless'd with which you see. [sible,
Ask me what question thou canst pos-
And I will answer unpremeditated:
My courage try by combat, if thou
darest, [sex.
And thou shalt find that I exceed my Resolve on this; thou shalt be for-funate, [mate.
If thou receive me for thy warlike
Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms:
Only this proof I'll of thy valour make;
In single combat thou shalt buckle with me, [true;
And if thou vanquishest, thy words are
Otherwise I renounce all confidence.
Puc. I am prepared: here is my keen-edged sword, [side;
Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each
The which at Touraine, in Saint
Katharine's churchyard,
Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth. [fear no woman.
Char. Then come, o' God's name; I
Puc. And while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a man.
[Here they fight, and JOAN LA
PUCELLE overcomes.
Char. Stay, stay, thy hands! thou art an Amazon,
And fightest with the sword of Deborah.
Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.
Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me:
Impatiently I burn with thy desire;
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdued.
Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,
Let me thy servant and not sovereign be: [thus.
'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee
Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,
For my profession's sacred from above:
When I have chased all thy foes from
hence,
Then will I think upon a recompense.
Char. Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.
Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.
Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock;
Else ne'er could he so long protract his

Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise:
Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days,
Since I have entered into these wars.
Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself
Till by broad spreading it disperse to

With Henry's death the English circle ends;
Dispersed are the glories it included.
Now am I like that proud insulting ship
Which Cæsar and his fortune bare at once.
Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?
Thou with an eagle art inspired then.
Helen, the mother of great Constantine,
Nor yet Saint Philip's daughters, were like thee.
Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,
How may I reverently worship thee enough?
Alen. Leave off delays, and raise the siege.
Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;
Drive them from Orleans and be immortalized.
Char. Presently we'll try: come, let's away about it:
No prophet will I trust, if she prove false. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—London. Before the Tower.

Enter, at the Gates, the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, with his Serving-men, in blue coats.

Glou. I am come to survey the Tower this day: conveyance.
Since Henry's death, I fear, there is

Open the gates; Gloucester it is that
First Ward. [Within.] Who's there that knocks so imperiously?
First Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloucester.
Sec. Ward. [Within.] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.
First Serv. Answer you so the lord protector, villains?
First Ward. [Within.] The Lord protect him! so we answer him:
We do no otherwise than we are will'd.
Glou. Who willed you? or whose will stands but mine?
There's none protector of the realm but I.
Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize: grooms?
Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill
[GLOUCESTER'S men rush at the Tower Gates, and WOODVILE the Lieutenant speaks within.
Wood. What noise is this? what traitors have we here?
Glou. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?
Open the gates; here's Gloucester that would enter.
Wood. Have patience, noble duke; I may not open;
The Cardinal of Winchester forbids:
From him I have express commandment in.
That thou nor none of thine shall be let

Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter WINCHESTER, attended by Servingmen in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey? what means this?
Glou. Peel'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?
Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor,
And not protector, of the king or realm.
Glou. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator, dead lord;
Thou that contrivedst to murder our
Thou that givest whores indulgences to sin: hat,
I'll canvas thee in thy broad cardinal's
If thou proceed in this thy insolence.
Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a foot:
This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,
To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt.
Glou. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back: cloth
Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-
I'll use to carry thee out of this place.
Win. Do what thou darest; I beard thee to thy face.
Glou. What! am I dared and bearded to my face?
Draw, men, for all this privileged place;
Blue-coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware your beard;
[GLOUCESTER and his Men attack the Cardinal.

I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly:
Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat:
In spite of pope or dignities of church,
Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.
Win. Gloucester, thou'lt answer this before the pope.
Glou. Winchester goose, I cry, a rope! a rope!
Now beat them hence; why do you let them stay?
Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array.
Out, tawny-coats! out, scarlet hypocrite!

Here a great tumult. In the midst of it, enter the Mayor of London, and his Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,
Thus contumeliously should break the peace!
Glou. Peace, mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs:
Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king,
Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use.
Win. Here's Gloucester too, a foe to citizens,
One that still motions war and never peace,
O'ercharging your free purses with large fines;
That seeks to overthrow religion,
Because he is protector of the realm;
And would have armour here out of the Tower,
To crown himself king and suppress the prince.
Glou. I will not answer thee with words, but blows.

[Here they skirmish again.

May. Nought rests for me in this tumultuous strife
But to make open proclamation:
Come, officer; as loud as e'er thou canst;
Cry.

Off. 'All manner of men assembled here in arms this day against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death.'

Glou. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law:
But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.
Win. Gloucester, we'll meet; to thy dear cost, be sure:
Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.
May. I'll call for clubs, if you will not away.
This cardinal's more haughty than the devil.
Glou. Mayor, farewell: thou dost but what thou mayst.
Win. Abominable Gloucester! guard thy head;
For I intend to have it ere long.

[Exeunt, severally, GLOU. and WIN. with their Serving-men.

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.
Good God! that nobles should such stomachs bear!
I myself fight not once in forty year.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—France. Before Orleans.

Enter, on the Walls, the Master-Gunner and his Boy.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieged,
And how the English have the suburbs won.
Boy. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them,
Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim.
M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou ruled by me:
Chief master-gunner am I of this town;
Something I must do to procure me grace.
The prince's espials have informed me
How the English, in the suburbs close intrench'd,
Wont through a secret grate of iron bars
In yonder tower to overpeer the city,
And thence discover how with most advantage
They may vex us with shot or with assault.
To intercept this inconvenience,
A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have placed;
And fully even these three days have I watch'd,
If I could see them.
Now do thou watch, for I can stay no longer.
If thou spiest any, run and bring me word;
And thou shalt find me at the governor's.
Boy. Father, I warrant you; take you no care;
I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.

[Exeunt.

Enter, on the turrets, the Lords SALISBURY and TALBOT, SIR WILLIAM GLANSDALE, SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE, and Others.

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd!
How wert thou handled, being prisoner? Or by what means got'st thou to be released?
Discourse, I prithee, on this turret's top.
Tal. The Duke of Bedford had a prisoner [trailles;
Called the brave Lord Ponton de San-
For him I was exchanged and ransomed.
But with a baser man of arms by far
Once in contempt they would have barter'd me:
Which I disdaining scorn'd; and craved death
Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd.
In fine, redeem'd I was as I desired.

That they supposed I could rend bars
And spurn in pieces posts of adamant:
Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had
That walk'd about me every minute-while;
And if I did but stir out of my bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a linstock.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endured;
But we will be revenged sufficiently.
Now it is supper-time in Orleans:
Here, through this grate, I count each one,
And view the Frenchmen how they fortify:
Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee. [Glansdale,
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William

Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners!
Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful man!
Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us?
Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak: [men?
How farest thou, mirror of all martial

The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle
A holy prophetess new risen up,
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.
[Here SALISBURY lifteth himself up and groans.
Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan !
It irks his heart he cannot be revenged.
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you :

Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels, [brains.

And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force ? [them ;
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay
A woman clad in armour chaseth them.

Re-enter LA PUCELLE.

Here, here she comes. I'll have a bout with thee ;
Devil or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee :
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch, [thou servest.
And straightway give thy soul to him
Puc. Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee.
[They fight.
Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail ? [my courage,
My breast I'll burst with straining of
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet. [They fight again.

I must go victual Orleans forthwith.

Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved
Help Salisbury to make his testament :
This day is ours, as many more shall be.
[Exit.
Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel ;
I know not where I am, nor what I do :
A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal, [she lists :
Drives back our troops and conquers as
So bees with smoke and doves with noisome stench [away.
Are from their hives and houses driven
They call'd us, for our fierceness, English dogs ;
Now, like to whelps, we crying run away. [A short alarum.
Hark, countrymen ! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat ;
Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead : [wolf,
Sheep run not half so timorous from the
Or horse or oxen from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.
[Alarum. Another skirmish.
It will not be : retire into your trenches : [death,
You all consented unto Salisbury's
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.
Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans,
In spite of us or aught that we could do.
O, would I were to die with Salisbury !
The shame hereof will make me hide my head.
[Alarum. Retreat. Exeunt TALBOT and his Forces.

SCENE VI.—The Same.

Enter, on the Walls, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls :
Rescued is Orleans from the English :
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word. [daughter,
Char. Divinest creature, Astræa's

How shall I honour thee for this success?
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess!
Recover'd is the town of Orleans:
More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town?
Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy,
When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;
For which I will divide my crown with her;
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall in procession sing her endless praise.
A statelier pyramis to her I'll rear
Than Rhodope's or Memphis' ever was:
In memory of her when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious
Than the rich-jewell'd coffer of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Denis will we cry,
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
Come in, and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—France. Before Orleans.

Enter to the Gates, a French Sergeant, and two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant:
If any noise or soldier you perceive
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

First Sent. Sergeant, you shall.

[Exit Sergeant.

Thus are poor servitors,
When others sleep upon their quiet beds,
Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Forces, with scaling-ladders, their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whose approach the regions of Artois,
Walloon and Picardy, are friends to us,
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day caroused and banqueted:
Embrace we then this opportunity
As fitting best to quittance their deceit
Contrived by art and baleful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France! how much he wrongs his fame,
Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
To join with witches and the help of hell!

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and be so martial!

Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long,
If underneath the standard of the French
She carry armour as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits:
God is our fortress; in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways;
That, if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed: I'll to yon corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.
Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the Walls, crying 'Saint George!' 'A Talbot!' and all enter the town.

Sent. [Within.] Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

The French leap over the Walls in their shirts. Enter, several ways, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and

REIGNIER, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords! what, all unready so?

Bast. Unready! ay, and glad we 'scaped so well.

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,
Hearing alarums at our chamber-doors.

Alen. Of all exploits since first I follow'd arms,
Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise
More venturous or desperate than this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles: I marvel how he sped.

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?
Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,
Make us partakers of a little gain,
That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?
At all times will you have my power alike?
Sleeping or waking must I still prevail,
Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?
Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,
This sudden mischief never could have fall'n.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default,
That, being captain of the watch to-night,
Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept
As that whereof I had the government,
We had not been thus shamefully surprised.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And, for myself, most part of all this night,
Within her quarter and mine own precinct
I was employ'd in passing to and fro,
About relieving of the sentinels:
Then how or which way should they first break in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case,
How or which way: 'tis sure they found some place
But weakly guarded, where the breach was made.
And now there rests no other shift but this;
To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispersed,
And lay new platforms to endamage them.

Alarum. Enter an English Soldier, crying 'A Talbot! a Talbot!' They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.
The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;
For I have loaden me with many spoils,
Using no other weapon but his name.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Orleans. Within the Town.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, a Captain, and Others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,
Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.
Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit.
[Retreat sounded.

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury,
And here advance it in the market-place,
The middle centre of this cursed town.
Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;
For every drop of blood was drawn from him
There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.
And that hereafter ages may behold
What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,
Within their chiefest temple I'll erect
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd:
Upon the which, that every one may read,
Shall be engraved the sack of Orleans,
The treacherous manner of his mournful death,
And what a terror he had been to France.
But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,
I muse we met not with the Dauphin's grace,
His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc,
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,
Roused on the sudden from their drowsy beds,
They did amongst the troops of armed men
Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself, as far as I could well discern [night,
For smoke and dusky vapours of the

When arm in arm they both came
Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves
That could not live asunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train
Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts
So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot: who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, Countess of Auvergne,
With modesty admiring thy renown,
By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe
To visit her poor castle where she lies;
That she may boast she hath beheld the man
Whose glory fills the world with loud report. [see our wars

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men
Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness overruled: [thanks,
And therefore tell her I return great
And in submission will attend on her.

Bed. No, truly; it is more than man-
And I have heard it said, unbidden guests [gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,
I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.
Come hither, captain. [Whispers.] You perceive my mind?

Capt. I do, my lord; and mean accordingly. [Exeunt.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge; [keys to me.

Mess. Madam,

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France? [abroad
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd
That with his name the mothers still their babes?
I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas, this is a child, a silly dwarf!
It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you;
But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now? Go ask him whither he goes.

Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot; for my lady craves [parture.
To know the cause of your abrupt de-

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with Keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?
Count. To me, bloodthirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house. [to me,

But now the substance shall endure the like; [of thine,

And sent our sons and husbands captivate.

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan.
Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond [bot's shadow
To think that you have aught but Tal-
Whereon to practise your severity.
Count. Why, art not thou the man?
Tal. I am indeed.
Count. Then have I substance too.
Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself: [here;
You are deceived, my substance is not
For what you see is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity:

He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can these contrarieties agree?
Tal. That will I show you presently.
[He winds a Horn. Drums heard; then a Peal of Ordnance. The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers.
How say you, madam? are you now persuaded
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?
These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength, [necks,
With which he yoketh your rebellious
Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the Earls of SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VERNON, and another Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords and gentlemen, what means this silence?
Dare no man answer in a case of truth?
Suf. Within the Temple-hall we were too loud;
The garden here is more convenient.
Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth; [error?
Or else was wrangling Somerset in the
Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And therefore frame the law unto my will.
Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then, between us.
War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;
Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth;
Between two blades, which bears the better temper; [him best;
Between two horses, which doth bear
Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye; [judgment:
I have perhaps some shallow spirit of
But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.
Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:
The truth appears so naked on my side
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.
Plan. Since you are tongue-tied and so loth to speak,
In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-born gentleman,
And stands upon the honour of his birth,
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,
From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.
Som. Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer,
But dare maintain the party of the truth,
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.
War. I love no colours, and without all colour
Of base insinuating flattery
I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.
Suf. I pluck this red rose with young Somerset;
And say withal I think he held the right.
Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck no more,
Till you conclude that he upon whose side
The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree
Shall yield the other in the right opinion.
Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected:
If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.
Plan. And I.
Ver. Then for the truth and plainness of the case,
I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side.
Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off;
Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red,
And fall on my side so, against your will.
Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,
And keep me on the side where still I am.
Som. Well, well, come on: who else?
Law. Unless my study and my books be false,
[To SOM.] The argument you held was wrong in you;
In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too.
Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?
Som. Here is my scabbard, meditating that Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red.
Plan. Meantime your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;
For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.
Som. No, Plantagenet,
'Tis not for fear but anger that thy cheeks
Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses;
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.
Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?
Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?
Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;
Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.
Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses,
That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.
Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,
I scorn thee and thy faction, peevish boy.
Suf. Turn not thy scorns this way, Plantagenet.
Plan. Proud Pole, I will; and scorn both him and thee.
Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.
Som. Away, away, good William de la Pole!
We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.
War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him, Somerset;
His grandfather was Lionel Duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward King of England:
Spring crestless yeomen from so deep a root?
Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege,
Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.
Som. By Him that made me, I'll maintain my words
On any plot of ground in Christendom.
Was not thy father, Richard Earl of Cambridge,
For treason executed in our late king's days?
And, by his treason, stand'st not thou attainted,
Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?
His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;
And, till thou be restored, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attached, not attainted; [traitor;
Condemn'd to die for treason, but no
And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset, [will.
Were growing time once ripen'd to my
For your partaker Pole and you yourself,
I'll note you in my book of memory,
To scourge you for this apprehension:
Look to it well, and say you are well warn'd. [thee still;
Som. Ah, thou shalt find us ready for
And know us by these colours for thy foes, [shall wear.
For these my friends in spite of thee
Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose, [hate,
As cognizance of my blood-drinking
Will I for ever and my faction wear;
Until it wither with me to my grave
Or flourish to the height of my degree.
Suf. Go forward and be choked with thy ambition!
And so farewell until I meet thee next. [Exit.
Som. Have with thee, Pole. Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.
Plan. How I am braved, and must perforce endure it!
War. This blot that they object against your house [ment
Shall be wiped out in the next parliaCall'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester;
And if thou be not then created York,
I will not live to be accounted Warwick.
Meantime, in signal of my love to thee,
Against proud Somerset and William Pole,
Will I upon thy party wear this rose:
And here I prophesy: this brawl today, [garden,
Grown to this faction in the TempleShall send between the red rose and the white [night.
A thousand souls to death and deadly
Plan. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you, [flower.
That you on my behalf would pluck a
Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.
Law. And so will I.
Plan. Thanks, gentle sir.
Come, let us four to dinner: I dare say
This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Tower of London.

Enter MORTIMER, brought in a Chair by two Keepers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.
Even like a man new haled from the rack, [ment;
So fare my limbs with long imprison-
And these grey locks, the pursuivants of death,
Nestor-like aged in an age of care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent,
Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent;
Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening grief, [vine
And pithless arms, like to a wither'd
That droops his sapless branches to the ground: [stay is numb,
Yet are these feet, whose strengthless
Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,
As witting I no other comfort have.
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come? [my lord, will come:
First Keep. Richard Plantagenet,
We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber; [come.
And answer was return'd that he will

Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,
Before whose glory I was great in arms,
This loathsome sequestration have I had; [obscured,
And even since then hath Richard been
Deprived of honour and inheritance.
But now the arbitrator of despairs,
Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries, [me hence:
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss
I would his troubles likewise were expired,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

First Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come? [used,
Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly
Your nephew, late despised Richard, comes. [brace his neck,
Mor. Direct mine arms I may em-

And, in that ease, I'll tell thee my dis-

Among which terms he used his lavish
And did upbraid me with my father's death: [tongue,
Which obloquy set bars before my

Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet
And for alliance' sake, declare the cause [head.
My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his

And hath detain'd me all my flowering
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was cursed instrument of his decease.
Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was;
For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.
Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit, [done.
And death approach not ere my tale be

To King Edward the Third; whereas
From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.
But mark: as in this haughty great attempt
They laboured to plant the rightful heir,
I lost my liberty and they their lives.
Long after this, when Henry the Fifth,
Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,
Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then derived [of York,
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke
Marrying my sister that thy mother was,

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic:
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,
And like a mountain, not to be removed.

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast;
And what I do imagine, let that rest.
Keepers, convey him hence; and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life.

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out the body of MORTIMER.

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
Choked with ambition of the meaner sort: [injuries,
And for those wrongs, those bitter
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress;
And therefore haste I to the parliament,
Either to be restored to my blood,
Or make my ill the advantage of my good. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. The Parliament House.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK; the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and Others. GLOUCESTER offers to put up a bill; WINCHESTER snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Comest thou with deep premeditated lines, [devised,
With written pamphlets studiously
Humphrey of Gloucester? If thou canst accuse, [charge,
Or aught intend'st to lay unto my
Do it without invention, suddenly;
As I with sudden and extemporal speech [object.
Purpose to answer what thou canst

That therefore I have forged, or am not
Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen: [wickedness,
No, prelate; such is thy audacious
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks,
As very infants prattle of thy pride.
Thou art a most pernicious usurer;
Froward by nature, enemy to peace;
Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseems
A man of thy profession and degree;
And for thy treachery, what's more manifest?
In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life, [Tower.
As well at London-bridge as at the
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted, [exempt
The king, thy sovereign, is not quite
From envious malice of thy swelling heart. [Lords, vouchsafe
Win. Gloucester, I do defy thee.—
To give me hearing what I shall reply.
If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,
As he will have me, how am I so poor?
Or how haps it I seek not to advance
Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling? [peace
And for dissension, who preferreth
More than I do,—except I be provoked?
No, my good lords, it is not that offends;
It is not that that hath incensed the duke: [he;
It is, because no one should sway but
No one but he should be about the king;
And that engenders thunder in his breast, [forth.
And makes him roar these accusations
But he shall know I am as good—
Glou. As good!
Thou bastard of my grandfather!
Win. Ay, lordly sir; for what are you, I pray,
But one imperious in another's throne?
Glou. Am I not the protector, saucy priest? [church?
Win. And am I not a prelate of the Glou. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,
And useth it to patronage his theft.
Win. Unreverent Gloucester!
Glou. Thou art reverent
Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life.
Win. Rome shall remedy this.
War. Roam thither, then.

Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear.
War. Ay, see the bishop be not over-borne.
Som. Methinks my lord should be religious,
And know the office that belongs to such.
War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler;
It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.
Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.
War. State holy or unhallow'd, what of that?
Is not his grace protector to the king?
Plan. [Aside.] Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue,
Lest it be said 'Speak, sirrah, when you should;
Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?'
Else would I have a fling at Winchester.
K. Hen. Uncles of Gloucester and of Winchester,
The special watchmen of our English weal,
I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,
To join your hearts in love and amity.
O, what a scandal is it to our crown,
That two such noble peers as ye should jar!
Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell
Civil dissension is a viperous worm
That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.
[A noise within: 'Down with the tawny-coats!'
What tumult's this?
War. An uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the bishop's men.
[A noise again: 'Stones! Stones!'

Enter the Mayor of London, attended.

May. O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry,
Pity the city of London, pity us!
The bishop and the Duke of Gloucester's men,
Forbidden late to carry any weapon,
Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble-stones;
And banding themselves in contrary parts
Do pelt so fast at one another's pate
That many have their giddy brains knock'd out:
Our windows are broke down in every street
And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter, skirmishing, the Serving-men of GLOUCESTER and WINCHESTER, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself,
To hold your slaughtering hands and keep the peace.
Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife.
First Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.
Sec. Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute. [Skirmish again.
Glou. You of my household, leave this peevish broil,
And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.
Third Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man
Just and upright; and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none but to his majesty:
And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,
To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
We and our wives and children all will fight
And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.
First Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails
Shall pitch a field when we are dead.
[Skirmish again.
Glou. Stay, stay, I say!
And if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear awhile.
K. Hen. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!
Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears and will not once relent?
Who should be pitiful, if you be not?
Or who should study to prefer a peace,
If holy churchmen take delight in broils?
War. Yield, my lord protector; yield, Winchester;
Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm.
You see what mischief and what murder too
Hath been enacted through your enmity;
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.
Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.
Glou. Compassion on the king commands me stoop;
Or I would see his heart out, ere the priest
Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the duke [fury,
Hath banish'd moody discontented
As by his smoothed brows it doth appear: [cal?
Why look you still so stern and tragi-

K. Hen. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have
That malice was a great and grievous sin; [you teach,
And will not you maintain the thing
But prove a chief offender in the same?
War. Sweet king! the bishop hath a kindly gird. [relent!
For shame, my Lord of Winchester,
What, shall a child instruct you what to do? [will yield to thee;
Win. Well, Duke of Gloucester, I
Love for thy love and hand for hand I give.
Glou. [Aside.] Ay; but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.—
See here, my friends and loving countrymen;
This token serveth for a flag of truce
Betwixt ourselves and all our followers:
So help me God, as I dissemble not!
Win. [Aside]. So help me God, as I intend it not!
K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester, [tract!
How joyful am I made by this con-

Third Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign; [tagenet

Glou. Well urged, my Lord of Warwick: for, sweet prince,
An if your grace mark every circumstance, [right;
You have great reason to do Richard

At Eltham Place I told your majesty,
K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force: [sure is

And, in reguerdon of that duty done,
I gird thee with the valiant sword of York:
Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York.
Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall!
And as my duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty!
All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty Duke of York!
Som. [Aside.] Perish, base prince, ignoble Duke of York!
Glou. Now will it best avail your majesty [France
To cross the seas and to be crown'd in
The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends,
As it disanimates his enemies.
K. Hen. When Gloucester says the word, King Henry goes;
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.
Glou. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but EXETER.

Exe. Ay, we may march in England or in France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue.
This late dissension grown betwixt the peers, [love,

And Henry born at Windsor should Which is so plain, that Exeter doth wish [time.
His days may finish ere that hapless [Exit.

SCENE II.—France. Before Rouen.

Enter LA PUCELLE disguised, and Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen, [a breach;
Through which our policy must make Take heed, be wary how you place your words;
Talk like the vulgar sort of market men That come to gather money for their corn.
If we have entrance, as I hope we shall, And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends, That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

First Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,
And we be lords and rulers over Rouen; Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks.

Guard. [Within.] Qui est là?

Puc. Paysans, pauvres gens de France; [their corn.
Poor market folks that come to sell

Guard. Enter, go in; the market bell is rung.

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

[LA PUCELLE and Soldiers enter the City.

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and Forces.

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy stratagem! [Rouen.
And once again we'll sleep secure in

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle and her practisants;
Now she is there, how will she specify Where is the best and safest passage in?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower; [meaning is,
Which, once discerned, shows that her No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter LA PUCELLE on a battlement, holding out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding torch [men,
That joineth Rouen unto her country-But burning fatal to the Talbotites. [Exit.

Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend; [stands.
The burning torch in yonder turret

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,
A prophet to the fall of all our foes!

Alen. Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends; [sently,
Enter, and cry 'The Dauphin!' pre-And then do execution on the watch. [They enter.

Alarums. Enter TALBOT, and certain English.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears,
If Talbot but survive thy treachery. Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress, [unawares,
Hath wrought this hellish mischief That hardly we escaped the pride of France. [Exit.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter, from the Town, BEDFORD, brought in sick in a chair. Enter TALBOT and BURGUNDY without. Then, enter on the Walls, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and Others.

Puc. Good-morrow, gallants! want ye corn for bread?
I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast Before he'll buy again at such a rate:
'Twas full of darnel; do you like the taste? [less courtezan!

Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend and shame-I trust ere long to choke thee with thine own, [that corn.
And make thee curse the harvest of Char. Your grace may starve perhaps before that time.

Bed. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge this treason!

Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard? break a lance,
And run a tilt at death within a chair?

Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all despite, [mours!
Encompass'd with thy lustful para-

Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age
And twit with cowardice a man half dead?
Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again.
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are you so hot, sir? yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;
If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.

[TALBOT, and the rest, consult together.

God speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker?

Tal. Dare ye come forth, and meet us in the field?

Puc. Belike your lordship takes us then for fools,
To try if that our own be ours or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecatê,
But unto thee, Alençon, and the rest;
Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior, hang! base muleteers of France!
Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,
And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

[from the walls;

Puc. Captains, away! let's get us from the walls;
For Talbot means no goodness by his looks.
God be wi' you, my lord! we came but to tell you
That we are here.

[Exeunt LA PUCELLE, etc., from the Walls.

Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be long,
Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame!
Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house,
Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in France,
Either to get the town again or die:
And I, as sure as English Henry lives,
And as his father here was conqueror;
As sure as in this late-betrayed town
Great Cœur-de-lion's heart was buried;
So sure I swear to get the town or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal. But, ere we go, regard this dying prince,
The valiant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord,
We will bestow you in some better place,
Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me:
Here will I sit before the walls of Rouen,
And will be partner of your weal or woe.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once I read
That stout Pendragon in his litter sick
Came to the field and vanquished his foes:
Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!
Then be it so: heavens keep old Bedford safe!
And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,
But gather we our forces out of hand,
And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt all but BEDFORD and Attendants.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter, SIR JOHN FASTOLFE, and a Captain.

Capt. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?

Fast. Whither away! to save myself by flight:
We are like to have the overthrow again.

Capt. What! will you fly, and leave Lord Talbot?

Fast. Ay,
All the Talbots in the world, to save my life.

[Exit.

Capt. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee!

[Exit.

Retreat. Excursions. Enter, from the Town, LA PUCELLE, ALENÇON, CHARLES, etc., and exeunt, flying.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven please,
For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.
What is the trust or strength of foolish man?
They that of late were daring with their scoffs
Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Dies, and is carried in by two in his chair.

Alarum. Re-enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and Others.

Tal. Lost, and recover'd in a day again!
This is a double honour, Burgundy:
Yet heavens have glory for this victory!

Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy [erects
Enshrines thee in his heart, and there
Thy noble deeds as valour's monument.
Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now?
I think her old familiar is asleep:
Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks? [for grief
What, all amort? Rouen hangs her head
That such a valiant company are fled.
Now will we take some order in the town,
Placing therein some expert officers;
And then depart to Paris to the king;
For there young Henry with his nobles lies. [eth Burgundy.

SCENE III.—The Plains near Rouen.

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered:
Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.
Let frantic Talbot triumph for awhile,
And like a peacock sweep along his tail;
We'll pull his plumes and take away his train, [ruled.

France were no place for Henry's war-
Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirped from our provinces.
Alen. For ever should they be expulsed from France,
And not have title of an earldom here.
Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work
To bring this matter to the wished end.
[Drum sounds afar off.
Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive [ward.
Their powers are marching unto Paris-

Here sound an English March. Enter, and pass over at a distance, TALBOT and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY and Forces.

Now in the rearward comes the duke and his: [hind.

[Trumpets sound a parley.
Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy! [Burgundy?
Bur. Who craves a parley with the

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles? for I am marching hence.
Char. Speak, Pucelle; and enchant him with thy words.
Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France! [to thee.
Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak
Bur. Speak on; but be not overtedious. [fertile France,
Puc. Look on thy country, look on
And see the cities and the towns defaced
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe.
As looks the mother on her lowly babe
When death doth close his tender dying eyes,

See, see the pining malady of France;
Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,
Which thou thyself hast given her woe-[ful breast.
O, turn thy edged sword another way;
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help
One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom,
Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore: [tears,
Return thee therefore with a flood of

Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.

That will not trust thee but for profit's
When Talbot hath set footing once in France, [ill,
And fashion'd thee that instrument of
Who then but English Henry will be lord,
And thou be thrust out like a fugitive?
Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof;
Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe?
And was he not in England prisoner?
And when they heard he was thine enemy, [paid,
They set him free without his ransom
In spite of Burgundy and all his friends.
See then, thou fight'st against thy countrymen, [slaughter-men.
And join'st with them will be thy

My forces and my power of men are
So, farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust thee.

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd
And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers,
And seek how we may prejudice the foe. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Paris. The Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, EXETER; VERNON, BASSET, and Others. To them with his Soldiers, TALBOT.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable peers,
Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have awhile given truce unto my wars,
To do my duty to my sovereign:
In sign whereof, this arm, that hath reclaim'd
To your obedience fifty fortresses,
Twelve cities and seven walled towns of strength, [esteem,
Beside five hundred prisoners of
Lets fall his sword before your highness' feet;
And with submissive loyalty of heart
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got
First to my God, and next unto your grace. [Kneels.

K. Hen. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester, [France?
That hath so long been resident in

Glou. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.

K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord!
When I was young, as yet I am not old,
I do remember how my father said
A stouter champion never handled sword. [truth,
Long since we were resolved of your
Your faithful service and your toil in war;
Yet never have you tasted our reward,
Or been reguerdon'd with so much as thanks, [face:
Because till now we never saw your
Therefore, stand up; and, for these good deserts, [bury;
We here create you Earl of Shrews-
And in our coronation take your place.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,
Disgracing of these colours that I wear
In honour of my noble Lord of York:
Darest thou maintain the former words thou spakest? [patronage
Bas. Yes, sir; as well as you dare
The envious barking of your saucy tongue
Against my lord the Duke of Somerset.
Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is. [man as York.
Bas. Why, what is he? as good a
Ver. Hark ye; not so: in witness, take ye that. [Strikes him.
Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such [death,
That whoso draws a sword, 'tis present
Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood.
But I'll unto his majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to venge this wrong;
When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy cost.
Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you; [would.
And, after, meet you sooner than you [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Paris. A Hall of State.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WINCHESTER, WARWICK, TALBOT, the Governor of Paris, and Others.

Glou. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.
Win. God save King Henry, of that name the Sixth! [your oath,
Glou. Now, governor of Paris, take
That you elect no other king but him;
Esteem none friends but such as are his friends, [pretend
And none your foes but such as shall
Malicious practices against his state:
This shall ye do, so help you righteous God!

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,
To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your grace from the Duke of Burgundy. [gundy and thee!
Tal. Shame to the Duke of Bur-
I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next,
To tear the garter from thy craven's leg,
[Plucking it off.
Which I have done, because unworthily
Thou wast installed in that high degree.
Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,
When but in all I was six thousand strong, [to one,
And that the French were almost ten
Before we met or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire did run away:
In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself and divers gentlemen besid
Were there surprised and taken prisoners. [amiss;
Then judge, great lords, if I have done
Or whether that such cowards ought to wear
This ornament of knighthood, yea or no.
Glou. To say the truth, this fact was infamous
And ill beseeming any common man;
Much more a knight, a captain and a leader. [dain'd, my lords,
Tal. When first this order was or-
Knights of the garter were of noble birth; [courage,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty
Such as were grown to credit by the wars; [distress,
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for
But always resolute in most extremes.
He then that is not furnish'd in this sort [knight,
Doth but usurp the sacred name of
Profaning this most honourable order;
And should, if I were worthy to be judge, [swain
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.
K. Hen. Stain to thy countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom!
Be packing, therefore, thou that wast a knight:
Henceforth we banish thee, on pain of death. [Exit FASTOLFE.
And now, my lord protector, view the letter
Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.
Glou. What means his grace, that he hath changed his style?

No more but, plain and bluntly, 'To the king?'
Hath he forgot he is his sovereign?
Or doth this churlish superscription
Pretend some alteration in good will?
What's here?

[Reads] 'I have upon special cause,
Moved with compassion of my country's wreck,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds upon,
Forsaken your pernicious faction
And join'd with Charles, the rightful King of France.'

O monstrous treachery! can this be so,
That in alliance, amity, and oaths,
There should be found such false dissembling guile?

K. Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt? [come your foe.

Glou. He doth, my lord; and is be-

K. Hen. Is that the worst this letter doth contain? [he writes.

Glou. It is the worst, and all, my lord,

K. Hen. Why then, Lord Talbot there shall talk with him,
And give him chastisement for this abuse.
How say you, my lord? are you not content?

Tal. Content, my liege! yes, but that I am prevented, [employ'd,
I should have begg'd I might have been

K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight:
Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason, [friends.
And what offence it is to flout his

Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes.
[Exit.

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign! [combat too!

Bas. And me, my lord, grant me the York. This is my servant: hear him, noble prince! [favour him!

Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry,

K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak.
Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom?

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.

Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong.

K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both complain? [you.
First let me know, and then I'll answer

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into France, [tongue,
This fellow here, with envious carping
Upbraided me about the rose I wear;
Saying, the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks, [truth
When stubbornly he did repugn the
About a certain question in the law
Argued betwixt the Duke of York and him;
With other vile and ignominious terms:
In confutation of which rude reproach,
And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms.

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord: [conceit
For though he seem with forged quaint
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provoked by him; [badge,
And he first took exceptions at this
Pronouncing that the paleness of this flower [heart.
Bewray'd the faintness of my master's

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?

Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out, [it.
Though ne'er so cunningly you smother

K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness rules in brain-sick men,
When for so slight and frivolous a cause
Such factious emulations shall arise!
Good cousins both, of York and Somerset, [peace.
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at

York. Let this dissension first be tried by fight, [a peace.
And then your highness shall command

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;
Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset. [at first.

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord. [your strife!

Glou. Confirm it so! Confounded be

And perish ye, with your audacious prate! [ashamed
Presumptuous vassals! are you not
With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the king and us?
And you, my lords, methinks you do not well
To bear with their perverse objections;
Much less to take occasion from their mouths
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves:
Let me persuade you take a better course.

Exe. It grieves his highness: good my lords, be friends.

K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be combatants:
Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour, [cause.
Quite to forget this quarrel and the
And you, my lords, remember where we are; [nation:
In France, amongst a fickle wavering
If they perceive dissension in our looks,
And that within ourselves we disagree,
How will their grudging stomachs be provoked
To wilful disobedience, and rebel!
Beside, what infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henry's peers and chief nobility
Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France! [father,
O, think upon the conquest of my
My tender years, and let us not forego
That for a trifle that was bought with blood!
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.
I see no reason, if I wear this rose,
[Putting on a red rose.
That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset than York:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both: [crown,
As well they may upbraid me with my
Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is crown'd.
But your discretions better can persuade
Than I am able to instruct or teach:
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.
Cousin of York, we institute your grace
To be our regent in these parts of France:
And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot; [progenitors,
And, like true subjects, sons of your
Go cheerfully together and digest
Your angry choler on your enemies.
Ourself, my lord protector, and the rest,
After some respite will return to Calais;
From thence to England; where I hope ere long
To be presented, by your victories,
With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but YORK, WARWICK, EXETER, and VERNON.

War. My Lord of York, I promise you, the king [orator.
Prettily, methought, did play the

In that he wears the badge of Somerset.

War. Tush! that was but his fancy, blame him not;
I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm. [it rest;

York. An if I wist he did,—but let
Other affairs must now be managed.
[Exeunt all but EXETER.

Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice; [out,
For, had the passions of thy heart burst
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there [raging broils,
More rancorous spite, more furious
Than yet can be imagined or supposed.
But howsoe'er, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of nobility,
This shouldering of each other in the court, [ites,
This factious bandying of their favour-
But that it doth presage some ill event.
'Tis much when sceptres are in children's hands; [division;
But more when envy breeds unkind
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Before Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter;
Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter, on the Walls, the General of the French Forces, and Others:

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry King of England:
And thus he would: Open your city gates;
Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects,
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power:
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire,
Who in a moment even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge!
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face,
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo! there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit:
This is the latest glory of thy praise
That I, thy enemy, due thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul,
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Walls.

[Exeunt General, etc., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.
O, negligent and heedless discipline!
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Mazed with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be then in blood;
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch,
But rather moody-mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's right,
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter YORK, with Forces; to him, a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

Mess. They are return'd, my lord, and give it out
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot: as he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,
Which join'd with him and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid;
And I am lowted by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevalier:
God comfort him in this necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot;
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron,

And hemm'd about with grim destruction:
To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux, York!
Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour.
York. O God, that Somerset, who in proud heart
Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's place!
So should we save a valiant gentleman
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire and wrathful fury makes me weep,
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.
Lucy. O, send some succour to the distress'd lord!
York. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike word;
We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;
All 'long of this vile traitor Somerset.
Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul! and on his son young John, whom two hours since
I met in travel toward his warlike father!
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;
And now they meet where both their lives are done.
York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot have
To bid his young son welcome to his grave?
Away! vexation almost stops my breath,
That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of death.
Lucy, farewell: no more my fortune can
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.
Maine, Blois, Poictiers, and Tours, won away.
'Long all of Somerset and his delay.
[Exit, with his Soldiers.
Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping neglection doth betray to loss
The conquest of our scarce cold conqueror,
That ever living man of memory,
Henry the Fifth; whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lands, and all hurry to loss. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Other Plains in Gascony.

Enter SOMERSET, with his Forces; a Captain of TALBOT'S with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York and Talbot
Too rashly plotted: all our general force
Might with a sally of the very town
Be buckled with: the over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure:
York set him on to fight and die in shame,
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.
Capt. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o'ermatch'd forces forth for aid.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Som. How now, Sir William! whither were you sent?
Lucy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold Lord Talbot;
Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions:
And whiles the honourable captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage lingering, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honour,
Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yields up his life unto a world of odds:
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy,
Alençon, Reignier, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.
Som. York set him on; York should have sent him aid.
Lucy. And York as fast upon your grace exclaims;
Swearing that you withhold his levied host,
Collected for this expedition.
Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse:
I owe him little duty, and less love;
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.
Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot.
Never to England shall he bear his life;
But dies, betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen straight:
Within six hours they will be at his aid.
Lucy. Too late comes rescue: he is ta'en or slain; [fled;
For fly he could not, if he would have
And fly would Talbot never, though he might. [then adieu!
Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot,
Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee
To tutor thee in stratagems of war;
That Talbot's name might be in thee revived [limbs,
When sapless age and weak unable
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.
But, O malignant and ill-boding stars!
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unavoided danger:
Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse; [escape
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt
By sudden flight: come, dally not, be gone. [I your son?
John. Is my name Talbot? and am
And shall I fly? O, if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard and a slave of me!
The world will say, he is not Talbot's blood, [stood.
That basely fled when noble Talbot
Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain. [turn again.
John. He that flies so will ne'er re-
Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.
John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly:
Your loss is great, so your regard should be; [in me.
My worth unknown, no loss is known
Upon my death the French can little boast;
In yours they wil., in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won; [done:
But mine it will, that no exploit have
You fled for vantage, every one will swear;
But, if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay,
If the first hour I shrink and run away.
Here, on my knee, I beg mortality,
Rather than life preserved with infamy.
Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?
John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.
Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go, [the foe.
John. To fight I will, but not to fly
Tal. Part of thy father may be saved in thee. [shame in me.
John. No part of him but will be
Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it.
John. Yes, your renowned name: shall flight abuse it?
Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.
John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.
If death be so apparent, then both fly.
Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die?
My age was never tainted with such shame. [of such blame?
John. And shall my youth be guilty
No more can I be sever'd from your side,
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide: [I;
Stay, go, do what you will, the like do
For live I will not, if my father die.
Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son,
Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die;
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarum. Excursions, wherein TALBOT'S Son is hemmed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight:
The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot? Pause, and take thy breath;

I gave thee life and rescued thee from death. [I thy son!
John. O, twice my father, twice am
The life thou gavest me first was lost and done, [fate,
Till with thy warlike sword, despite of
To my determined time thou gavest
new date.
Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire, [desire
It warm'd thy father's heart with proud
Of bold-faced victory. Then leaden age, [warlike rage,
Quicken'd with youthful spleen and Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy, [thee.
And from the pride of Gallia rescued
The ireful bastard Orleans, that drew blood [maidenhood
From thee, my boy, and had the
Of thy first fight, I soon encountered;
And, interchanging blows, I quickly
shed [grace
Some of his bastard blood; and in dis-
Bespoke him thus: 'Contaminated base
And misbegotten blood I spill of thine,
Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of mine
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy:'
Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care; [thou fare?
Art not thou weary, John? how dost
Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?
Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead: [stead.
The help of one stands me in little
O, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small boat! [rage,
If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age:
By me they nothing gain an if I stay;
'Tis but the shortening of my life one day: [hold's name,
In thee thy mother dies, our house-
My death's revenge, thy youth, and
England's fame: [stay;
All these and more we hazard by thy
All these are saved if thou wilt fly away.
John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;
These words of yours draw life-blood
from my heart: [shame,
On that advantage, bought with such a
To save a paltry life and slay bright fame, [fly,
Before young Talbot from old Talbot
The coward horse that bears me fall and die! [France,
And like me to the peasant boys of
To be shame's scorn and subject of mischance!
Surely, by all the glory you have won,
An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son:
Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot;
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.
Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate
sire of Crete,
Thou Icarus; thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side;
And, commendable proved, let's die in pride. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter old TALBOT wounded, supported by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life? mine own is gone; [valiant John?
O, where's young Talbot? where is Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity, [at thee:
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile
When he perceived me shrink and on my knee, [me,
His bloody sword he brandish'd over
And, like a hungry lion, did commence
Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience; [alone,
But when my angry guardant stood
Tendering my ruin and assail'd of none,
Dizzy-eyed fury and great rage of heart
Suddenly made him from my side to start [French;
Into the clustering battle of the
And in that sea of blood my boy did
drench [died,
His over-mounting spirit, and there
My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of JOHN TALBOT.

Serv. O my dear lord! lo, where your son is borne!
Tal. Thou antic death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,
Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,

Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
In thy despite shall 'scape mortality.
O thou, whose wounds become hard-favour'd death, [breath!
Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy
Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no;
Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say, [died to-day.
Had death been French, then death had
Come, come and lay him in his father's arms:
My spirit can no longer bear these harms. [have,
Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave. [Dies.

Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies. Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BURGUNDY, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in, [this.
We should have found a bloody day of Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging-wood,
Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood! [thus I said:
Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and 'Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid:' [scorn,
But, with a proud majestical high
He answer'd thus: 'Young Talbot was not born
To be the pillage of a giglot wench:'
So, rushing in the bowels of the French,
He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.
Bur. Doubtless he would have made a noble knight:
See, where he lies inhearsed in the arms
Of the most bloody nurser of his harms!
Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder, [wonder.
Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's
Char. O, no, forbear! for that which we have fled [dead.
During the life, let us not wrong it

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY, attended; a French Herald preceding.

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's tent,
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day. [art thou sent?
Char. On what submissive message
Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word; [means.
We English warriors wot not what it
I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en
And to survey the bodies of the dead.
Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prison is.
But tell me whom thou seek'st.
Lucy. Where is the great Alcides of the field, [bury?
Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrews-
Created, for his rare success in arms,
Great Earl of Washford, Waterford and Valence;
Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton,
Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,
The thrice-victorious Lord of Falconbridge; [George,
Knight of the noble order of Saint
Worthy Saint Michael and the Golden Fleece;
Great mareshal to Henry the Sixth
Of all his wars within the realm of France? [indeed!
Puc. Here is a silly stately style
The Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath,
Writes not so tedious a style as this.
Him that thou magnifiest with all these titles [feet.
Stinking and fly-blown lies here at our
Lucy. Is Talbot slain, the Frenchmen's only scourge,
Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis? [turn'd,
O, were mine eyeballs into bullets
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces! [life!
O, that I could but call these dead to
It were enough to fright the realm of France: [here,
Were but his picture left among you
It would amaze the proudest of you all.
Give me their bodies; that I may bear them hence, [worth.
And give them burial as beseems their

He speaks with such a proud command-

For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them here, [air.
They would but stink, and putrefy the
Char. Go, take their bodies hence.
Lucy. I'll bear them hence;
But from their ashes shall be rear'd
A phœnix that shall make all France afeard.
Char. So we be rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt.
And now to Paris, in this conquering vein:
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. The Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER.

K. Hen. Have you perused the letters from the pope, [nac?
The emperor, and the Earl of Armag-
Glou. I have, my lord; and their intent is this:
They humbly sue unto your excellence
To have a godly peace concluded of
Between the realms of England and of France. [their motion?
K. Hen. How doth your grace affect Glou. Well, my good lord; and as the only means
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And stablish quietness on every side.
K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought
It was both impious and unnatural
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith. [effect
Glou. Beside, my lord, the sooner to
And surer bind this knot of amity,
The Earl of Armagnac, near knit to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,
Proffers his only daughter to your grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry. [years are young!
K. Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas, my
And fitter is my study and my books
Than wanton dalliance with a paramour. [please,
Yet, call the ambassadors; and, as you
So let them have their answers every one:
I shall be well content with any choice
Tends to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter WINCHESTER in Cardinal's habit, a Legate, and two Ambassadors.

Exe. What! is my Lord of Winchester install'd,
And call'd unto a cardinal's degree?
Then I perceive that will be verified
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy,
'If once he come to be a cardinal,
He'll make his cap coequal with the crown.' [several suits
K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your
Have been consider'd and debated on.
Your purpose is both good and reasonable;
And therefore are we certainly resolved
To draw conditions of a friendly peace;
Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean [France.
Shall be transported presently to Glou. And for the proffer of my lord your master, [large,
I have inform'd his highness so at
As—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her dower— [queen.
He doth intend she shall be England's

And so, my lord protector, see them guarded [inshipp'd
And safely brought to Dover; where
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

Win. Stay, my lord legate: you shall first receive
The sum of money which I promised
Should be deliver'd to his holiness
For clothing me in these grave ornaments. [ship's leisure.
Leg. I will attend upon your lord-
Win. [Aside.] Now Winchester will not submit, I trow,
Or be inferior to the proudest peer.
Humphrey of Gloucester, thou shalt well perceive
That, neither in birth or for authority,
The bishop will be overborne by thee:
I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits :
'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt
And turn again unto the warlike French.
Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France,
And keep not back your powers in dal- [liance.
Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn to us ;
Else, ruin combat with their palaces !

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplices !
Char. What tidings send our scouts ? I prithee, speak. [ded was Mess. The English army, that divi-
Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
And means to give you battle presently.
Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is ;
But we will presently provide for them.
Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there : [fear.
Now he is gone, my lord, you need not
Puc. Of all base passions, fear is most accursed. [shall be thine,
Command the conquest, Charles, it
Let Henry fret and all the world repine.
Char. Then on, my lords ; and France be fortunate ! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before Angiers.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.

Puc. The regent conquers, and the Frenchmen fly. [apts ;
Now help, ye charming spells and peri-
And ye choice spirits that admonish me
And give me signs of future accidents.
[Thunder.
You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprise !

Enter Fiends.

This speedy quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustom'd diligence to me.
Now, ye familiar spirits, that are cull'd
Out of the powerful regions under earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field.
[They walk about, and speak not.
O, hold me not with silence over-long !
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
I'll lop a member off and give it you
In earnest of a further benefit.
So you do condescend to help me now.
[They hang their heads.
No hope to have redress ? My body shall [suit.
Pay recompense, if you will grant my
[They shake their heads.
Cannot my body nor blood-sacrifice
Entreat you to your wonted furtherance ? [all,
Then take my soul, my body, soul and
Before that England give the French the foil. [They depart.
See, they forsake me ! Now the time is come [crest,
That France must vail her lofty-plumed
And let her head fall into England's lap.
My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with :
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust. [Exit.

Alarums. Enter French and English, fighting ; LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand. LA PUCELLE is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast : [charms,
Unchain your spirits now with spelling
And try if they can gain your liberty.
A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace !
See, how the ugly witch doth bend her brows, [shape !
As if with Circe she would change my

Puc. I prithee, give me leave to curse

York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter SUFFOLK, leading in LADY MARGARET.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner. [Gazes on her.
O fairest beauty, do not fear nor fly!
For I will touch thee but with reverent hands.
I kiss these fingers for eternal peace,
And lay them gently on thy tender side.
Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee. [daughter to a king,
Mar. Margaret my name, and
The King of Naples, whosoe'er thou art.
Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.
Be not offended, nature's miracle,
Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me:
So doth the swan her downy cygnets save, [wings.
Keeping them prisoner underneath her
Yet, if this servile usage once offend,
Go, and be free again as Suffolk's friend.
[She turns away as going.
O, stay!—I have no power to let her pass; [says no.
My hand would free her, but my heart
As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,
Twinkling another counterfeited beam,
So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes. [speak:
Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not
I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind.
Fie, de la Pole! disable not thyself;
Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner?
Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?
Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such,
Confounds the tongue and makes the senses rough. [name be so,—
Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk,—if thy
What ransom must I pay before I pass?
For I perceive I am thy prisoner.
Suf. [Aside.] How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit,
Before thou make a trial of her love?
Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?
Suf. [Aside.] She's beautiful, and therefore to be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore to be won.
Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom, yea or no?
Suf. [Aside.] Fond man! remember that thou hast a wife;
Then how can Margaret be thy paramour? [will not hear.
Mar. I were best leave him, for he
Suf. [Aside.] There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.
Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad. [may be had.
Suf. [Aside.] And yet a dispensation
Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.
Suf. [Aside.] I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom?
Why, for my king: tush, that's a wooden thing! [carpenter.
Mar. He talks of wood; it is some
Suf. [Aside.] Yet so my fancy may be satisfied, [realms.
And peace established between these
But there remains a scruple in that too;
For though her father be the King of Naples, [poor,
Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet he is
And our nobility will scorn the match.
Mar. Hear ye, captain, are you not at leisure?
Suf. [Aside.] It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much:
Henry is youthful and will quickly yield.—
Madam, I have a secret to reveal.
Mar. [Aside.] What though I be enthrall'd? he seems a knight,
And will not any way dishonour me.
Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.
Mar. [Aside.] Perhaps I shall be rescued by the French;
And then I need not crave his courtesy.
Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—
Mar. [Aside.] Tush! women have been captivate ere now.
Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?
Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but Quid for Quo. [not suppose
Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you
Your bondage happy, to be made a queen? [more vile
Mar. To be a queen in bondage is
Than is a slave in base servility;
For princes should be free.
Suf. And so shall you,

If happy England's royal king be free.
Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?
Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen,
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand,
And set a precious crown upon thy head,
If thou wilt condescend to be my—
Mar. What?
Suf. His love.
Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.
Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am
To woo so fair a dame to be his wife
And have no portion in the choice myself.
How say you, madam, are you so content?
Mar. An if my father please, I am content.
Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth.—
And, madam, at your father's castle walls
We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

Troops come forward.

A Parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER, on the Walls.

See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner!
Reig. To whom?
Suf. To me.
Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?
I am a soldier, and unapt to weep
Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.
Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:
Consent, and for thy honour give consent,
Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king;
Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;
And this her easy-held imprisonment
Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.
Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?
Suf. Fair Margaret knows
That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.
Reig. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend
To give thee answer of thy just demand.

Exit from the Walls.

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming.

Trumpets sounded. Enter REIGNIER, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories:
Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.
Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,
Fit to be made companion with a king:
What answer makes your grace unto my suit? her little worth
Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her
To be the princely bride of such a lord;
Upon condition I may quietly
Enjoy mine own, the county Maine and Anjou,
Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.
Suf. That is her ransom; I deliver her;
And those two counties I will undertake
Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.
Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name,
As deputy unto that gracious king,
Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.
Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,
Because this is in traffic of a king.
[Aside] And yet, methinks, I could be well content
To be mine own attorney in this case.—
I'll over then to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemnized.
So farewell, Reignier; set this diamond safe
In golden palaces, as it becomes.
Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian prince, King Henry, were he here.
Mar. Farewell, my lord: good wishes, praise and prayers,
Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret.

Going.

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam: but hark you, Margaret;
No princely commendations to my king?
Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,
A virgin and his servant, say to him,
Suf. Words sweetly placed and modestly directed.
But, madam, I must trouble you again;
No loving token to his majesty?
Mar. Yes, my good lord; a pure unspotted heart,
Never yet taint with love, I send the king.
Suf. And this withal.

Kisses her.

Mar. That for thyself: I will not so presume
To send such peevish tokens to a king.
[Exeunt REIGNIER and MARGARET.
Suf. O, wert thou for myself! But, Suffolk, stay; [rinth;
Thou mayst not wander in that laby-
There Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk.
Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise:
Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount,
And natural graces that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas, [Henry's feet,
That, when thou comest to kneel at
Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Camp of the DUKE OF YORK, in Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and Others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress condemn'd to burn.

Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded, and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's heart outright! [near,
Have I sought every country far and
And, now it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?
Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee! [wretch!
Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble
I am descended of a gentler blood:
Thou art no father nor no friend of mine.
Shep. Out, out! My lords, an please you, 'tis not so;
I did beget her, all the parish knows:
Her mother liveth yet, can testify
She was the first fruit of my bachelorship. [parentage?
War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy

Wicked and vile; and so her death
Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle! [flesh;
God knows thou art a collop of my
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
Deny me not, I prithee, gentle Joan.
Puc. Peasant, avaunt!—You have suborn'd this man,
Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.
Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest [mother.
The morn that I was wedded to her
Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.
Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time
Of thy nativity! I would the milk
Thy mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her breast,
Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake!
Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field, [thee!
I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten
Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab?
O, burn her, burn her! hanging is too good. [Exit.
York. Take her away; for she hath lived too long,
To fill the world with vicious qualities.
Puc. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:
Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issued from the progeny of kings;
Virtuous and holy; chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked spirits:
But you, that are polluted with your lusts, [innocents,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices, [have,
Because you want the grace that others
You judge it straight a thing impossible [devils.
To compass wonders but by help of
No, misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been
A virgin from her tender infancy,
Chaste and immaculate in very thought;
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effused, [heaven.
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of York. Ay, ay; away with her to execution! [she is a maid,
War. And hark ye, sirs; because
Spare for no fagots, let there be enow:
Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.
Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?—
Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity,

That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.—
I am with child, ye bloody homicides:
Murder not then the fruit within my womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.
York. Now heaven forfend! the holy maid with child!
War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought: [this?
Is all your strict preciseness come to
York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling: [fuge.
I did imagine what would be her re-
War. Well, go to; we will have no bastards live;
Especially since Charles must father it.
Puc. You are deceived; my child is none of his:
It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.
York. Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!
It dies, an if it had a thousand lives.
Puc. O, give me leave, I have deluded you; [duke I named,
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the
But Reignier, King of Naples, that prevail'd. [intolerable.
War. A married man! that's most
York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well, [accuse.
There were so many, whom she may

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a
Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and thee:
Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.
Puc. Then lead me hence; with whom I leave my curse:
May never glorious sun reflex his beams
Upon the country where you make abode; [death
But darkness and the gloomy shade of
Environ you, till mischief and despair
Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves! [Exit, guarded.
York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes,
Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence [king.
With letters of commission from the
For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Moved with remorse of these outrageous broils,
Have earnestly implored a general peace [French;
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring
And here at hand the Dauphin and his train [matter.
Approacheth, to confer about some
York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?
After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers, [thrown
That in this quarrel have been over-
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit, [peace?
Shall we at last conclude effeminate
Have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquered?
O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.
War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a peace, [covenants
It shall be with such strict and severe
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, attended; ALENÇON, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed [in France,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd
We come to be informed by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be. [ing choler chokes
York. Speak, Winchester; for boil-
The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our baleful enemies.
Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus: [sent,
That, in regard King Henry gives con-
Of mere compassion and of lenity,
To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace, [crown:
You shall become true liegemen to his
And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be placed as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet,
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man?
This proffer is absurd and reasonless.
Char. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd [tories,
With more than half the Gallian terri-
And therein reverenced for their lawful king: [quish'd,
Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvan-
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador, I'll rather keep
That which I have than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.
York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means
Used intercession to obtain a league,
And, now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?
Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars. [obstinacy
Reig. My lord, you do not well in
To cavil in the course of this contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one
We shall not find like opportunity.
Alen. [Aside to CHARLES.] To say the truth, it is your policy
To save your subjects from such massacre [seen
And ruthless slaughters as are daily
By our proceeding in hostility;
And therefore take this compact of a truce, [sure serves.
Although you break it when your plea-
War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?
Char. It shall;
Only reserved, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.
York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty,
As thou art knight, never to disobey
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England. [please;
So, now dismiss your army when ye
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—London. The Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, in conference with SUFFOLK; GLOUCESTER and EXETER following.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl, [me:
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd
Her virtues graced with external gifts
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart:
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven, by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.
Suf. Tush! my good lord, this superficial tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise;
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
Had I sufficient skill to utter them,
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit:
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full-replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind
She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honour Henry as her lord.
K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume. [sent Therefore, my lord protector, give con-
That Margaret may be England's royal queen. [flatter sin.
Glou. So should I give consent to
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem:
How shall we then dispense with that contract, [proach?
And not deface your honour with re-
Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths;
Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds:
A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glou. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?
His father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel.
Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem;
And of such great authority in France
As his alliance will confirm our peace
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.
Glou. And so the Earl of Armagnac may do, [Charles.
Because he is near kinsman unto
Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower; [give.
While Reignier sooner will receive than
Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your king, [poor,
That he should be so abject, base, and
To choose for wealth and not for perfect love.
Henry is able to enrich his queen,
And not to seek a queen to make him rich: [wives,
So worthless peasants bargain for their
As market men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship,
Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed:
And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
It most of all these reasons bindeth us,
In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
For what is wedlock forced but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.
Whom should we match with Henry, being a king, [king?
But Margaret, that is daughter to a
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none but for a king:
Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit,
More than in women commonly is seen,
Will answer our hope in issue of a king,
For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,
If with a lady of so high resolve
As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love.
Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with me [but she.
That Margaret shall be queen, and none
K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,
My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that
My tender youth was never yet attaint
With any passion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell; but this I am assured,
I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,
Such fierce alarums both of hope and fear, [thoughts.
As I am sick with working of my
Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to France;
Agree to any covenants, and procure
That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come [crown'd
To cross the seas to England and be
King Henry's faithful and anointed queen:
For your expenses and sufficient charge,
Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone, I say, for, till you do return,
I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.
And you, good uncle, banish all offence:
If you do censure me by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will.
And so, conduct me where, from company
I may revolve and ruminate my grief. [Exit.
Glou. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.
[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and EXETER.
Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes,
As did the youthful Paris once to Greece,
With hope to find the like event in love,
But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king;
But I will rule both her, the king and realm. [Exit.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. The Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets: then Hautboys. Enter, on one side, KING HENRY, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT; on the other, QUEEN MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK; YORK, SOMERSET, BUCKINGHAM, and Others, following.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As procurator to your excellence,
To marry Princess Margaret for your grace;
So, in the famous ancient city, Tours,
In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil,
The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne and Alençon,
Seven earls, twelve barons, twenty reverend bishops,
I have perform'd my task, and was espoused:
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers,
Deliver up my title in the queen
To your most gracious hands, that are the substance
Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
The fairest queen that ever king received.
K. Hen. Suffolk, arise,—Welcome, Queen Margaret:
I can express no kinder sign of love
Than this kind kiss. O Lord, that lends me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!
For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face,
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.
Q. Mar. Great King of England and my gracious lord,
The mutual conference that my mind hath had,
By day, by night, waking and in my dreams,
In courtly company or at my beads,

With you, mine alder-liefest sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms; such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish; but her grace in speech, [majesty,
Her words y-clad with wisdom's
Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys; [tent.
Such is the fulness of my heart's con-
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. Long live Queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.

Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace, [peace
Here are the articles of contracted
Between our sovereign and the French king Charles, [consent.
For eighteen months concluded by

Glou. [Reads.]

'Imprimis, It is agreed between the French king Charles, and William de la Pole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, that the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem; and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. Item, that the Duchy of Anjou and the County of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father'—

[Lets the paper fall.

K. Hen. Uncle, how now!

Glou. Pardon me, gracious lord; Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart [no further.
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Car. [Reads.]

'Item, It is further agreed between them, that the Duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry.'

K. Hen. They please us well. Lord marquess, kneel down:
We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,
And gird thee with the sword.
Cousin of York, we here discharge your grace [France,
From being regent in the parts of
Till term of eighteen months be full expired.
Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloucester, York, and Buckingham,
Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick;
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and SUFFOLK.

Glou. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, [his grief,
To you Duke Humphrey must unload
Your grief, the common grief of all the land. [youth,
What! did my brother Henry spend his
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat, [ance?
To conquer France, his true inherit-
And did my brother Bedford toil his wits,
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham, [Warwick,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious
Received deep scars in France and Normandy? [self,
Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and my-
With all the learned council of the realm, [house
Studied so long, sat in the council-
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?
And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes? [honours die?
And shall these labours and these
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance, [die?
Your deeds of war and all our counsel
O peers of England, shameful is this league!
Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame, [memory,
Blotting your names from books of
Razing the characters of your renown,
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance?
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.
Glou. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;
But now it is impossible we should:
Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,
Hath given the Duchies of Anjou and Maine
Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.
Sal. Now, by the death of Him that died for all,
These counties were the keys of Normandy:
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?
War. For grief that they are past recovery:
For, were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.
Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities, that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?
Mort Dieu!
York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate,
That dims the honour of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart,
Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had
Large sums of gold and dowries with their wives;
And our King Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages.
Glou. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth
For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have stay'd in France and starved in France,
Before—
Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now you grow too hot:
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.
Glou. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind;
'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble you.
Rancour will out: proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury: if I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.
Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied France will be lost ere long. [Exit.
Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
'Tis known to you he is mine enemy,
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all;
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.
Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown:
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeased at it.
Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts; be wise and circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him 'Humphrey, the good Duke of Gloucester,'
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice
'Jesu maintain your royal excellence!'
With 'God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!'
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.
Buck. Why should he, then, protect our sovereign,
He being of age to govern of himself?
Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,
And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk,
We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat.
Car. This weighty business will not brook delay;
I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.
Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride
And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal:
His insolence is more intolerable
Than all the princes in the land beside:
If Gloucester be displaced, he'll be protector,
Buck. Or thou or I, Somerset, will be protector,
Despite Duke Humphrey or the cardinal:
[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET.
Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.
While these do labour for their own preferment,

Behoves it us to labour for the realm.
I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloucester
Did bear him like a noble gentleman.
Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal,
More like a soldier than a man o' the church,
As stout and proud as he were lord of all,
Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself
Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.
Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy housekeeping,
Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,
Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey:
And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil discipline;
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wert regent for our sovereign,
Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people:
Join we together, for the public good,
In what we can, to bridle and suppress
The pride of Suffolk and the cardinal,
With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;
And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's deeds,
While they do tend the profit of the land.
War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land,
And common profit of his country!
York. [Aside.] And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.
Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main.
War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost;
That Maine which by main force Warwick did win,
And would have kept so long as breath did last!
Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine,
Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

[Exeunt WARWICK and SALISBURY.

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French;
Paris is lost; the state of Normandy
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone:
Suffolk concluded on the articles,
The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleased
To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.
I cannot blame them all: what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.
Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,
And purchase friends, and give to courtezans,
Still revelling like lords till all be gone;
While as the silly owner of the goods
Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,
While all is shared and all is borne away,
Ready to starve and dare not touch his own.
So York must sit and fret and bite his tongue,
While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold.
Methinks the realms of England, France, and Ireland
Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood
As did the fatal brand Althæa burn'd
Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.
Anjou and Maine both given unto the French!
Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.
A day will come when York shall claim his own;
And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts
And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey,
And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit:
Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,
Nor wear the diadem upon his head,
Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.
Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:
Watch thou and wake when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state;
Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love,
With his new bride and England's dear-bought queen,
And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars:
Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfumed;
And in my standard bear the arms of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,
Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. The DUKE OF GLOUCESTER'S House.

Enter GLOUCESTER and the DUCHESS.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,
As frowning at the favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem,
Enchased with all the honours of the world?
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the same.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold.
What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine;
And, having both together heaved it up,
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven;
And never more abase our sight so low
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glou. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,
Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts.
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world!
My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it
With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glou. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,
Was broke in twain; by whom I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was by the cardinal;
And on the pieces of the broken wand
Were placed the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset, Suffolk.
And William de la Pole, first Duke of
This was my dream: what it doth bode, God knows. argument

Duch. Tut, this was nothing but an
That he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove
Shall lose his head for his presumption.
But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:
Methought I sat in seat of majesty
In the cathedral church of Westminster,
And in that chair where kings and queens are crown'd;
Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to me,
And on my head did set the diadem.

Glou. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outright:
Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtured Eleanor!
Art thou not second woman in the realm,
And the protector's wife, beloved him?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband and thyself
From top of honour to disgrace's feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more!

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you so choleric
With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?
Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd.

Glou. Nay, be not angry; I am pleased again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure you do prepare to ride unto Saint Albans,
Where as the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glou. I go. Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, good my lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and Messenger.

Follow I must; I cannot go before,
While Gloucester bears this base and humble mind.
Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks
And smooth my way upon their headless necks;
And, being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in Fortune's pageant.
Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not, man,
We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What say'st thou? majesty! I am but grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice,
Your grace's title shall be multiplied.
Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet conferr'd [witch,
With Margery Jourdain, the cunning And Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer? And will they undertake to do me good?
Hume. This they have promised, to show your highness [ground,
A spirit raised from depth of under- That shall make answer to such questions [him.
As by your grace shall be propounded
Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions: [return,
When from Saint Albans we do make We'll see these things effected to the full. [merry, man,
Here, Hume, take this reward; make With thy confederates in this weighty cause. [Exit.
Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold;
Marry, and shall. But how now, Sir John Hume! [but mum:
Seal up your lips, and give no words The business asketh silent secrecy.
Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch: [devil.
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a Yet have I gold flies from another coast;
I dare not say, from the rich cardinal And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk;
Yet I do find it so; for, to be plain,
They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour, [duchess
Have hired me to undermine the And buz these conjurations in her brain.
They say 'A crafty knave does need no broker;' [broker.
Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's

To call them both a pair of crafty

Hume's knavery will be the duchess' And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall:
Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Palace.

Enter three or four Petitioners, PETER, the Armourer's man, being one.

First Petit. My masters, let's stand close: my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.
Sec. Petit. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN MARGARET.

Peter. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.
Sec. Petit. Come back, fool; this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.
Suf. How now, fellow! wouldst any thing with me?
First Petit. I pray, my lord, pardon me; I took ye for my lord protector.
Q. Mar. [Reading the superscription.] 'To my Lord Protector!' Are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: what is thine?
First Petit. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.
Suf. Thy wife too! that's some wrong, indeed.—What's yours?—What's here! [Reads] 'Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.'—How now, sir knave!
Sec. Petit. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.
Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.
Q. Mar. What sayest thou? did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown?
Peter. That my master was? no, forsooth: my master said that he was; and that the king was an usurper.
Suf. Who is there?

Enter Servants.

Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently:—we'll hear more of your matter before the king. [Exeunt Servants with PETER.
Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected [grace,
Under the wings of our protector's Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.
[Tears the Petitions.

Away base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone.

[Exeunt Petitioners.

Q. Mar. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,
Is this the fashion in the court of England?
Is this the government of Britain's isle,
And this the royalty of Albion's king?
What, shall King Henry be a pupil still
Under the surly Gloucester's governance?
Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?
I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours
Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,
And stolest away the ladies' hearts of France,
I thought King Henry had resembled thee
In courage, courtship and proportion.
But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Maries on his beads;
His champions are the prophets and apostles;
His weapons holy saws of sacred writ;
His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canonized saints.
I would the college of the cardinals
Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome,
And set the triple crown upon his head:
That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
Your highness came to England, so will I
In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haught protector, have we Beaufort
The imperious churchman, Somerset, Buckingham,
And grumbling York; and not the least of these
But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of all
Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:
Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.
She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,
More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's wife:
Strangers in court do take her for the queen:
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our poverty:
Shall I not live to be avenged on her?
Contemptuous base-born callat as she is,
She vaunted 'mongst her minions t'other day,
The very train of her worst wearing gown
Was better worth than all my father's lands,
Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have limed a bush for her;
And placed a quire of such enticing birds,
That she will light to listen to the lays,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So, let her rest: and, madam, list to me:
For I am bold to counsel you in this.
Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him and with the lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.
As for the Duke of York, this late complaint
Will make but little for his benefit.
So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Sound a Sennet. Enter KING HENRY, YORK, and SOMERSET; DUKE and DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;
Or Somerset or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be denay'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent, I will yield to him.

War. Whether your grace be worthy, yea or no,
Dispute not that: York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

War. The cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Sal. Peace, son! and show some reason, Buckingham,
Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

Glou. Madam, the king is old enough himself
To give his censure: these are no women's matters.
Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your grace
To be protector of his excellence?
Glou. Madam, I am protector of the realm; [place.
And, at his pleasure, will resign my
Suf. Resign it then and leave thine insolence. [but thou?—
Since thou wert king,—as who is king
The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck; [seas;
The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the
And all the peers and nobles of the realm [reignty.
Have been as bondmen to thy sove-
Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags
Are lank and lean with thy extortions.
Som. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire
Have cost a mass of public treasury.
Buck. Thy cruelty in execution
Upon offenders hath exceeded law,
And left thee to the mercy of the law.
Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices and towns in France, [great,
If they were known, as the suspect is
Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.
[Exit GLOUCESTER. The QUEEN drops her Fan.
Give me my fan: what, minion! can ye not?
[Gives the DUCHESS a box on the ear.
I cry you mercy, madam; was it you?
Duch. Was't I! yea, I it was, proud Frenchwoman: [my nails,
Could I come near your beauty with
I'd set my ten commandments in your face. ['twas against her will.
K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet;
Duch. Against her will! Good king, look to't in time;
She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby:
Though in this place most master wear no breeches,
She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unrevenged. [Exit.
Buck. Lord cardinal, I will follow Eleanor, [proceeds:
And listen after Humphrey, how he
She's tickled now; her fume needs no spurs,
She'll gallop fast enough to her destruction. [Exit.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown [tangle,
With walking once about the quadri-
I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.
As for your spiteful false objections,
Prove them, and I lie open to the law:
But God in mercy so deal with my soul,
As I in duty love my king and country!
But, to the matter that we have in hand: [man
I say, my sovereign, York is meetest
To be your regent in the realm of France. [me leave
Suf. Before we make election, give
To show some reason, of no little force,
That York is most unmeet of any man.
York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet:
First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride;
Next, if I be appointed for the place,
My Lord of Somerset will keep me here,

SCENE IV.—The Same. GLOUCESTER'S Garden.

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay, what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go, in God's name, and leave us. [Exit HUME.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth; John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter DUCHESS aloft, HUME following.

Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome all. To this gear the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times:
Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night, [on fire;
The time of night when Troy was set

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.

Suf. True; made the lame to leap and fly away.

Glou. But you have done more miracles than I;
You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK

York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,
Our simple supper ended, give me leave
In this close walk to satisfy myself,
In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible, to England's crown.

Enter, on one side, Horner, and his Neighbours drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him; at the other side, Peter, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by Prentices drinking to him.

First Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack: and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

Sec. Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

Third Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter!

First Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee: and be not afraid.

Sec. Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer: and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord, bless me! I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows.—Sirrah, what's thy name.

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen: and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow!

York. Dispatch: this knave's tongue begins to double. Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants!

York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God! have I overcome mine enemy in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right!

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight;
For by his death we do perceive his guilt:
And God in justice hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully.
Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter GLOUCESTER and Serving-men, in mourning cloaks.

Glou. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud;
And after summer evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.
Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glou. Ten is the hour that was appointed me
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess:
Uneath may she endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people gazing on thy face,
With envious looks, still laughing at thy shame;
That erst did follow thy proud chariot-wheels
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
But, soft! I think she comes; and I'll prepare
My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, in a white sheet, with papers pinned upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; SIR JOHN STANLEY, a Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glou. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?
Now thou dost penance too. Look how they gaze!
See how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee!
Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful looks,
And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame,
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine!

Glou. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloucester, teach me to forget myself!
For whilst I think I am thy married wife,
And thou a prince, protector of this land,
Methinks I should not thus be led along,
Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back;
And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice
To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet;
And when I start, the envious people laugh
And bid me be advised how I tread.
Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?
Trow'st thou that e'er I'll look upon the world,
Or count them happy that enjoy the sun?

No; dark shall be my light, and night my day;
To think upon my pomp shall be my hell.
Sometime I'll say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife,
And he a prince and ruler of the land:
Yet so he ruled and such a prince he was
As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess,
Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock
To every idle rascal follower.
But be thou mild and blush not at my shame,
Nor stir at nothing till the axe of death
Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will;
For Suffolk,—he that can do all in all
With her that hateth thee and hates us all,—
And York and impious Beaufort, that false priest,
Have all limed bushes to betray thy wings,
And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee:
But fear not thou, until thy foot be snared,
Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.

Glou. Ah, Nell, forbear! thou aimest all awry;
I must offend before I be attainted;
And had I twenty times so many foes,
And each of them had twenty times their power,
All these could not procure me any scathe,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach?
Why, yet thy scandal were not wiped away,
But I in danger for the breach of law.
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:
I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;
These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's parliament,
Holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glou. And my consent ne'er ask'd therein before!
This is close dealing.—Well, I will be there.
My Nell, I take my leave: and, master sheriff,
Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.

Exit Herald.

Sher. An't please your grace, here my commission stays,
And Sir John Stanley is appointed now
To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glou. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady here?

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your grace.

Glou. Entreat her not the worse in that I pray
You use her well: the world may laugh again;
And I may live to do you kindness if
You do it her: and so, Sir John, farewell!

Duch. What, gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell!

Glou. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.

Exeunt GLOUCESTER and Serving-men.

Duch. Art thou gone too? all comfort go with thee!
For none abides with me: my joy is death,—
Death, at whose name I oft have been afear'd,
Because I wish'd this world's eternity.
Stanley, I prithee, go, and take me hence;
I care not whither, for I beg no favour,
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man;
There to be used according to your state.

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
And shall I then be used reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and Duke Humphrey's lady;
According to that state you shall be used.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare,
Although thou hast been conduct of my shame.

Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharged.
Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet,
And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:
No, it will hang upon my richest robes,
And show itself, attire me how I can.
Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison.

Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury Saint Edmunds.

Sound a Sennet. Enter to the Parliament, KING HENRY, QUEEN MAR-

GARET, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and Others.

K. Hen. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come :
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.
Q. Mar. Can you not see ? or will you not observe
The strangeness of his alter'd countenance ?
With what a majesty he bears himself ;
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself ?
We know the time since he was mild and affable ;
And if we did but glance a far-off look,
Immediately he was upon his knee,
That all the court admired him for submission :
But meet him now, and, be it in the morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,
And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
Disdaining duty that to us belongs.
Small curs are not regarded when they grin ;
But great men tremble when the lion roars ;
And Humphrey is no little man in England.
First note that he is near you in descent,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
Me seemeth then it is no policy,
Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears
And his advantage following your decease,
That he should come about your royal person
Or be admitted to your highness' council.
By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts ;
And when he please to make commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.
Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted ;
Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden,
And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
The reverent care I bear unto my lord
Made me collect these dangers in the duke.
If it be fond, call it a woman's fear ;
Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe and say I wrong'd the duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
Reprove my allegation, if you can ;
Or else conclude my words effectual.
Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke ;
And, had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think I should have told your graces' tale.
The duchess by his subornation,
Upon my life, began her devilish practices :
Or, if he were not privy to those faults,
Yet, by reputing of his high descent,
As next the king he was successive heir,
And such high vaunts of his nobility,
Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess
By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.
Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep ;
And in his simple show he harbours treason.
The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.
No, no, my sovereign ; Gloucester is a man
Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.
Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offences done ?
York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
Levy great sums of money through the realm
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it ?
By means whereof the towns each day revolted.
Buck. Tut ! these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey.
K. Hen. My lords, at once : the care you have of us,
To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise : but, shall I speak my conscience,
Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person
As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove :
The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given
To dream on evil or to work my downfall.
Q. Mar. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance !

Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's disposed as the hateful raven:
Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For he's inclined as is the ravenous wolf.
Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudful man.

Enter SOMERSET.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!

K. Hen. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories
Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.

K. Hen. Cold news, Lord Somerset: but God's will be done!

York. [Aside.] Cold news for me; for I had hope of France
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
And caterpillars eat my leaves away;
But I will remedy this gear ere long,
Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. All happiness unto my lord the king! Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon,
Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glou. Well, Suffolk's duke, thou shall not see me blush,
Nor change my countenance for this arrest:
A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.
The purest spring is not so free from mud
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign:
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France,
And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;
By means whereof his highness hath lost France.

Glou. Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?
I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,
Ay, night by night, in studying good for England!
That doit that e'er I wrested from the king,
Or any groat I hoarded to my use,
Be brought against me at my trial-day!
No; many a pound of mine own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I dispursed to the garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glou. I say no more than truth, so help me God!

York. In your protectorship you did devise
Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,
That England was defamed by tyranny.

Glou. Why, 'tis well known that, whiles I was protector,
Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief that fleeced poor passengers,
I never gave them condign punishment:
Murder indeed, that bloody sin, I tortured
Above the felon or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer'd;
But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness' name;
And here commit you to my lord cardinal
To keep, until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope that you will clear yourself from all suspects:
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glou. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous:
Virtue is choked with foul ambition
And charity chased hence by rancour's hand;
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity exiled your highness' land.
I know their complot is to have my life;
And if my death might make this island happy
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness:

But mine is made the prologue to their play ; [no peril,
For thousands more, that yet suspect
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.
Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice, [hate ;
And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy
Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue [heart ;
The envious load that lies upon his
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon, [back,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd
By false accuse doth level at my life :
And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest, [head ;
Causeless have laid disgraces on my
And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
My liefest liege to be mine enemy :
Ay, all of you have laid your heads together,— [ticles,—
Myself had notice of your conven-
And all to make away my guiltless life.
I shall not want false witness to condemn me, [guilt ;
Nor store of treasons to augment my

'A staff is quickly found to beat a

If those that care to keep your royal
From treason's secret knife and traitors' rage
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
And the offender granted scope of speech, [your grace.
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto

With ignominious words, though clerkly
As if she had suborned some to swear
False allegations to o'erthrow his state ?
Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave to chide. [I lose, indeed ;
Glou. Far truer spoke than meant :
Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false ! [speak.
And well such losers may have leave to
Buck. He'll wrest the sense and hold us here all day :
Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.
Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure.
Glou. Ah ! thus King Henry throws away his crutch
Before his legs be firm to bear his body :
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side, [gnaw thee first.
And wolves are gnarling who shall
Ah, that my fear were false ! ah, that it were ! [fear.
For, good King Henry, thy decay I
[Exit, guarded.
K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best,
Do or undo, as if ourself were here.
Q. Mar. What, will your highness leave the parliament ?
K. Hen. Ay, Margaret ; my heart is drown'd with grief,
Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes ;
My body round engirt with misery ;
For what's more miserable than discontent ? [see
Ah, uncle Humphrey ! in thy face I
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty ;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come [thy faith.
That e'er I proved thee false or fear'd
What louring star now envies thy estate, [our queen,
That these great lords, and Margaret
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life ?
Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man wrong ;
And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,
Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house, [him hence ;
Even so, remorseless, have they borne
And as the dam runs lowing up and down, [one went,
Looking the way her harmless young
And can do nought but wail her darling's loss, [cester's case
Even so myself bewails good Glou-
With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd eyes

So mighty are his vowed enemies.
His fortunes I will weep ; and 'twixt each groan [is none.'
Say 'Who's a traitor ? Gloucester he [Exeunt all but QUEEN, CARD. BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK, and YORK ; SOMERSET remains apart.
Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.
Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,

Too full of foolish pity; and Gloucester's show
Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or as the snake roll'd in a flowering bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child
That for the beauty thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,—
And yet herein I judge mine own wit good,—
This Gloucester should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy policy;
But yet we want a colour for his death:
'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:
The king will labour still to save his life;
The commons haply rise, to save his life;
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I!

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.
But, my lord cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,—say as you think, and speak it from your souls,—
Were't not all one, an empty eagle were set to guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place Duke Humphrey for the king's protector?

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true; and were't not madness, then,
To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who being accused a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over,
Because his purpose is not executed.
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature proved an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood;
As Humphrey, proved by reasons, to my liege.
And do not stand on quillets how to slay him:
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit
Which mates him first that first intends deceit.

Q. Mar. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done;
For things are often spoke and seldom meant:
But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say you consent and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner,
I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Q. Mar. And so say I.

York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,
It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come amain,
To signify that rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword:
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!
What counsel give you in this weighty cause?

York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither:
'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done:
I rather would have lost my life betimes
Than bring a burden of dishonour home
By staying there so long till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:
Men's flesh preserved so whole do seldom win.

Q. Mar. Nay, then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with:

No more, good York; sweet Somerset, be still:
Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been [regent there,
Might happily have proved far worse than his.

York. What, worse than nought? nay, then a shame take all!

Som. And, in the number, thee that wishest shame!

Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.
The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms,
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:
To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected choicely, from each county some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent,
And what we do establish he confirms:
Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand. [soldiers, lords,

York. I am content: provide me
Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd. [Humphrey.
But now return we to the false Duke

Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him [more.
That henceforth he shall trouble us no
And so break off; the day is almost spent: [that event.
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days

At Bristol I expect my soldiers;
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York.

[Exeunt all but YORK.

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts,
And change misdoubt to resolution:
Be that thou hopest to be, or what thou art [joying:
Resign to death; it is not worth the enLet pale-faced fear keep with the mean-born man,
And find no harbour in a royal heart.
Faster than springtime showers comes thought on thought, [nity.
And not a thought but thinks on dig-
My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.
Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done,
To send me packing with an host of men: [snake,
I fear me you but warm the starved
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts. [them me:
'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give
I take it kindly; yet be well assured
You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands,
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty [band,
I will stir up in England some black storm [or hell;
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven
And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.
And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduced a headstrong Kentishman,
John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade [kerns,
Oppose himself against a troop of
And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts [tine;
Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpen-
And, in the end being rescued, I have seen
Him caper upright like a wild Morisco,
Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.
Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And undiscover'd come to me again
And given me notice of their villanies.
This devil here shall be my substitute;
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, [resemble:
In face, in gait, in speech, he doth
By this I shall perceive the commons' mind, [York.
How they affect the house and claim of
Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortured;
I know no pain they can inflict upon him [those arms.
Will make him say I moved him to Say that he thrive, as 'tis great like he will, [my strength,
Why, then from Ireland come I with

And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd ; [be,
For Humphrey being dead, as he shall
And Henry put apart, the next for me.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Bury Saint Edmunds. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

First Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk ; let him know
We have dispatch'd the duke, as he commanded.
Sec. Mur. O, that it were to do ! What have we done ?
Didst ever hear a man so penitent ?
First Mur. Here comes my lord.

Enter SUFFOLK.

Suf. Now, sirs, have you dispatch'd this thing ? [dead.
First Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's
Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house ; [deed.
I will reward you for this venturous
The king and all the peers are here at hand. [well,
Have you laid fair the bed ? Is all things
According as I gave directions ?
First Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.
Suf. Away ! be gone.
[Exeunt Murderers.

Sound Trumpets. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, Lords, and Others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight ;
Say we intend to try his grace to-day,
If he be guilty, as 'tis published.
Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit.
K. Hen. Lords, take your places ; and, I pray you all,
Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloucester,
Than from true evidence of good esteem
He be approved in practice culpable.
Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail, [man !
That faultless may condemn a noble-
Pray God, he may acquit him of suspicion !
K. Hen. I thank thee, Meg ; these words content me much.

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now ! why look'st thou pale ? why tremblest thou ? [Suffolk ?
Where is our uncle ? what's the matter,
Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord ; Gloucester is dead.
Q. Mar. Marry, God forfend !
Car. God's secret judgment : I did dream to-night
The duke was dumb and could not speak a word. [The KING swoons.
Q. Mar. How fares my lord ? Help, lords ! the king is dead.
Som. Rear up his body ; wring him by the nose.
Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help ! O Henry, ope thine eyes !
Suf. He doth revive again : madam, be patient.
K. Hen. O heavenly God !
Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord ?
Suf. Comfort, my sovereign ! gracious Henry, comfort !
K. Hen. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me ? [note,
Came he right now to sing a raven's
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers ; [wren,
And thinks he that the chirping of a
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first-conceived sound ? [words ;
Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd
Lay not thy hands on me ; forbear, I say ; [sting.

Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight !
Upon thy eyeballs murderous tyranny
Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world. [wounding :—
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are
Yet do not go away :—come, basilisk,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight ; [joy ;
For in the shade of death I shall find
In life but double death, now Gloucester's dead,
Q. Mar. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus ?
Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he most Christian-like, laments his death :
And for myself, foe as he was to me,
Might liquid tears or heart-offending groans
Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,

I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans, [drinking sighs,
Look pale as primrose with blood-
And all to have the noble duke alive.
What know I how the world may deem of me? [friends:
For it is known we were but hollow
It may be judged I made the duke away; [be wounded.
So shall my name with slander's tongue
And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach. [happy!
This get I by his death: ay me, un-
To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy! [ter, wretched man!

K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloucester,

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What, dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome leper; look on me.
What! art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf? [queen.
Be poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb? [thy joy.
Why, then, Dame Margaret was ne'er
Erect his statue then, and worship it,
And make my image but an alehouse sign. [sea,
Was I for this nigh wreck'd upon the
And twice by awkward wind from England's bank
Drove back again unto my native clime?
What boded this, but well forewarning wind [nest,
Did seem to say 'Seek not a scorpion's
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?'
What did I then, but cursed the gentle gusts [brazen caves;
And he that loosed them forth their
And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore,
Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?
Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,
But left that hateful office unto thee:
The pretty-vaulting sea refused to drown me,
Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd on shore,
With tears as salt as sea, through thy unkindness: [ing sands
The splitting rocks cower'd in the sink-
And would not dash me with their ragged sides, [than they,
Because thy flinty heart, more hard
Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from the shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm;
And when the dusky sky began to rob
My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,—
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,— [received it,
And threw it towards thy land: the sea
And so I wish'd thy body might my heart: [view
And even with this I lost fair England's
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart; [tacles,
And call'd them blind and dusky spec-
For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue,
The agent of thy foul inconstancy,
To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did
When he to madding Dido would unfold [ing Troy!
His father's acts, commenced in burn-
Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?
Ay me, I can no more! die, Margaret!
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY. The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign, [is murder'd

But how he died God knows, not Henry:
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse, [death.
And comment then upon his sudden

War. That I shall do, my liege. Stay, Salisbury,
With the rude multitude till I return.

K. Hen. O Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts;
My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul [phrey's life!

For judgment only doth belong to thee.

With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears;
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk, [feeling:
And with my fingers feel his hand un-
But all in vain are these mean obsequies;
And to survey his dead and earthy image, [greater?

The folding doors of an inner chamber are thrown open, and GLOUCESTER is discovered dead in his bed: WARWICK and others standing by it.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made; [solace;
For with his soul fled all my worldly
For seeing him I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live [state upon him
With that dread King that took our
To free us from his Father's wrathful curse, [laid
I do believe that violent hands were
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue! [his vow?
What instance gives Lord Warwick for

War. See how the blood is settled in his face.
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale and bloodless, [heart;
Being all descended to the labouring
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;
Which with the heart there cools and ne'er returneth
To blush and beautify the cheek again.
But see, his face is black and full of blood; [lived,
His eyeballs further out than when he
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man;
His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;
His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd [subdued:
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength
Look, on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking; [and rugged,
His well-proportion'd beard made rough
Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodged.
It cannot be but he was murder'd here;
The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death? [tion;
Myself and Beaufort had him in protec-

And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep: [friend;

As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless

Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Is Beaufort term'd a kite? Where are his talons? [sleeping men;

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed

Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose

And I should rob the deathsman of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames, [me mild,
And that my sovereign's presence makes
I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee [speech

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope
And do some service to Duke Humphrey's ghost.

K. Hen. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted!
Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just; [steel,
And he but naked, though lock'd up in Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted. [A noise within.

Q. Mar. What noise is this?

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn
Here in our presence! dare you be so bold? [we here?
Why, what tumultuous clamour have
Suf. The traitorous Warwick with the men of Bury Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Noise of a Crowd within. Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. [Speaking to those within.] Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.— [by me,
Dread lord, the commons send you word

In pain of your dislike or pain of death,
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,
Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slily glided towards your majesty,
It were but necessary you were waked;
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber, [eternal;
The mortal worm might make the sleep
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid, [will or no,
That they will guard you, whether you
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose envenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.
Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, my Lord of Salisbury!
Suf. 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds, [reign:
Could send such message to their sove-
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint an orator you are:
But all the honour Salisbury hath won
Is, that he was the lord ambassador,

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, or we will all break in!
K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me, [care;
I thank them for their tender loving

Yet did I purpose as they do entreat;
For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy [means:

And therefore, by His majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death. [Exit SALISBURY.

Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick,
I have great matters to impart to thee.

Q. Mar. Mischance and sorrow go along with you!
Heart's discontent and sour affliction
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There's two of you; the devil make a third! [your steps!
And threefold vengeance tend upon

And let thy Suffolk take his heavy

Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch!
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies?

Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them?
Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan, [terms,
I would invent as bitter-searching
As curst, as harsh and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As lean-faced Envy in her loathsome cave: [earnest words;
My tongue should stumble in mine
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban: [would break,
And even now my burden'd heart
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink! [they taste!
Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that

Their chiefest prospect murdering basil-
Their softest touch as smart as lizards' stings! [hiss,
Their music frightful as the serpent's
And boding screech-owls make the concert full!
All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself;
And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an overcharged gun, recoil,
And turn the force of them upon thyself. [bid me leave?

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you
Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from, [night,
Well could I curse away a winter's
Though standing naked on a mountain top, [grow,
Where biting cold would never let grass
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,
That I may dew it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.
O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand, [the seal,
That thou mightest think upon these by
Through whom a thousand sighs are breathed for thee! [grief;
So, get thee gone, that I may know my
'Tis but surmised whiles thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits thinking on a want.
I will repeal thee, or, be well assured,

And banished I am, if but from thee.

O, go not yet! Even thus two friends
Embrace and kiss and take ten thousand leaves, [die.
Loather a hundred times to part than
Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee!

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished;
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence,
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world;
And where thou art not, desolation.
I can no more: live thou to joy thy life;
Myself no joy in nought but that thou livest.

Enter VAUX.

Q. Mar. Wither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I prithee?

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp and stare and catch the air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost
Were by his side; sometime he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his overcharged soul:
And I am sent to tell his majesty
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to the king. [Exit VAUX.
Ay me! what is this world! what news are these!
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears;
Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows?
Now get thee hence: the king, thou know'st, is coming;
If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live;
And in thy sight to die, what were it else
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe
Dying with mother's dug between its lips:
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth;
So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so thy into body,
And then it lived in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee were but to die in jest;
From thee to die were torture more than death:
O, let me stay, befall what may befall!

Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful corrosive,
It is applied to a deathful wound.
To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from thee;
For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee along.

Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woe-full'st cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth.
Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we:
This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE III.—London. CARDINAL BEAUFORT'S Bedchamber.

Enter KING HENRY, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and Others. The CARDINAL in bed; Attendants with him.

K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou beest death, I'll give thee England's treasure,
Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
Where death's approach is seen so terrible!

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.
Died he not in his bed? where should he die?
Can I make men live, whether they will or no?
O, torture me no more! I will confess.
Alive again? then show me where he is:
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.
He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.
Comb down his hair; look! look! it stands upright,
Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul.

Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary [of him.
Bring the strong poison that I bought

Look with a gentle eye upon this
O, beat away the busy meddling fiend
That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul, [despair!
And from his bosom purge this black
War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin! [peaceably.
Sal. Disturb him not; let him pass

K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are

And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at sea. Then enter from a boat, a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, WALTER WHITMORE, and Others; with them SUFFOLK disguised, and other Gentlemen, prisoners.

Capt. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day
Is crept into the bosom of the sea;
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
That drag the tragic melancholy night;

How now! why start'st thou? what, doth death affright?

And told me that by water I should die:
Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded; [sounded.

By devilish policy art thou grown great,
And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorged

Capt. And as for these whose ransom we have set,
It is our pleasure one of them depart:
Therefore come you with us, and let him go.

[Exeunt all but the First Gentleman.

Re-enter WHITMORE, with SUFFOLK'S body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,
Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.

First Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!
His body will I bear unto the king:
If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;
So will the queen, that living held him dear. [Exit, with the body.

SCENE II.—Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND.

Bevis. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath: they have been up these two days. [sleep now, then.

Holl. They have the more need to Bevis. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

Holl. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare. Well, I say it was never merry world in England since gentlemen came up.

Bevis. O miserable age! virtue is not regarded in handicrafts-men.

Holl. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Bevis. Nay, more, the king's council are no good workmen.

Holl. True; and yet it is said, labour in thy vocation: which is as much to say as, let the magistrates be labouring men; and therefore should we be magistrates.

Bevis. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand.

Holl. I see them! I see them; There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham,— Bevis. He shall have the skins of our enemies, to make dog's-leather of.

Holl. And Dick the butcher,—

Bevis. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

Holl. And Smith the weaver,—

Bevis. Argo, their thread of life is spun. [them.

Holl. Come, come, let's fall in with

Drum. Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH the Weaver, and Others in great number.

Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father,—

Dick. [Aside.] Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings.

Cade. For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes,—Command silence.

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer,—

Dick. [Aside.] He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet,—

Dick. [Aside.] I knew her well; she was a midwife. [Lacies,—

Cade. My wife descended of the

Dick. [Aside.] She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces.

Smith. [Aside.] But now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. [Aside.] Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. [Aside.] 'A must needs; for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. [Aside.] No question of that; for I have seen him whipped three market-days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. [Aside.] He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof.

Dick. [Aside.] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' the hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave, then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny: the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer: all the realm shall be in common; and in Cheapside shall my palfry go to grass: and when I am king, as king I will be,—

All. God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people:—there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say the bee stings: but I say, 'tis the bee's wax; for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous! [copies.

Smith. We took him setting of boys'

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. Has a book in his pocket with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write courthand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, on mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee: what is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters: 'twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone. Dost thou use to write thy name? or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him! he's a villain and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him, I say! hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck. [Exeunt some with the Clerk.

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: he is but a knight, is 'a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels.] Rise up Sir John Mortimer. [Rises.] Now have at him!

Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD, and WILLIAM his Brother, with Drum and Forces.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent, [ons down;
Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weap-
Home to your cottages, forsake this groom:
The king is merciful, if you revolt.

W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclined to blood, [die.
If you go forward: therefore yield, or

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not:
It is to you, good people, that I speak,
O'er whom, in time to come, I hope to reign;

For I am rightful heir unto the crown.
Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer; [not?
And thou thyself a shearman, art thou
Cade. And Adam was a gardener.
W. Staf. And what of that?
Cade. Marry, this: Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March,
Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not?
Staf. Ay, sir.
Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.
W. Staf. That's false.
Cade. Ay, there's the question; but I say, 'tis true:
The elder of them, being put to nurse,
Was by a beggar-woman stolen away;
And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, [age:
Became a bricklayer when he came to
His son am I; deny it, if you can.
Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.
Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.
Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's words,
That speaks he knows not what?
All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.
W. Staff. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.
Cade. [Aside.] He lies, for I invented it myself.
Go to, sirrah, tell the king from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him.
Dick. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord Say's head, for selling the dukedom of Maine.
Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England mained, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it an eunuch: and more than that, he can speak French; and therefore he is a traitor.
Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance!
Cade. Nay, answer, if you can: the Frenchmen are our enemies; go to, then, I ask but this: can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?
All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.
W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,
Assail them with the army of the king.
Staf. Herald, away; and throughout every town [with Cade;
Proclaim them traitors that are up
That those which fly before the battle ends [dren's sight,
May, even in their wives' and children's
Be hang'd up for example at their doors:
And you that be the king's friends, follow me.

Cade. And you that love the commons, follow me. [liberty.
Now show yourself men; 'tis for
We will not leave one lord, one gentleman: [shoon;
Spare none but such as go in clouted
For they are thrifty honest men, and such [our parts.
As would, but that they dare not, take
Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.
Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march forward. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of Blackheath.

Alarums. The two Parties enter and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?
Dick. Here, sir.
Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee,—the Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred lacking one, a week.
Dick. I desire no more.
Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear [Putting on SIR

HUMPHREY'S brigandine]; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. The Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, reading a supplication; the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, and LORD SAY with him: at a distance, QUEEN MARGARET, mourning over SUFFOLK'S head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind,
And makes it fearful and degenerate;
Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep.
But who can cease to weep and look on this?
Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast:
But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication?

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat;
For God forbid so many simple souls
Should perish by the sword! And I myself,
Rather than bloody war shall cut them short,
Will parley with Jack Cade their general:
But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face
Ruled, like a wandering planet, over me,
And could it not enforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope your highness shall have his.

K. Hen. How now, madam!
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's death?
I fear me, love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for me.

Q. Mar. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why comest thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my lord! [Mortimer,
Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord
Descended from the Duke of Clarence' house,
And calls your grace usurper openly
And vows to crown himself in Westminster.
His army is a ragged multitude
Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless:
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed:
All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,
They call false caterpillars and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth, [down.
Until a power be raised to put them

Q. Mar. Ah, were the Duke of Suffolk now alive, [appeased!
These Kentish rebels would be soon

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee;
Therefore away with us to Killingworth.

Say. So might your grace's person be in danger.
The sight of me is odious in their eyes;
And therefore in this city will I stay,
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge: the citizens
Fly and forsake their houses:
The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear
To spoil the city and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take horse.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceased.

K. Hen. [To LORD SAY.] Farewell, my lord: trust not the Kentish rebels. [betray'd.

Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be

Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. The Tower.

Enter LORD SCALES, and Others, on the Walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain?

First Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them: the lord mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare you shall command; [self;
But I am troubled here with them my-

But get you to Smithfield and gather
And thither I will send you Matthew Goffe; [your lives;
Fight for your king, your country, and
And so, farewell, for I must hence again.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Cannon Street.

Enter JACK CADE, and his Followers. He strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now henceforward it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there.
[They kill him.

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call ye Jack Cade more: I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then, let's go fight with them: but first, go and set London-bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Same. Smithfield.

Alarum. Enter, on one side, CADE and his Company; on the other, Citizens, and the KING'S Forces, headed by MATTHEW GOFFE. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and MATTHEW GOFFE is slain.

Cade. So, sirs: now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the Inns of Court; down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

Holl. [Aside.] Mass, 'twill be sore law, then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. [Aside.] Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese.

Cade. I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm: my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

Holl. [Aside.] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one-and-twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times.—Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Mounsieur Basimecu, the Dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school: and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honester men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent,—

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this; 'tis 'bona terra, mala gens.'

Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.
Kent, in the Commentaries Cæsar writ,
Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle:
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.
I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;
Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.
Justice with favour have I always done;
Prayers and tears have moved me, gifts could never.
When have I aught exacted at your hands,
But to maintain the king, the realm, and you?
Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,
Because my book preferr'd me to the king,
And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,
Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murder me;
This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings
For your behoof,—

Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck
Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes
Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle then, and the help of a hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, I'll be even with you: I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no. Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me wherein have I offended most?
Have I affected wealth or honour?
Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold?
Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?
Whom have I injured, that ye seek my death?
These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,
This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts.
O, let me live!

Cade. [Aside.] I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it: he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,
God should be so obdurate as yourselves,
How would it fare with your departed souls? And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him! and do as I command ye.

[Exeunt some, with LORD SAY.

The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it: men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O, brave!

Re-enter Rebels, with the heads of LORD SAY and his Son-in-Law.

Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night: for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss. Away!

[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Southwark.

Alarum. Enter CADE, and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish-street! down Saint Magnus' Corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! [A Parley sounded, then a Retreat.] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM, and Old CLIFFORD with Forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee:
Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king
Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all
That will forsake thee and go home in peace.
Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent,
And yield to mercy whilst 'tis offer'd you;
Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?
Who loves the king and will embrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap, and say 'God save his majesty!'
Who hateth him and honours not his father,
Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at us and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What, Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom: but you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces: for me, I will make shift for one; and so, God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade!

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth,
That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends and us.
Were't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,
The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,
Should make a start o'er seas, and vanquish you?
Methinks already in this civil broil
I see them lording it in London streets,
Crying 'Villiago!' unto all they meet.
Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry

Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.
To France, to France, and get what you have lost; [coast:
Spare England, for it is your native Henry hath money, you are strong and manly;
God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprise me. My sword make way for me, for here is no staying.—In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you! and heavens and honour be witness that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels. [Exit.

Buck. What, is he fled? Go some, and follow him; [king
And he that brings his head unto the
Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.

[Exeunt some of them.

Follow me, soldiers: we'll devise a mean
To reconcile you all unto the king.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Kenilworth Castle.

Sound Trumpets. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, and SOMERSET, on the Terrace.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne, [than I?
And could command no more content
No sooner was I crept out of my cradle
But I was made a king, at nine months old.
Was never subject long'd to be a king
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and Old CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health and glad tidings to your majesty!

K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surprised?
Or is he but retired to make him strong.

Enter, below, a great number of CADE'S Followers, with halters about their necks.

Clif. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield; [necks,

Is marching hitherward in proud array;
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,
His arms are only to remove from thee
The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;
Like to a ship that, having 'scaped a tempest, [a pirate:

For he is fierce and cannot brook hard language.

For yet may England curse my wretched reign.

SCENE X.—Kent. IDEN'S Garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambition! fie on myself; that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish! These five days have I hid me in these woods, and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am I so hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climbed into this garden; to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word 'sallet' was born to do me good: for many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and many a time, when I have been dry and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart pot to drink in; and now the word 'sallet' must serve me to feed on.

Enter IDEN, with Servants.

Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king for carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron, like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatsoe'er thou be, [betray thee?

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The KING'S Camp on one side. On the other, enter YORK, and his Army of Irish, with Drum and Colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head: [and bright,

I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a sword or sceptre balance it:
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me? [dissemble.
The king hath sent him, sure: I must

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.
Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure? [our dread liege,

Buck. A messenger from Henry,
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou, being a subject as I am,
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, [his leave,
Shouldst raise so great a power without
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside.] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great:
O, I could hew up rocks and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.
I am far better born than is the king;
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts: [awhile,
But I must make fair weather yet
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.—
O Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while; [melancholy.
My mind was troubled with deep
The cause why I have brought this army hither [king,
Is to remove proud Somerset from the
Seditious to his grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand:
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.
Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves; [field,
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's
You shall have pay and everything you wish.
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,

As pledges of my fealty and love;
I'll send them all as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, armour, any thing I have,
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission: [tent.

York doth present himself unto your highness.

K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?

York. To heave the traitor Somerset from hence, [Cade,
And fight against that monstrous rebel,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with CADE'S head.

Iden. If one so rude and of so mean condition
May pass into the presence of a king,

K. Hen. See, Buckingham, Somerset comes with the queen:

Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!

The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,
Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those
That for my surety will refuse the boys!

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with Forces, at one side; at the other, with Forces also, Old CLIFFORD and his Son.

See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.

Clif. [Kneeling.] Health and all happiness to my lord the king!

York. I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news with thee? [look:
Nay, do not fright us with an angry

And in my conscience do repute his grace [seat.
The rightful heir to England's royal

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin,
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.
Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,
To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
To wring the widow from her custom'd right,

And have no other reason for this wrong
But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,
I am resolved for death or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed and dream again,
To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolved to bear a greater storm
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;
And that I'll write upon thy burgonet,
Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,
The rampant bear-chain'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,
As on a mountain top the cedar shows,
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,
Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear,
And tread it under foot with all contempt,
Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels and their complices.

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite,
For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell.

[Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Saint Alban's.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls:
And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me:
Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord! what, all afoot?

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;
But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bonny beast he loved so well.

Enter Old CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.
As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

[Exit.

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,
But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword
As I in justice and true right express it.

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!

York. A dreadful lay! Address thee instantly.

[They fight, and CLIFFORD falls.

Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres.

[Dies.

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.
Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will!

[Exit.

Enter Young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the rout;
Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part

Hot coals of vengeance! Let no soldier fly.
He that is truly dedicate to war
Hath no self-love; nor he that loves himself
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour. [Seeing his dead Father.] O, let the vile world end,
And the premised flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together!
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds
To cease! Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And, in thy reverence and thy chair-days, thus
To die in ruffian battle? Even at this sight
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine,
It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;
No more will I their babes: tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity:
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame.
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house:
As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then Æneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.
[Exit, bearing off his Father.

Enter RICHARD and SOMERSET, to fight. SOMERSET is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there,
For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Albans, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful still:
Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, and Others, retreating.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow; for shame, away!
K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good Margaret, stay.
Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll nor fight nor fly:
Now is it manhood, wisdom and defence,
To give the enemy way; and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly. [Alarum afar off.
If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply 'scape,
As well we may, if not through your neglect,
We shall to London get, where you are loved
And where this breach now in our fortunes made
May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter Young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must; uncurable discomfit
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day and them our fortune give:
Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarum. Retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK, RICHARD, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with Drum and Colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time,
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,
Repairs him with occasion? This happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.
Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I holp him to his horse,
Three times bestrid him; thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act:

But still, where danger was, still there I met him;
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body.
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day;
By the mass, so did we all. I thank you, Richard:
God knows how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleased him that three times to-day
You have defended me from imminent death.
Well, lords, we have not got that which we have:
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled.
Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,
To call a present court of parliament.
Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth.
What says Lord Warwick? shall we after them?

War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.
Now, by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Alban's battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eternized in all age to come.
Sound drums and trumpets, and to London all:
And more such days as these to us befall!

[Exeunt.

SCENE, during part of the Third Act, in France; during all the rest of the Play, in England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. The Parliament House.

Drums. Some Soldiers of YORK'S party break in. Then enter the DUKE OF YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Others, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder how the king escaped our hands.

York. While we pursued the horsemen of the north,
He slily stole away and left his men:
Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,
Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,
Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast,
Charged our main battle's front, and breaking in
Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.
Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,
Is either slain or wounded dangerously;
I cleft his beaver with a downright blow:
That this is true, father, behold his blood.
[Showing his bloody sword.

Mont. [To YORK, showing his.] And, brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood,
Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.
[Throwing down the DUKE OF SOMERSET'S head.

York. Richard hath best deserved of all my sons.
What, is your grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!
Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head.
War. And so do I. Victorious Prince of York,
Before I see thee seated in that throne
Which now the house of Lancaster usurps, [close.
I vow by heaven these eyes shall never
This is the palace of the fearful king,
And this the regal seat: possess it, York; [heirs'.
For this is thine and not King Henry's
York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will;
For hither we have broken in by force.
Norf. We'll all assist you; he that flies shall die.
York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk.—Stay by me, my lords;
And soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night.
War. And when the king comes, offer him no violence,
Unless he seek to thrust you out by force. [The Soldiers retire.
York. The queen this day here holds her parliament, [council:
But little thinks we shall be of her
By words or blows here let us win our right. [within this house.
Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay
War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd, [king,
Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be
And bashful Henry deposed, whose cowardice
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.
York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute;
I mean to take possession of my right.
War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best, [caster,
The proudest he that holds up Lan-
Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells. [dares:
I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who
Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.

[WARWICK leads YORK to the throne, who seats himself.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and Others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits, [means,
Even in the chair of state: belike he
Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer, [king.
To aspire unto the crown and reign as
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father;
And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge
On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends. [venged on me!
North. If I be not, heavens be re-
Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.
West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down:
My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it. [Westmoreland.
K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of
Clif. Patience is for poltroons, such as he: [lived.
He durst not sit there had your father
My gracious lord, here in the parliament
Let us assail the family of York.
North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be it so. [favours them,
K. Hen. Ah, know you not the city
And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?
Exe. But when the duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.
K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,
To make a shambles of the parliament house! [threats
Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words and
Shall be the war that Henry means to use. [my throne,
Thou factious Duke of York, descend
And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;
I am thy sovereign.
York. Thou'rt deceived, I'm thine.
Exe. For shame, come down: he made thee Duke of York.
York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was. [crown.
Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown
In following this usurping Henry.
Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural king?
War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard Duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne ?
York. It must and shall be so : content thyself.
War. Be Duke of Lancaster ; let him be king.
West. He is both king and Duke of Lancaster ; he shall maintain.
And that the Lord of Westmoreland
War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget that we are those which chased you from the field
And slew your fathers, and with colours spread
March'd through the city to the palace gates.
North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief ; and shall rue it.
And, by his soul, thou and thy house
West. Plantagenet, of thee and these thy sons, more lives
Thy kinsmen and thy friends, I'll have
Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.
Clif. Urge it no more ; lest that, instead of words,
I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger
As shall revenge his death before I stir.
War. Poor Clifford ! how I scorn his worthless threats !
York. Will you we show our title to the crown ? in field.
If not, our swords shall plead it in the
K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown ? Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York ;
Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March :
I am the son of Henry the Fifth,
Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop, and seized upon their towns and provinces.
War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.
K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I :
When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.
Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose.
Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.
Edw. Sweet father, do so ; set it on your head.
Mont. [To YORK.] Good brother, as thou lovest and honour'st arms, thus.
Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus.
Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.
York. Sons, peace !
K. Hen. Peace, thou ! and give King Henry leave to speak.
War. Plantagenet shall speak first : hear him, lords ;
And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him shall not live.
K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne, sat ?
Wherein my grandsire and my father
No : first shall war unpeople this my realm ; France,
Ay, and their colours, often borne in
And now in England to our heart's great sorrow, you, lords ?
Shall be my winding-sheet. Why faint
My title's good, and better far than his.
War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.
K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown. king.
York. 'Twas by rebellion against his
K. Hen. [Aside.] I know not what to say ; my title's weak.—
Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir ?
York. What then ?
K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king ;
For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth, his.
Whose heir my father was, and I am
York. He rose against him, being his sovereign, perforce.
And made him to resign his crown
War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd, crown ?
Think you 'twere prejudicial to his
Exe. No ; for he could not so resign his crown and reign.
But that the next heir should succeed
K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter ? pardon me.
Exe. His is the right, and therefore
York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not ?
Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.
K. Hen. [Aside.] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.
North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st, posed.
Think not that Henry shall be so de-
War. Deposed he shall be, in despite of all. thy southern power,
North. Thou art deceived : 'tis not
Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,—

Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,—
Can set the duke up in despite of me.
Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:
May that ground gape and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!
K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!
York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown.
What mutter you, or what conspire you, lords?
War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York,
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.
[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.
K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear but one word;
Let me, for this my lifetime, reign as king.
York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs,
And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou livest.
K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.
Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son!
War. What good is this to England and himself!
West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!
Clif. How hast thou injured both thyself and us!
West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.
North. Nor I.
Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.
West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,
In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.
North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands for this unmanly deed!
Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be overcome,
Or live in peace abandon'd and despised!
[Exeunt NORTH, CLIFFORD, and WESTMORELAND.
War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.
Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.
K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!
War. Why should you sigh, my lord? [wick, but my son.
K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord War-
Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.
But be it as it may: I here entail
The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever;
Conditionally, that here thou take an oath
To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,
To honour me as thy king and sovereign;
And neither by treason nor hostility
To seek to put me down, and reign thyself.
York. This oath I willingly take and will perform.
[Coming from the throne.
War. Long live King Henry!—Plantagenet, embrace him.
K. Hen. And long live thou and these thy forward sons!
York. Now York and Lancaster are reconciled.
Exe. Accursed be he that seeks to make them foes!
[Sennet. The Lords come forward.
York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.
War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.
Norf. And I to Norfolk with my followers.
Mont. And I unto the sea from whence I came.
[Exeunt YORK, and his Sons, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, Soldiers, and Attendants.
K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES.

Exe. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger:
I'll steal away.
K. Hen. Exeter, so will I. [Going.
Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.
K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.
Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?
Ah, wretched man! would I had died a maid,
And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast proved so unnatural a father!
Hath he deserved to lose his birthright thus?
Hadst thou but loved him half so well as I,
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood,

Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir
And disinherited thine only son.

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me: [ceed?
If you be king, why should not I suc-

The Earl of Warwick and the duke enforced me.

Q. Mar. Enforced thee! art thou king, and wilt be forced?

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son,
And given unto the house of York such head [ance.

SCENE II.—Sandal Castle, in Yorkshire.

Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave. [orator.

Edw. No, I can better play the

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife? [first?
What is your quarrel? how began it

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your grace and us; [yours.
The crown of England, father, which is

York. Mine, boy? not till King Henry be dead. [life or death.

Rich. Your right depends not on his

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, the young PRINCE, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage:
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.

Clif. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless arm,
With downright payment, show'd unto my father.
Now Phaëthon hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phœnix, may bring forth
A bird that will revenge upon you all:
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning whate'er you can afflict me with.
Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?

Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly no further;
So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once again,
And in thy thought o'errun my former time:
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice
Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere this!

Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,
But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one.

[Draws.

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes
I would prolong awhile the traitor's life.—
Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so much
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart:
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war's prize to take all vantages;
And ten to one is no impeach of valour.

[They lay hands on YORK, who struggles.

Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the cony struggle in the net.

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;
So true men yield, with robbers so o'er-match'd.

North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
That raught at mountains with outstretched arms,
Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.
What! was it you that would be England's king?
Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preachment of your high descent?
Where are your mess of sons to back you now?
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York: I stain'd this napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his rapier's point,
Made issue from the bosom of the boy;
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable state.
I prithee, grieve, to make me merry, York.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails
That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad;
And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Thou wouldst be fee'd, I see; to make me sport:
York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown.
A crown for York! and, lords, bow low to him:
Hold you his hands, whilst I do set it on.

[Putting a paper crown on his head.

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!

Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair;
And this is he was his adopted heir,
But how is it that great Plantagenet
Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
As I bethink me, you should not be king
Till our King Henry had shook hands with death.
And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem,
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O, tis a fault too too unpardonable!
Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head; and, whilst we breathe, take time to do him dead.

Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,
Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth!
How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex
To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes whom fortune captivates!
But that thy face is, vizard-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush.
To tell thee whence thou camest, of whom derived,
Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.
Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem;
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen,
Unless the adage must be verified,
That beggars mounted run their horse to death.
'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud;
But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small:
'Tis virtue that doth make them most admired;
The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at:
'Tis government that makes them seem divine;
The want thereof makes thee abominable:
Thou art as opposite to every good
As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion.
O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide!
How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child,
To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?
Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.
Bid'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish:
Wouldst have me weep? why, now thou hast thy will:
For raging winds blows up incessant showers,
And when the rage allays, the rain begins.
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies;
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman.

North. Beshrew me, but his passion moves me so,
That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood:
But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,
O, ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:
This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet boy,
And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:
And if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say 'Alas, it was a piteous deed!'
There, take the crown, and, with the crown, my curse;
And in thy need such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world:
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North. Had he been slaughter-man of all my kin,
I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my Lord Northumberland?
Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clif. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death.

[Stabbing him.

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king.

[Stabbing him.

York. Open Thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
My soul flies through these wounds to seek out Thee. [Dies.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;
So York may overlook the town of York. [Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

A March. Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and their Power

Edw. I wonder how our princely father 'scaped,
Or whether he be 'scaped away or no

Had he been ta'en, we should have
Had he been slain, we should have heard the news; [have heard

But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.
I think it cites us, brother, to the field;
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,
Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together, [world.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown: [my lord?
Doth not the object cheer your heart,

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck:
To see this sight, it irks my very soul.
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault,

SCENE III.—A Field of Battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe;
For strokes received, and many blows repaid, [their strength,
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of And spite of spite needs must I rest awhile.

Enter EDWARD, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle death!
For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good?

Enter GEORGE.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair; [us:
Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows
What counsel give you? whither shall we fly? [us with wings;

Edw. Bootless is flight, they follow And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?
Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk, [ford's lance;
Broach'd with the steely point of Clif-
And in the very pangs of death he cried,
Like to a dismal clangour heard from far, [my death!
'Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge
So, underneath the belly of their steeds,
That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:
I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here, [rage;
Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth
And look upon, as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors?
Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I'll never pause again, never stand still,

Where'er it be, in heaven or on earth.
Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and, gentle Warwick,
Let me embrace thee in my weary arms:
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.
War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.
Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops, and stay;
And give them leave to fly that will not stay;
And call them pillars that will stand to us;
And, if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As victors wear at the Olympian games:
This may plant courage in their quailing breasts;
For yet is hope of life and victory.
Forslow no longer; make we hence amain. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone:
Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.
Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone:
This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;
And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;
And here's the heart that triumphs in their death
And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother
To execute the like upon thyself;
And so, have at thee!

[They fight. WARWICK enters; CLIFFORD flies.

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;
For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY alone.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
When dying clouds contend with growing light,
What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea
Forced by the tide to combat with the wind;
Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea
Forced to retire by fury of the wind:
Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind;
Now one the better, then another best;
Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conqueror nor conquered:
So is the equal poise of this fell war.
Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
To whom God will, there be the victory!
For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
Have chid me from the battle; swearing both
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead! if God's good will were so;
For what is in this world but grief and woe?
O God! methinks it were a happy life,
To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run:
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day;
How many days will finish up the year;
How many years a mortal man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the times:
So many hours must I tend my flock;
So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate;
So many hours must I sport myself;
So many days my ewes have been with young;
So many weeks ere the poor fools will yean;
So many years ere I shall shear the fleece:
So minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
Gives not the hawthorn-bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds looking on their silly sheep,

Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?
O, yes, it doth; a thousandfold it doth.
And to conclude, the shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his Father, dragging in the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.
This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
May be possessed with some store of crowns;
And I, that haply take them from him now,
May yet ere night yield both my life and them
To some man else, as this dead man doth me.
Who's this?—O God! it is my father's face,
Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd.
O heavy times, begetting such events!
From London by the king was I press'd forth;
My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,
Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
And I, who at his hands received my life,
Have by my hands of life bereaved him.
Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!
And pardon, father, for I knew not thee!
My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
Whilst lions war and battle for their dens,
Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.
Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear;
And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharged with grief.

Enter a Father that has killed his Son, with the body in his arms.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold;
For I have bought it with an hundred blows.
But let me see: is this our foeman's face?
Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son!—
Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw up thine eye! see, see what showers arise,
Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart!
O, pity, God, this miserable age!
What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
Erroneous, mutinous and unnatural,
This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!
O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late!

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!
O that my death would stay these ruthful deeds!
O pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity!
The red rose and the white are on his face,
The fatal colours of our striving houses:
The one his purple blood right well resembles;
The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth:
Wither one rose, and let the other flourish!
If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother for a father's death
Take on with me and ne'er be satisfied!

Fath. How will my wife for slaughter of my son
Shed seas of tears and ne'er be satisfied!

K. Hen. How will the country for these woeful chances
Misthink the king and not be satisfied!

Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death?

Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd a son? for subjects' woe?

K. Hen. Was ever king so grieved
Much is your sorrow; mine ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill.

[Exit with the body.

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;
My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre,
For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go;
My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
And so obsequious will thy father be,

Son, for the loss of thee, having no more,
As Priam was for all his valiant sons.
I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,
For I have murder'd where I should not kill. [Exit with the body.

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care, [are.
Here sits a king more woeful than you

Alarums. Excursions. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, and EXETER.

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
And Warwick rages like a chafed bull:
Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post amain:
Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds
Having the fearful flying hare in sight,
With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath, [hands,
And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful
Are at our backs; and therefore hence amain.

Exe. Away! for vengeance comes along with them:
Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed;
Or else come after: I'll away before.

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter:
Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
Whither the queen intends. Forward; away! [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

A loud Alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here it dies, [Henry light.

Edw. See who it is: and, now the battle's ended,
If friend or foe, let him be gently used.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Chase in the North of England.

Enter two Keepers, with crossbows in their hands.

First Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves;

For through this laund anon the deer will come; [stand,
And in this covert will we make our

And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'll tell thee what befell me on a day
In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

Sec. Keep. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a Prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stolen, even of pure love, [ful sight.
To greet mine own land with my wish-
No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;

First Keep. Forbear awhile; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid; [Warwick
And, as I hear, the great commanding

Sec. Keep. Say, what art thou that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:
A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

Sec. Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough.

Sec. Keep. But if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head; [stones,
Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content:
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.

Sec. Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,
Your crown content and you must be contented
To go along with us; for, as we think,
You are the king King Edward hath deposed; [ance,

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath?

Sec. Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.
K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England?
Sec. Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.
K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old; [kings;

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as King Edward is.
First Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and in the king's,
To go with us unto the officers.
K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd:
And what God will, that let your king perform;
And what He will, I humbly yield unto.

SCENE II.—London. The Palace.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Albans field [was slain,
This lady's husband, Sir Richard Grey,
His lands then seized on by the conqueror:
Her suit is now to repossess those lands;
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.
Glou. Your highness shall do well to grant her suit;
It were dishonour to deny it her.
K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] Yea, is it so?
I see the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.
Clar. [Aside to GLOU.] He knows the game: how true he keeps the wind!
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] Silence!
K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit; [our mind.
And come some other time to know
L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay: [me now;
May it please your highness to resolve
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands, [you.
An if what pleases him shall pleasure
Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.
Clar. [Aside to GLOU.] I fear her not, unless she chance to fall.
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] God forbid that! for he'll take vantages.
K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me.
Clar. [Aside to GLOU.] I think he means to beg a child of her.
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] Nay, whip me then: he'll rather give her two. [lord.
L. Grey. Three, my most gracious
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] You shall have four, if you'll be ruled by him.
K. Edw. 'Twere pity they should lose their father's lands.
L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.
K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's wit.
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave, [the crutch.
Till youth take leave and leave you to [GLOUCESTER and CLARENCE retire.
K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.
K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?
L. Grey. To do them good, I would sustain some harm.
K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good.
L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.
K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands [are to be got.
L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.
K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?
L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.
K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.
L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it. [I mean to ask.
K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what
L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your grace commands.
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble.
Clar. [Aside to GLOU.] As red as fire! nay, then her wax must melt.
L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?
K. Edw. An easy task; 'tis but to love a king.
L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.
K. Edw. Why, then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.
L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] The match is made; she seals it with a curtsy. [of love I mean.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not
L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did.
K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.
L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive
Your highness aims at, if I aim aright.
K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.
L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.
K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower; [them.
For by that loss I will not purchase
K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.
L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.
But, mighty lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the sadness of my suit:
Please you dismiss me, either with 'ay' or 'no.'
K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say 'ay' to my request; [mand.
No, if thou dost say 'no' to my de-
L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.
Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.

Her words do show her wit incomparable; [reignty:

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord:
I am a subject fit to jest withal,
But far unfit to be a sovereign.
K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee [intends;
I speak no more than what my soul
And that is, to enjoy thee for my love.
L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto:
I know I am too mean to be your queen;
And yet too good to be your concubine. [mean, my queen.

K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children;
And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing
To be the father unto many sons.
Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glou. [Aside to CLAR.] The ghostly father now hath done his shrift.

Clar. [Aside to GLOU.] When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift.

K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

Glou. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad.

K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.

Clar. To whom, my lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glou. That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glou. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both
Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower:
And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension.
Widow, go you along.—Lords, use her honourably.

[Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.
Would he were wasted, marrow, bones and all,
That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,
To cross me from the golden time I look for!
And yet, between my soul's desire and me—
The lustful Edward's title buried—
Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
And all the unlook'd for issue of their bodies,
To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
A cold premeditation for my purpose!
Why, then, I do but dream on sovereignty;
Like one that stands upon a promontory,
And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;
And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,
Saying, he'll lade it dry to have his way:
So do I wish the crown, being so far off;
And so I chide the means that keep me from it;
And so I say, I'll cut the causes off,
Flattering me with impossibilities.
My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweens too much,
Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
What other pleasure can the world afford?
I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
And deck my body in gay ornaments,
And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
O miserable thought! and more unlikely
Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!
Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb:
And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe,
To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;
To make an envious mountain on my back,
Where sits deformity to mock my body;
To shape my legs of an unequal size;
To disproportion me in every part,
Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp
That carries no impression like the dam.
And am I then a man to be beloved?
O monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!
Then, since this earth affords no joy to me,
But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
As are of better person than myself,
I'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown;
And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell,
Until my mis-shaped trunk that bears this head
Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
And yet I know not how to get the crown.
For many lives stand between me and home:

And I,—like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rends the thorns and is rent with the thorns,
Seeking a way and straying from the way;
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out,—
Torment myself to catch the English crown:
And from that torment I will free myself,
Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile;
And cry 'Content' to that which grieves my heart;
And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions.
I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall;
I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;
I'll play the orator as well as Nestor,
Deceive more slily than Ulysses could,
And, like a Sinon, take another Troy.
I can add colours to the chameleon,
Change shapes with Proteus for advantages,
And set the murderous Machiavel to school.
Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
Tut! were it further off, I'll pluck it down. [Exit.

SCENE III.—France. The FRENCH KING'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, his Sister BONA, and his Admiral, called BOURBON; the King takes his State. Then enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD her Son, and the EARL OF OXFORD.

K. Lew. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit down with us; it ill befits thy state
And birth, that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit.
Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France: now Margaret
Must strike her sail, and learn awhile to serve
Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days:
But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground;
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?
Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.
K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself,
And sit thee by our side [Seats her by him]: yield not thy neck
To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief;
It shall be eased, if France can yield relief.
Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts
And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak.
Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is of a king become a banish'd man,
And forced to live in Scotland a forlorn;
While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York
Usurps the regal title and the seat
Of England's true-anointed lawful king.
This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,
With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir,
Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
And if thou fail us, all our hope is done:
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;
Our people and our peers are both misled,
Our treasure seized, our soldiers put to flight,
And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.
K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,
While we bethink a means to break it off.
Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.
K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.
Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow.
And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow!

Enter WARWICK, attended.

K. Lew. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?
Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. The Palace.

Enter GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, and MONTAGUE.

Glou. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?
Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France;
How could he stay till Warwick made return?
Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here come the king.
Glou. And his well-chosen bride.
Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, attended; LADY GREY, as Queen; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, HASTINGS, and Others.

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,
That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?
Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the Earl of Warwick;
Which are so weak of courage and in judgment
That they'll take no offence at our abuse.
K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,
They are but Lewis and Warwick: I am Edward,
Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.
Glou. And you shall have your will, because our king:
Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.
K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?
Glou. Not I:
No; God forbid that I should wish them sever'd
Whom God hath join'd together; ay, and 'twere pity
To sunder them that yoke so well together.
K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your mislike aside,
Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey
Should not become my wife and England's queen.
And you too, Somerset and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.
Clar. Then this is my opinion: that King Lewis
Becomes your enemy, for mocking him
About the marriage of the Lady Bona.
Glou. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.
K. Edw. What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeased
By such invention as I can devise?
Mont. Yet, to have join'd with France in such alliance
Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth
'Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred marriage.
Hast. Why, knows not Montague that of itself
England is safe, if true within itself?
Mont. Yes; but the safer when 'tis back'd with France.
Hast. 'Tis better using France than trusting France:
Let us be back'd with God and with the seas
Which He hath given for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves;
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.
Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves
To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford.
K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will and grant;
And, for this once, my will shall stand for law.
Glou. And yet methinks your grace hath not done well,
To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales
Unto the brother of your loving bride;
She better would have fitted me or Clarence:
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.
Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir
Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.
K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife
That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee.

Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgment;
Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.

K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be king,
And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleased his majesty
To raise my state to title of a queen,
Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent;
And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:
What danger or what sorrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unless they seek for hatred at my hands;
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glou. [Aside.] I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what news
From France?

Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few words,
But such as I, without your special pardon,
Dare not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee: therefore, in brief,
Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them.
What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters?

Mess. At my depart, these were his very words:
'Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over masquers
To revel it with him and his new bride.'

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike he thinks me Henry.
But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?

Mess. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain:
'Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.'

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less;
She had the wrong. But what said Henry's queen?
For I have heard that she was there in place.

Mess. 'Tell him,' quoth she, 'my mourning weeds are done,
And I am ready to put armour on.'

K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Mess. He, more incensed against your majesty
Than all the rest, discharged me with these words:
'Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.'

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?
Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.
But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship,
That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.
Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself.—
You that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET follows.

Glou. [Aside.] Not I:
My thoughts aim at a further matter; I
Stay not for love of Edward, but the crown.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!
Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
And haste is needful in this desperate case.
Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf

Go levy men, and make prepare for war;
They are already, or quickly will be landed: [you.
Myself in person will straight follow

But, ere I go, Hastings and Montague,

I rather wish you foes than hollow friends: [obedience,
But if you mind to hold your true
Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glou. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you. [of victory.

K. Edw. Why, so! then am I sure
Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power. [Exeunt.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But see where Somerset and Clarence come! [friends?

And welcome, Somerset: I hold it cowardice

Else might I think that Clarence, Ed-
Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:
But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.
And now what rests but, in night's coverture,
Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
And but attended by a simple guard,
We may surprise and take him at our pleasure? [very easy:
Our scouts have found the adventure
That as Ulysses and stout Diomede
With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents, [fatal steeds,
And brought from thence the Thracian
So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle, [guard
At unawares may beat down Edward's

For I intend but only to surprise him.
You that will follow me to this attempt,
Applaud the name of Henry with your leader.
[They all cry 'Henry!'
Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort:
For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George! [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, and Others.

Glou. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William Stanley, [hither,
Leave off to wonder why I drew you
Into this chiefest thicket of the park.
Thus stands the case: you know our king, my brother, [hands
Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose
He hath good usage and great liberty;
And often, but attended with weak guard, [self.
Comes hunting this way to disport him-
I have advertised him by secret means
That if about this hour he make this way
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends with horse and men
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter KING EDWARD, and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.
K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see where the huntsmen stand.
Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?
Glou. Brother, the time and case requireth haste: [corner.
Your horse stands ready at the park-

Glou. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceived.
K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John! But why come you in arms?
Mont. To help King Edward in his time of storm,
As every loyal subject ought to do.
K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget
Our title to the crown, and only claim
Our dukedom till God please to send the rest. [hence again:

Fair lords, take leave and stand not to reply.
Farewell, my sovereign.
K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.
Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness' hand.
K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!
Mont. Comfort, my lord; and so I take my leave.
Oxf. [Kissing HENRY'S hand.] And thus I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.
War. Farewell, sweet lords: let's meet at Coventry.
[Exeunt all but KING HENRY and EXETER.
K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest awhile.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?
Methinks the power that Edward hath in field
Should not be able to encounter mine.
Exe. The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.
K. Hen. That's not my fear; my meed hath got me fame:
I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted off their suits with slow delays;
My pity hath been balm to heal their griefs,
My mildness hath allay'd their swelling wounds,
My mercy dried their water-flowing tears;
I have not been desirous of their wealth,
Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd:
Then why should they love Edward more than me?
No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace:
And when the lion fawns upon the lamb,
The lamb will never cease to follow him.
[Shout within, 'A Lancaster! A Lancaster!'
Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-faced Henry; bear him hence;
And once again proclaim us King of England.
You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow:
Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry,
And swell so much the higher by their ebb.—
Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak.
[Exeunt some with KING HENRY.
And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay,
Cold biting winter mars our hoped-for hay.
Glou. Away betimes, before his forces join,
And take the great-grown traitor unawares:
Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.

I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan,
'O, farewell, Warwick!'
War. Sweet rest to his soul!
Fly, lords, and save yourselves; for Warwick bids
You all farewell, to meet again in heaven. [Dies.
Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power!
[Exeunt, bearing off WARWICK'S body.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD in triumph; with CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course, [victory.
And we are graced with wreaths of

And blow it to the source from whence it came: [up,
Thy very beams will dry those vapours
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:
If she have time to breathe, be well assured [ours.
Her faction will be full as strong as
K. Edw. We are advertised by our loving friends [Tewksbury:

SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,
But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard, [lost,
The cable broke, the holding-anchor
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood? [he

As good to chide the waves as speak them fair.
And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?
All these the enemies to our poor bark.
Say you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while! [quickly sink:
Tread on the sand; why, there you
Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off, [death.
Or else you famish; that's a threefold

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand;
Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.
Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy [vided.
To haste thus fast, to find us unpro-
Som. But he's deceived; we are in readiness.
Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.
Oxf. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not budge.

Flourish and March. Enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,
Which, by the heavens' assistance and your strength, [night.
Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere
I need not add more fuel to your fire,
For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out:
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords!
Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say
My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.
Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your sovereign,
Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain, [spent;
His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil. [name, lords,

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces; with QUEEN MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, Prisoners.

K. Edw. Now here a period of tumultuous broils. [straight:
Away with Oxford to Hames Castle
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.
Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak.
Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.
Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.
[Exeunt OXFORD and SOMERSET, guarded.
Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world,
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.
K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward Shall have a high reward, and he his life?
Glou. It is: and lo, where youthful Edward comes!

Enter Soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak. [prick?

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.
K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.
Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.
Prince. I know my duty; you are all undutiful: [George,
Lascivious Edward, and thou perjured
And thou mis-shapen Dick, I tell ye all
I am your better, traitors as ye are;—
And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.
K. Edw. Take that, thou likeness of this railer here.

Glou. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony. [Stabs him.
Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury. [Stabs him.
Q. Mar. O, kill me too!
Glou. Marry, and shall.
[Offers to kill her.
K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold; for we have done too much.

K. Edw. What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.
Glou. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother; [matter:

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence; dispatch me here; [my death:
Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee
Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.
Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?
Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself:
'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity.
What! wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher, [art thou?
Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where
Thou art not here: murder is thy almsdeed; [back.

Q. Mar. So come to you and yours, as to this prince!
[Exit, led out forcibly.
K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower.
K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.
Now march we hence: discharge the common sort [London
With pay and thanks, and let's away to
And see our gentle queen how well she fares:
By this, I hope, she hath a son for me.

SCENE VI.—London. The Tower.

KING HENRY is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Good day, my lord. What, at your book so hard?
K. Hen. Ay, my good lord:—my lord, I should say rather;
'Tis sin to flatter; 'good' was little better: [were alike,
'Good Gloucester' and 'good devil'
And both preposterous; therefore, not 'good lord.'
Glou. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer.

KING EDWARD is discovered sitting on his throne ; QUEEN ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and Others, near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,
Re-purchased with the blood of enemies.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Now is the winter of our discontent [York;
Made glorious summer by this sun of

Our dreadful marches to delightful
Grim-visaged war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front; [steeds
And now, instead of mounting barbed

And descant on mine own deformity:
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover, [days,
To entertain these fair well-spoken
I am determined to prove a villain
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,

As I am subtle, false and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,
About a prophecy, which says that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul: here Clarence comes.

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.

Brother, good day: what means this armed guard
That waits upon your grace?
Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed [Tower.

I'll tell you what; I think it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the king,

The jealous o'erworn widow and herself,
Since that our brother dubb'd them gentlewomen,
Are mighty gossips in this monarchy.

Glou. Her husband, knave ; wouldst thou betray me ?
Brak. I beseech your grace to pardon me, and withal [duke.
Forbear your conference with the noble

Glou. We are the queen's abjects, and must obey.
Brother, farewell : I will unto the king ;
And whatsoever you will employ me in,
Were it to call King Edward's widow sister,
I will perform it to enfranchise you.

The king is sickly, weak and melancholy,
And his physicians fear him mightily.
Glou. Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad indeed.
O, he hath kept an evil diet long,
And overmuch consumed his royal person :
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.
What, is he in his bed ?

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter the corpse of KING HENRY THE SIXTH, borne in an open coffin, Gentlemen bearing halberds, to guard it ; and LADY ANNE as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,—
If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,—
Whilst I awhile obsequiously lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king !
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster !
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood !

Be it lawful that I invocate thy ghost,
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son,
Stabb'd by the selfsame hand that made these wounds!
Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life, I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes.
O, cursed be the hand that made these holes!
Cursed the heart that had the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood that let this blood from hence!
More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
If ever he have child, abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view;
And that be heir to his unhappiness!
If ever he have wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him
Than I am made by my young lord and thee!
Come, now toward Chertsey with your holy load,
Taken from Paul's to be interred there;
And still, as you are weary of the weight,
Rest you, whiles I lament King Henry's corse.

[The Bearers take up the corpse and advance.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Stay, you that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glou. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,
I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.

Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glou. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou, when I command:
Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The Bearers set down the coffin.

Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.
Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell!
Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have; therefore, be gone.

Glou. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not;
For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaims.
If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.
O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh!
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity;
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells;
Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.—
O God, which this blood madest, revenge his death!
O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death!
Either heaven with lightning strike the murderer dead,
Or earth, gape open wide and eat him quick,
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!

Glou. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man:
No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

Glou. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!

Glou. More wonderful, when angels are so angry.
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, diffused infection of a man,

For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.
Glou. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have
Some patient leisure to excuse myself.
Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make
No excuse current, but to hang thyself.
Glou. By such despair, I should accuse myself.
Anne. And, by despairing, shouldst thou stand excused
For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
Which didst unworthy slaughter upon others.
Glou. Say that I slew them not?
Anne. Why, then they are not dead:
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.
Glou. I did not kill your husband.
Anne. Why, then he is alive.
Glou. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.
Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest: Queen Margaret saw [blood;

Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog? then, God grant me too
Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!
O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous!
Glou. The fitter for the King of heaven, that hath him.
Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.
Glou. Let him thank me, that holp to send him thither; [earth.
For he was fitter for that place than

These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.
Glou. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wreck,
You should not blemish it, if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; it is my day, my life.
Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!
Glou. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.
Anne. I would I were, to be revenged on thee.
Glou. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be revenged on him that loveth thee.
Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable, [husband.
To be revenged on him that kill'd my

Anne. Name him.
Glou. Plantagenet.
Anne. Why, that was he.
Glou. The selfsame name, but one of better nature.
Anne. Where is he?
Glou. Here. [She spits at him.] Why dost thou spit at me?

But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on. [She lets fall the sword.
Take up the sword again, or take up me.
Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy death,
I will not be thy executioner.
Glou. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.
Anne. I have already.
Glou. That was in thy rage:
Speak it again, and, even with the word,
This hand, which, for thy love, did kill thy love,
Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love;
To both their deaths shalt thou be accessary.
Anne. I would I knew thy heart.
Glou. 'Tis figured in my tongue.
Anne. I fear me both are false.
Glou. Then never man was true.
Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glou. Say, then, my peace is made.
Anne. That shall you know hereafter.
Glou. But shall I live in hope?
Anne. All men, I hope, live so.

Where, after I have solemnly interr'd
At Chertsey monastery this noble king,
And wet his grave with my repentant tears,
I will with all expedient duty see you:
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.
Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me too,
To see you are become so penitent.
Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.
Glou. Bid me farewell.
Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve;

But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.
[Exeunt LADY ANNE, TRESSEL, and BERKELEY.

Glou. Sirs, take up the corse.

Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord? [attend my coming.

Glou. No, to White-Friars; there [Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.

Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But first I'll turn yon fellow in his grave;
And then return lamenting to my love.
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and LORD GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam: there's no doubt his majesty
Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse:
Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort, [merry words.
And cheer his grace with quick and

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide of me? [such a lord.

Grey. No other harm but loss of

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,
To be your comforter when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young, and his minority [cester,
Is put unto the trust of Richard Glou-
A man that loves not me, nor none of you. [tector?

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be pro-

Q. Eliz. It is determined, not concluded yet:
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY.

Grey. Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace!

Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Stanley,
To your good prayer will scarcely say amen. [your wife,
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assured
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe [accusers;
The envious slanders of her false
Or, if she be accused on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds [grounded malice.
From wayward sickness, and no

Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my Lord of Stanley?

Stan. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I
Are come from visiting his majesty.

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make atonement
Between the Duke of Gloucester and your brothers,
And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well! but that will never be:
I fear our happiness is at the highest.

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glou. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it:
Who are they that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly
That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.
Because I cannot flatter and speak fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive and cog,
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.
Cannot a plain man live and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abused
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks your grace?

Glou. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace.
When have I injured thee? when done
Or thee?—or thee?—or any of your faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal person,—
Whom God preserve better than you would wish!—
Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloucester, you mistake the matter.
The king, of his own royal disposition,
And not provoked by any suitor else;
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself
Against my kindred, brothers, and myself,
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather
The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glou. I cannot tell: the world is grown so bad,
That wrens may prey where eagles dare not perch:
Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloucester;
You envy my advancement and my friends';
God grant we never may have need of you!

Glou. Meantime, God grants that we have need of you:
Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
Myself disgraced, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while many fair promotions
Are daily given to ennoble those
That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By Him that raised me to this careful height
From that contented hap which I enjoyed,
I never did incense his majesty
Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been
An earnest advocate to plead for him.
My lord, you do me shameful injury,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glou. You may deny that you were not the cause
Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord, for—

Glou. She may, Lord Rivers! why, who knows not so? she may do more, sir, than denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments;
And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay those honours on your high desert.
What may she not? She may,—ay, marry, may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glou. What, marry, may she! marry with a king,
A bachelor, a handsome stripling too:
I wis your grandam had a worser match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne [scoffs:
Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty
Of those gross taunts I often have endured.
I had rather be a country servant-maid
Than a great queen, with this condition, [at:
To be thus taunted, scorn'd, and baited
Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET unperceived, behind.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech thee! [me.
Thy honour, state and seat is due to
Glou. What! threat you me with telling of the king?
Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said
I will avouch in presence of the king:

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends:
To royalize his blood I spilt mine own.
Q. Mar. Yea, and much better blood than his or thine.

Ay, and forswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!—
Q. Mar. Which God revenge!
Glou. To fight on Edward's party for the crown;
And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up.
I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's;
Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:
I am too childish-foolish for this world.
Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave the world, [is.

As little joy you may suppose in me,
That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.
Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof;
For I am she, and altogether joyless.
I can no longer hold me patient.
[Advancing.
Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out [from me!
In sharing that which you have pill'd
Which of you trembles not that looks on me? [subjects,
If not, that, I being queen, you bow like
Yet that, by you deposed, you quake like rebels?—
Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away!
Glou. Foul wrinkled witch, what makest thou in my sight?
Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;
That will I make before I let thee go.
Glou. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?
Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment [abode.
Than death can yield me here by my
A husband and a son thou owest to me;—
And thou, a kingdom;—all of you, allegiance: [yours,
This sorrow that I have, by right is
And all the pleasures you usurp, are mine. [on thee,
Glou. The curse my noble father laid
When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes,
And then, to dry them, gavest the duke
Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland,—
His curses, then from bitterness of soul
Denounced against thee, are all fall'n upon thee;
And God, not we, hath plagued thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,
And the most merciless that e'er was heard of!

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all before I came,
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me?
Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven
That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,
Could all not answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?
Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses!
If not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder, to make him a king!
Edward thy son, which now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward my son, which was Prince of Wales,
Die in his youth by like untimely violence!
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's loss;
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!
Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by,
And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my son
Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray him,
That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glou. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag!

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.
If heavens have any grievous plague in store
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace!
The worm of conscience still begnaw thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou livest,
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!
Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
The slave of nature and the son of hell!
Thou slander of thy mother's heavy loins!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's womb!
Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glou. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glou. Ha!

Q. Mar. I call thee not.

Glou. I cry thee mercy then; for I did think
That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply.
O, let me make the period to my curse!

Glou. 'Tis done by me; and ends in 'Margaret.'

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breathed your curse against yourself.

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!
Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?
Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyself.
The day will come that thou shalt wish for me
To help thee curse this poisonous bunch-back'd toad.

Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse,
Lest to thy harm thou move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all moved mine.

Riv. Were you well served, you would be taught your duty.
Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,
Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects: [that duty!
O, serve me well, and teach yourselves

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to me:
Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
And shamefully by you my hopes are butcher'd.
My charity is outrage, life my shame;
And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!
Buck. Have done, have done.

That we may be admitted where he is.
Glou. Well thought upon; I have it here about me.

When you have done, repair to Crosby-place.
But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,

For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps [mark him.

We go to use our hands and not our tongues.

I like you, lads; about your business straight;
Go, go, dispatch.
First Murd. We will, my noble lord.

SCENE IV.—The Same. The Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day? [night,
Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days;
So full of dismal terror was the time!
Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.
Clar. Methought that I had broken from the Tower, [gundy;
And was embark'd to cross to Bur-
And, in my company, my brother Gloucester; [walk
Who, from my cabin tempted me to

And cited up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster
That had befall'n us. As we paced along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,
Methought that Gloucester stumbled; and, in falling, [overboard,
Struck me, that thought to stay him,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.

What dreadful noise of waters in mine
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes! [wrecks;
Methought I saw a thousand fearful
A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon; [of pearl,
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,

Enter the two Murderers.

First Murd. Ho! who's here?
Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow?
and how camest thou hither?
First Murd. I would speak with
Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.
Brak. What, so brief?
Sec. Murd. O sir, 'tis better to be brief than tedious. [more.

That thus I have resign'd my charge
to you.
First Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom: fare you well.
[Exit BRAKENBURY.
Sec. Murd. What, shall we stab him
as he sleeps?
First Murd. No; he'll say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.
Sec. Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake till the judgment-day.
First Murd. Why, then he'll say we stabbed him sleeping.
Sec. Murd. The urging of that word
'judgment' hath bred a kind of remorse
in me.
First Murd. What, art thou afraid?
Sec. Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damned for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.
First Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute.
Sec. Murd. So I am, to let him live.
First Murd. I'll back to the Duke of Gloucester, and tell him so.

Sec. Murd. Nay, I prithee, stay a little: I hope my holy humour will change; 'twas wont to hold me but while one would tell twenty.

First Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

Sec. Murd. Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

First Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done.

Sec. Murd. 'Zounds, he dies: I had forgot the reward. [now?

First Murd. Where's thy conscience

Sec. Murd. In the Duke of Gloucester's purse.

First Murd. So when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

Sec. Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go: there's few or none will entertain it.

First Murd. What if it come to thee again?

Sec. Murd. I'll not meddle with it: it is a dangerous thing: it makes a man a coward: a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'tis a blushing shamefast spirit that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold that I found; it beggars any man that keeps it: it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it.

First Murd. 'Zounds, it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

Sec. Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh.

First Murd. I am strong-framed; he cannot prevail with me.

Sec. Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow that respects his reputation. Come, shall we to this gear?

First Murd. Take him over the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room.

Sec. Murd. O excellent device! and make a sop of him.

First Murd. Soft! he wakes.

Sec. Murd. Strike.

First Murd. No; first let's reason with him. [me a cup of wine.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give

First Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

First Murd. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

Sec. Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

Sec. Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly and how deadly dost thou speak! [pale?
Your eyes do menace me: why look you
Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

Both. To, to, to,——

Clar. To murder me?

Both. Ay, ay.

Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so, [to do it.
And therefore cannot have the hearts

Sec. Murd. And he that hath commanded is the king.

Clar. Erroneous vassal! the great King of kings [manded

Didst break that vow; and with thy treacherous blade [son.

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I
For Edward, for my brother, for his sake: [me for this;
Why, sirs, he sends you not to murder
For in this sin he is as deep as I.
If God will be avenged for that deed,
O, know you yet, He doth it publicly:
Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm;
He needs no indirect nor lawless course
To cut off those that have offended him.
First Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister, [tagenet,

I am his brother, and I love him well.
If you be hired for meed, go back again, [Gloucester;
And I will send you to my brother
Who shall reward you better for my life
Than Edward will for tidings of my death.
Sec. Murd. You are deceived, your brother Gloucester hates you.
Clar. O, no, he loves me, and he holds me dear:
Go you to him from me.
Both. Ay, so we will.
Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York
Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,
And charged us from his soul to love each other, [ship:

He hugg'd me in his arms, and swore,
That he would labour my delivery.

Clar. Not to relent is beastly, sav-

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. The Palace.

Enter KING EDWARD, sick, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and Others.

K. Edw. Why, so: now have I done a good day's work:
You peers, continue this united league:
I every day expect an embassage

Q. Eliz. Here, Hastings; I will never more remember [mine!
Our former hatred, so thrive I and

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him; Hastings, love lord marquess.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I, my lord. [They embrace.

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league [allies,
With thy embracements to my wife's
And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. [To the QUEEN.] Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate [love
Upon your grace, but with all duteous
Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me [love!
With hate in those where I expect most
When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile, [heaven,
Be he unto me! this do I beg of
When I am cold in love to you or yours. [They embrace.

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,
Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.
There wanteth now our brother Gloucester here,
To make the perfect period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Good-morrow to my sovereign king and queen; [day!
And, princely peers, a happy time of

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day.
Brother, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers. [sovereign liege.

'Tis death to me to be at enmity;
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.
First, madam, I entreat true peace of you, [service;

I thank God for my humility.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done!

K. Edw. I pray thee, peace: my soul is full of sorrow.

Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.

K. Edw. Then speak at once what is it thou demand'st.

Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life;
Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman
Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.

Have been beholden to him in his life;
Yet none of you would once plead for his life.

O God, I fear thy justice will take hold
On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this.
Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. O, poor Clarence!

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter the DUCHESS OF YORK, with the two children of CLARENCE.

Boy. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, boy.

Girl. Why do you wring your hands, and beat your breast, [son'?
And cry 'O Clarence, my unhappy

Boy. Why do you look on us, and shake your head, [aways,
And call us orphans, wretches, cast-

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me much;
I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loth to lose him; not your father's death; [lost.
It were lost sorrow to wail one that's

The king my uncle is to blame for this:
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With earnest prayers all to that effect.

Girl. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well:
Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caused your father's death.

Boy. Grandam, we can; for my good uncle Gloucester
Told me, the king, provoked to't by the queen,
Devised impeachments to imprison him:
And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;
Bade me rely on him as on my father,

Duch. Ay, boy.

Boy. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this?

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, distractedly; RIVERS and DORSET following her.

Q. Eliz. O, who shall hinder me to wail and weep, [myself?
To chide my fortune and torment
I'll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience? [violence:

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead! [is gone?
Why grow the branches when the root
Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?
If you will live, lament; if die, be brief,
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's
Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow
As I had title in thy noble husband!
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And lived by looking on his images:
But now two mirrors of his princely semblance [death;
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant
And I for comfort have but one false glass, [in him.
That grieves me when I see my shame
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother, [left thee:
And hast the comfort of thy children
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms,
And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble limbs, [have I,
Clarence and Edward. O, what cause
Thine being but a moiety of my grief,

To overgo thy plaints and drown thy cries! [our father's death;

I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I;
I for an Edward weep, so do not they:
Alas, you three, on me, threefold distress'd, [nurse,
Pour all your tears! I am your sorrow's
And I will pamper it with lamentations.

SCENE III.—London. A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

First Cit. Good-morrow, neighbour: whither away so fast?
Sec. Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:
Hear you the news abroad?
First Cit. Ay, that the king is dead.
Sec. Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better:
I fear, I fear 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

Third Cit. Neighbours, God speed!
First Cit. Give you good-morrow, sir.
Third Cit. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death?
Sec. Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help the while!
Third Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.
First Cit. No, no; by God's good grace his son shall reign.
Third Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!
Sec. Cit. In him there is a hope of government,
That in his nonage council under him,
And in his full and ripen'd years himself, [govern well.
No doubt, shall then and till then
First Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth
Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.
Third Cit. Stood the state so? No, no, good friends, God wot;
For then this land was famously enrich'd [king
With politic grave counsel; then the
Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace.
First Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.
Third Cit. Better it were they all came by his father,
Or by his father there were none at all;
For emulation now, who shall be nearest,
Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not. [cester!
O, full of danger is the Duke of Glou-
And the queen's sons and brothers haught and proud: [rule,
And were they to be ruled, and not to
This sickly land might solace as before.
First Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.
Third Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks;
When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand; [for night?
When the sun sets, who doth not look
Untimely storms make men expect a dearth.
All may be well; but, if God sort it so,
'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.
Sec. Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear:
Ye cannot reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily and full of dread.
Third Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so: [trust
By a divine instinct men's minds mis-
Ensuing danger; as, by proof, we see
The water swell before a boisterous storm.

But leave it all to God. Whither away?

Sec. Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

Third Cit. And so was I: I'll bear you company. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. The Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Arch. Last night, I hear, they lay at Northampton; [night:
At Stony-Stratford will they be to-
To-morrow, or next day, they will be here. [see the prince:

Duch. I long with all my heart to I hope he is much grown since last I saw him. [my son of York

Q. Eliz. But I hear, no; they say Hath almost overta'en him in his growth. [have it so.

York. Ay, mother, but I would not

Duch. Why, my young cousin, it is good to grow. [sit at supper,

York. Grandam, one night, as we did
My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
More than my brother: 'Ay,' quoth my uncle Gloucester,
'Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow apace:' [so fast,
And since, methinks, I would not grow
Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds make haste.

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold [thee;
In him that did object the same to
He was the wretched'st thing when he was young,
So long a-growing and so leisurely,
That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious. [gracious madam.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my

Duch. I hope he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been remember'd, [flout,
I could have given my uncle's grace a
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd mine.

Duch. How, my young York? I prithee, let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast [hours old:
That he could gnaw a crust at two

'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth. [ing jest.
Grandam, this would have been a bit-

Duch. I prithee, pretty York, who told thee this?

York. Grandam, his nurse.

Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. Eliz. A parlous boy; go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger. What news?

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to unfold.

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news then?

Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret,
With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes, Gloucester and Buckingham,

Q. Eliz. For what offence?

Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclosed; [committed
Why or for what these nobles were
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.

Q. Eliz. Ay me, I see the ruin of my house! [hind;
The tiger now hath seized the gentle
Insulting tyranny begins to jet
Upon the innocent and aweless throne:
Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre!
I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days, [beheld!
How many of you have mine eyes
My husband lost his life to get the crown; [toss'd,
And often up and down my sons were
For me to joy and weep their gain and loss:
And being seated, and domestic broils
Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves; brother [to brother,

Blood to blood, self 'gainst self: O, preposterous [spleen;
And frantic outrage, end thy damned
Or let me die, to look on death no more!

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we will to sanctuary.
Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. [To the QUEEN.] My gracious lady, go; [your goods.
And thither bear your treasure and
For my part, I'll resign unto your grace
The seal I keep: and so betide to me
As well I tender you and all of yours!
Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.
[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

The Trumpets sound. Enter the PRINCE OF WALES, GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, CARDINAL BOURCHIER, CATESBY, and Others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glou. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign:
The weary way hath made you melancholy. [on the way

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses
Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy: [me.
I want more uncles here to welcome

Glou. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years [deceit:
Hath not yet dived into the world's
Nor more can you distinguish of a man
Than of his outward show; which, God he knows, [heart.
Seldom or never jumpeth with the
Those uncles which you want were dangerous; [words,
Your grace attended to their sugar'd
But look'd not on the poison of their hearts: [such false friends!
God keep you from them, and from

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none.

Glou My lord, the Mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor, and his Train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord; and thank you all.— [York
I thought my mother and my brother
Would long ere this have met us on the way: [comes not Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he
To tell us whether they will come or no!

Enter HASTINGS.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord: what, will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I,
The queen your mother and your brother York [prince
Have taken sanctuary: the tender
Would fain have come with me to meet your grace, [held.
But by his mother was perforce with-

Buck. Fie, what an indirect and peevish course [your grace
Is this of hers! Lord cardinal, will Persuade the queen to send the Duke of York
Unto his princely brother presently?
If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him, [perforce,
And from her jealous arms pluck him

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory [York,
Can from his mother win the Duke of
Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate [bid
To mild entreaties, God in heaven for-
We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land
Would I be guilty of so deep a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord,
Too ceremonious and traditional:
Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,
You break not sanctuary in seizing him.
The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have deserved the place, [the place,
To those whose dealings have deserved
And those who have the wit to claim the place:
This prince hath neither claim'd it nor deserved it; [have it:
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot
Then, taking him from thence that is not there,

You break no privilege nor charter there.
Oft have I heard of sanctuary men;
But sanctuary children ne'er till now.
Card. My lord, you shall o'errule my mind for once. [with me?
Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go
Hast. I go, my lord.
Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may.
[Exeunt the CARDINAL and HASTINGS.
Say, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come, [tion?
Where shall we sojourn till our corona-
Glou. Where it seems best unto your royal self.
If I may counsel you, some day or two
Your highness shall repose you at the Tower: [thought most fit
Then where you please, and shall be
For your best health and recreation.
Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place. [lord?
Did Julius Cæsar build that place, my
Glou. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place; [edified.
Which, since, succeeding ages have re-
Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported [it?
Successively from age to age, he built
Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.
Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd, [age to age,
Methinks the truth should live from
As 'twere retail'd to all posterity,
Even to the general all-ending day.
Glou. [Aside.] So wise so young, they say, do ne'er live long.
Prince. What say you, uncle?
Glou. I say, without characters, fame lives long. [Iniquity,
[Aside] Thus, like the formal Vice,
I moralize two meanings in one word.
Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous man; [wit,
With what his valour did enrich his
His wit set down to make his valour live:
Death makes no conquest of this conqueror;
For now he lives in fame, though not in life. [ham,—
I'll tell you what, my cousin Bucking-
Buck. What, my gracious lord?
Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or die a soldier, as I lived a king.
Glou. [Aside.] Short summers lightly have a forward spring.

Enter young YORK, HASTINGS, and the CARDINAL.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the Duke of York.
Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother?
York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.
Prince. Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is yours: [that title,
Too late he died that might have kept
Which by his death hath lost much majesty. [Lord of York?
Glou. How fares our cousin, noble
York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord, [growth:
You said that idle weeds are fast in
The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.
Glou. He hath, my lord.
York. And therefore is he idle?
Glou. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so. [you than I.
York. Then is he more beholden to
Glou. He may command me as my sovereign; [man.
But you have power in me as in a kins-
York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger. [with all my heart.
Glou. My dagger, little cousin?
Prince. A beggar, brother?
York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give; [to give.
And being but a toy, which is no grief
Glou. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.
York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it. [enough.
Glou. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light
York. O, then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts; [nay.
In weightier things you'll say a beggar
Glou. It is too weighty for your grace to wear. [heavier.
York. I weigh it lightly, were it
Glou. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?
York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.
Glou. How?
York. Little.
Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk: [with him.
Uncle, your grace knows how to bear

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me:
Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me;
Because that I am little, like an ape,
He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.
Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons!
To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,
He prettily and aptly taunts himself:
So cunning and so young is wonderful.
Glou. My lord, will't please you pass along?
Myself and my good cousin Buckingham
Will to your mother, to entreat of her
To meet you at the Tower and welcome you.
York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord?
Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.
York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.
Glou. Why, what should you fear?
York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry ghost:
My grandam told me he was murder'd there.
Prince. I fear no uncles dead.
Glou. Nor none that live, I hope.
Prince. An if they live, I hope I need not fear.
But come, my lord; and with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

A Sennet. Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, and CATESBY.

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York
Was not incensed by his subtle mother
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
Glou. No doubt, no doubt: O, 'tis a parlous boy;
Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable:
He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.
Buck. Well, let them rest.—Come hither, Catesby:
Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend
As closely to conceal what we impart:
Thou know'st our reasons urged upon the way;
What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter
To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,
For the instalment of this noble duke
In the seat royal of this famous isle?
Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,
That he will not be won to aught against him.
Buck. What think'st thou, then, of Stanley? what will he?
Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.
Buck. Well, then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby,
And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings,
How he doth stand affected to our purpose;
And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,
To sit about the coronation.
If thou dost find him tractable to us,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
If he be leaden, icy-cold, unwilling,
Be thou so too; and so break off your talk,
And give us notice of his inclination:
For we to-morrow hold divided councils,
Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.
Glou. Commend me to Lord William: tell him, Catesby,
His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle;
And bid my friend, for joy of this good news,
Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.
Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.
Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.
Glou. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?
Cate. You shall, my lord.
Glou. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both.

Exit CATESBY.

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive
Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?
Glou. Chop off his head, man; somewhat we will do:
And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me
The earldom of Hereford, and the moveables
Whereof the king my brother stood possess'd.
Buck. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.
Glou. And look to have it yielded with all willingness.
Come, let us sup betimes; that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Before LORD HASTINGS' House.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. [Knocking.] My lord, my lord!
Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?
Mess. One from the Lord Stanley.
Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock?
Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Cannot thy master sleep these tedious nights? [have to say.
Mess. So it should seem by that I
First, he commends him to your noble lordship.
Hast. And then?
Mess. And then he sends you word
He dreamt to-night the boar had razed his helm: [held;
Besides, he says there are two councils
And that may be determined at the one
Which may make you and him to rue at the other. [ship's pleasure.
Therefore he sends to know your lord-
If presently you will take horse with him, [ward the north,
And with all speed post with him to-
To shun the danger that his soul divines.
Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord; [cils:
Bid him not fear the separated coun-
His honour and myself are at the one,
And at the other is my good friend Catesby; [eth us
Where nothing can proceed that touch-
Whereof I shall not have intelligence.
Tell him his fears are shallow, wanting instance: [fond
And for his dreams, I wonder he's so
To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers:
To fly the boar before the boar pursues,
Were to incense the boar to follow us
And make pursuit where he did mean no chase. [me;
Go, bid thy master rise and come to
And we will both together to the Tower,
Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.
Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say.

[Exit.

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good-morrows to my noble lord!
Hast. Good-morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring:
What news, what news, in this our tottering state? [my lord;
Cate. It is a reeling world indeed,
And I believe will never stand upright
Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.
Hast. How! wear the garland! dost thou mean the crown?
Cate. Ay, my good lord.
Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders
Before I'll see the crown so foul misplaced. [at it?
But canst thou guess that he doth aim
Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward
Upon his party, for the gain thereof:
And thereupon he sends you this good news,
That this same very day your enemies,
The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret. [that news,
Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for
Because they have been still my adversaries!
But, that I'll give my voice on Richard's side, [descent,
To bar my master's heirs in true
God knows I will not do it, to the death.
Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind!
Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelvemonth hence,
That they who brought me in my master's hate,
I live to look upon their tragedy.
Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older, [not on it.
I'll send some packing that yet think
Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord, [not for it.
When men are unprepared and look
Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out
With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey: and so 'twill do [selves as safe
With some men else, who think them-
As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear [ham.
To princely Richard and to Bucking-
Cate. The princes both make high account of you;
[Aside] For they account his head upon the bridge. [well deserved it.
Hast. I know they do; and I have

Enter STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boar-spear, man? [vided?
Fear you the boar, and go so unpro-
Stan. My lord, good-morrow; good-morrow, Catesby:
You may jest on, but, by the holy rood,
I do not like these several councils, I.
Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as you do yours;
And never in my life, I do protest,
Was it more precious to me than 'tis now:
Think you, but that I know our state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?
Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,
Were jocund, and supposed their state was sure, [trust;
And they, indeed, had no cause to mis-
But yet, you see, how soon the day o'ercast. [doubt:
This sudden stab of rancour I mis-
Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward! [day is spent.
What, shall we toward the Tower? the
Hast. Come, come, have with you. Wot you what, my lord?
To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.
Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads
Than some that have accused them wear their hats.
But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow.
[Exeunt STANLEY and CATESBY.
How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee? [please to ask.
Purs. The better that your lordship
Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now [now we meet:
Than when thou met'st me last where
Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the queen's allies;
But now, I tell thee,—keep it to thyself,— [death,
This day those enemies are put to
And I in better state than e'er I was.
Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content!
Hast. Gramercy, fellow: there, drink that for me.
[Throwing him his purse.
Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit.

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.
Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart. [cise;
I am in your debt for your last exer-
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?
Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest; [hand.
Your honour hath no shriving work in
Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,
The men you talk of came into my mind.
What, go you toward the Tower?
Buck. I do, my lord; but long I shall not stay: [thence.
I shall return before your lordship
Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.
Buck. [Aside.] And supper too, although thou know'st it not.—
Come, will you go?
Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.

Enter RATCLIFF, with a Guard, conducting RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN to execution.

Rat. Come, bring forth the prisoners.
Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this:
To-day shalt thou behold a subject die
For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.
Grey. God keep the prince from all the pack of you! [suckers.
A knot you are of damned blood-
Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter. [lives is out.
Rat. Dispatch; the limit of your
Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison,
Fatal and ominous to noble peers!
Within the guilty closure of thy walls
Richard the Second here was hack'd to death; [seat,
And, for more slander to thy dismal

We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink. [upon our heads,
Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fall'n
When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I, [her son.
For standing by when Richard stabb'd
Riv. Then cursed she Hastings, then cursed she Buckingham,
Then cursed she Richard. O, remember, God, [for us!
To hear her prayers for them, as now
And for my sister and her princely sons,
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood, [be spilt.
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must
Rat. Make haste; the hour of death is expiate.
Riv. Come, Grey, come, Vaughan, let us here embrace:
Farewell, until we meet again in heaven. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. The Tower.

BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, LOVEL, RATCLIFF, and Others, sitting at a table. Officers of the Council attending.

Hast. My lords, at once: the cause why we are met
Is, to determine of the coronation:
In God's name, speak: when is this royal day? [royal time?
Buck. Are all things ready for that
Stan. It is; and wants but nomination. [happy day.
Ely. To-morrow then I judge a
Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein? [duke?
Who is most inward with the noble
Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.
Buck. We know each other's faces; for our hearts, [yours;
He knows no more of mine than I of
Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine.
Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love. [loves me well;
Hast. I thank his grace, I know he
But, for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my noble lords, may name the time; [voice,
And in the duke's behalf I'll give my
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself.
Glou. My noble lords and cousins all, good-morrow.
I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design [been concluded.
Which by my presence might have
Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord, [your part,—
William Lord Hastings had pronounced
I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.
Glou. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder;
His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.
Hast. I thank your grace.
Glou. My Lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn, [there:
I saw good strawberries in your garden
I do beseech you send for some of them.
Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit.
Glou. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. [Takes him aside.
Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business;
And finds the testy gentleman so hot,
As he will lose his head ere give consent
His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it, [throne.
Shall lose the royalty of England's
Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile; I'll go with you.
[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.
Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.
To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;
For I myself am not so well provided
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter BISHOP OF ELY.

Ely. Where is my lord protector? I have sent for these strawberries.
Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning:
There's some conceit or other likes him well, [such spirit.
When he doth bid good-morrow with
I think there's ne'er a man in Christendom [he;
Can lesser hide his love or hate than

For by his face straight shall you know his heart.
Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face
By any likelihood he show'd to-day?
Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;
For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.
Stan. I pray God he be not, I say.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glou. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve
That do conspire my death with devilish plots
Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd
Upon my body with their hellish charms?
Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord,
Makes me most forward in this noble presence
To doom the offenders, whosoe'er they be:
I say, my lord, they have deserved death.
Glou. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil,
Look how I am bewitch'd; behold, mine arm
Is, like a blasted sapling, wither'd up:
And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,
Consorted with that harlot, strumpet Shore,
That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.
Hast. If they have done this thing, my gracious lord,—
Glou. If! thou protector of this damned strumpet,
Talk'st thou to me of 'ifs?' Thou art a traitor:—
Off with his head! Now, by Saint Paul I swear,
I will not dine until I see the same.
Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done;
The rest that love me, rise and follow me.

[Exeunt all but HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and LOVEL.

Hast. Woe, woe for England! not a whit for me;
For I, too fond, might have prevented this.
Stanley did dream the boar did raze his helm;
But I disdain'd it, and did scorn to fly.
Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,
And startled, when he look'd upon the Tower,
As loth to bear me to the slaughter-house.
O, now I want the priest that spake to me:
I now repent I told the pursuivant,
As too triumphing, how mine enemies
To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd,
And I myself secure in grace and favour.
O Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse
Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head!
Rat. Dispatch, my lord; the duke would be at dinner:
Make a short shrift; he longs to see your head.
Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!
Who builds his hope in air of your fair looks,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast,
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.
Lov. Come, come, dispatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim.
Hast. O bloody Richard! miserable England!
I prophesy the fearfull'st time to thee
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.
Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head:
They smile at me who shortly shall be dead. [Exeunt.

As if thou wert distraught and mad with terror? deep tragedian;
Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;
Speak and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion: ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles;
And both are ready in their offices,
At any time, to grace my stratagems.
But what, is Catesby gone?
Glou. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck. Let me alone to entertain him.
—Lord mayor,—

Glou. Look to the drawbridge there!
Buck. Hark, hark! a drum.
Glou. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.
Buck. Lord mayor, the reason we have sent— [are enemies.

So mighty and so many my defects,
As I would rather hide me from my greatness,—
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,—
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace;
But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say that Edward is your brother's son: [wife;
So say we too, but not by Edward's
For first he was contract to Lady Lucy,—
Your mother lives a witness to his vow,—
And afterwards by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the King of France.
These both put by, a poor petitioner,
A care-crazed mother to a many sons,
A beauty-waning and distressed widow,
Even in the afternoon of her best days,

Seduced the pitch and height of all his [thoughts
To base declension and loathed bigamy:
By her, in his unlawful bed, he got
This Edward, whom our manners call the prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity;
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful suit!

Glou. Alas, why would you heap those cares on me?
I am unfit for state and majesty:
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot nor I will not yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it,—as, in love and zeal,
Loth to depose the child, your brother's [son;
As well we know your tenderness of heart
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally indeed to all estates,—

Buck. My lord, your promise for the
K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I was at Exeter, [castle,
The mayor in courtesy show'd me the
And call'd it Rougemont: at which name I started;
Because a bard of Ireland told me once,

I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in mind
Of what you promised me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke [tion.
Betwixt thy begging and my meditaI am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whether you will or no.

K. Rich. Thou troublest me: I am not in the vein.

[Exeunt all but BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. And is it thus? repays he my deep service [for this?
With such contempt? made I him king
O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone
To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on! [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done;
The most arch deed of piteous massacre
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs, [passion,
Melting with tenderness and mild com-
Wept like two children in their deaths' sad story. [gentle babes:
'Lo, thus,' quoth Dighton, 'lay the
'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest, 'girdling one another
Within their alabaster innocent arms:
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
Which in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.
A book of prayers on their pillow lay;
Which once,' quoth Forrest, 'almost changed my mind;' [stopp'd;
But O! the devil'—there the villain
When Dighton thus told on: 'We smothered [Nature,
The most replenished sweet work of
That from the prime creation e'er she framed.' [and remorse;
Hence both are gone with conscience
They could not speak; and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king.
And here he comes.

Enter KING RICHARD.

All health, my sovereign lord!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy news? [gave in charge

Tyr. If to have done the thing you
Beget your happiness, be happy then,
For it is done.

K. Rich. [dead?
But didst thou see them

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. [Tyrrel?
And buried, gentle

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them; [know.
But how or in what place I do not

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after-supper, [death.
When thou shalt tell the process of their
Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.
Farewell till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close; [marriage;
His daughter meanly have I match'd in
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom, [goodnight.
And Anne my wife hath bid the world
Now, for I know the Breton Richmond aims [daughter,
At young Elizabeth, my brother's
And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. My lord!

K. Rich. Good news or bad, that thou comest in so bluntly?

Cate. Bad news, my lord: Ely is fled to Richmond;
And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen, [creaseth.
Is in the field, and still his power in-

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near [strength.
Than Buckingham and his rash-levied
Come, I have learn'd that fearful commenting

Is leaden servitor to dull delay;
Delay leads impotent and snail-paced beggary:
Then fiery expedition be my wing,
Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king!
Go, muster men: my counsel is my shield;
We must be brief when traitors brave the field. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow [death.
And drop into the rotten mouth of
Here in these confines slily have I lurk'd,
To watch the waning of mine enemies.
A dire induction am I witness to,
And will to France, hoping the consequence
Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.
Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret: who comes here? [Retires.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender babes! [sweets!
My unblown flowers, new-appearing
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air
And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mother's lamentation!
Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right for right [night.
Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged
Duch. So many miseries have crazed my voice, [and mute.
That my woe-wearied tongue is still
Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead? [Plantagenet,
Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.
Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs, [wolf?
And throw them in the entrails of the
When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done?
Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son.
Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost,
Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd, [days,
Brief abstract and record of tedious
Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth, [Sitting down.
Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!
Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave
As thou canst yield a melancholy seat!
Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here.
Ah, who hath any cause to mourn but I? [Sitting down by her.
Q. Mar. [Advancing.] If ancient sorrow be most reverend,
Give mine the benefit of seniory.
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand.
If sorrow can admit society,
[Sitting down with them.
Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine: [him;
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd
I had a Harry, till a Richard kill'd him;
Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; [kill'd him.
Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard
Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him: [kill him.
I had a Rutland too, thou holp'st to
Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.
From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept [death:
A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to
That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes, [blood,
To worry lambs and lap their gentle
That foul defacer of God's handiwork,
That excellent grand tyrant of the earth, [souls,
That reigns in galled eyes of weeping
Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves. [God,
O upright, just, and true-disposing
How do I thank thee, that this carnal cur
Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan! [in my woes!
Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not
God witness with me, I have wept for thine. [for revenge,
Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry
And now I cloy me with beholding it.
Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward; [Edward;
Thy other Edward dead, to quit my

Young York he is but boot, because both they [loss:
Match not the high perfection of my
Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my Edward;
And the beholders of this tragic play,
The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey, [graves.
Untimely smother'd in their dusky
Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer,
Only reserved their factor, to buy souls
And send them thither; but at hand, at hand,
Ensues his piteous and unpitied end:
Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray, [hence.
To have him suddenly convey'd from
Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,
That I may live to say, The dog is dead!

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time would come [curse
That I should wish for thee to help me
That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad!

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then vain flourish of my fortune;
I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen;
The presentation of but what I was;
The flattering index of a direful pageant; [below;
One heaved a-high, to be hurl'd down
A mother only mock'd with two fair babes; [a bubble,
A dream of what thou wert; a breath,
A sign of dignity, a garish flag
To be the aim of every dangerous shot;
A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.
Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers? [thou joy?
Where be thy two sons? wherein dost
Who sues, and kneels, and cries 'God save the queen'? [ter'd thee?
Where be the bending peers that flat-
Where be the thronging troops that follow'd thee? [thou art:
Decline all this, and see what now
For happy wife, a most distressed widow; [name;
For joyful mother, one that wails the
For one being sued to, one that humbly sues; [care;
For queen, a very caitiff crown'd with
For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me; [ing one;
For one being fear'd of all, now fear-
For one commanding all, obey'd of none. [about,
Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd
And left thee but a very prey to time;
Having no more but thought of what thou wert, [thou art.
To torture thee the more, being what
Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not
Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?
Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;
From which even here I slip my wearied head,
And leave the burden of it all on thee.
Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mischance: [smile in France.
These English woes shall make me

Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay awhile, [enemies!
And teach me how to curse mine

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day; [woe;
Compare dead happiness with living
Think that thy babes were fairer than they were, [is:
And he that slew them fouler than he
Bettering thy loss makes the bad causer worse: [curse.
Revolving this will teach thee how to

Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O, quicken them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine.

[Exit.

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words? [client woes,

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their
Airy succeeders of intestate joys,
Poor breathing orators of miseries!
Let them have scope: though what they do impart [heart.
Help nothing else, yet do they ease the

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied: go with me, [smother
And in the breath of bitter words let's
My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

[Drums, within.

I hear his drum: be copious in exclaims.

Enter KING RICHARD and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition? [cepted thee,

Duch. O, she that might have inter-

By strangling thee in her accursed womb, [thou hast done!
From all the slaughters, wretch, that
Q. Eliz. Hidest thou that forehead with a golden crown,
Where should be branded, if that right
were right, [that crown,
The slaughter of the prince that owed
And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers? [my children?
Tell me, thou villain slave, where are Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence?
And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?
Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers,
Vaughan, Grey?
Duch. Where is kind Hastings?
K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike
alarum, drums! [women
Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale
Rail on the Lord's anointed: strike, I say! [Flourish. Alarums.
Either be patient, and entreat me fair,
Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.
Duch. Art thou my son?
K. Rich. Ay, I thank God, my father, and yourself.
Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.
K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition, [proof.
That cannot brook the accent of re-
Duch. O, let me speak! [hear.
K. Rich. Do then; but I'll not Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words. [for I am in haste.
K. Rich. And brief, good mother;
Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have stay'd for thee,
God knows, in torment and in agony.
K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?
Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it well, [my hell.
Thou camest on earth to make the earth
A grievous burden was thy birth to me;
Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;
Thy school-days frightful, desperate,
wild, and furious;
Thy prime of manhood daring, bold,
and venturous; [and bloody,
Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly,
More mild, but yet more harmful, kind
in hatred: [name,
What comfortable hour canst thou
That ever graced me in thy company?
K. Rich. Faith, none, but Humphrey
Hour, that call'd your grace
To breakfast once forth of my company.
If I be so disgracious in your sight,
Let me march on, and not offend you,
madam.—
Strike up the drum.
Duch. I prithee, hear me speak.
K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.
Duch. Hear me a word;
For I shall never speak to thee again.
K. Rich. So! [just ordinance,
Duch. Either thou wilt die, by God's
Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror,
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish
And never look upon thy face again.
Therefore take with thee my most heavy curse; [more
Which, in the day of battle, tire thee
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!
My prayers on the adverse party fight;
And there the little souls of Edward's children
Whisper the spirits of thine enemies
And promise them success and victory.
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend. [Exit.
Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse
Abides in me; I say amen to her. [Going.
K. Rich. Stay, madam; I must speak a word with you.
Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood [Richard,
For thee to murder: for my daughters,
They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens; [lives.
And therefore level not to hit their
K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd
Elizabeth,
Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.
Q. Eliz. And must she die for this?
O, let her live, [beauty;
And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her
Slander myself as false to Edward's bed;
Throw over her the veil of infamy:
So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding
slaughter, [daughter.
I will confess she was not Edward's
K. Rich. Wrong not her birth, she is of royal blood. [is not so.
Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.
K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were opposite. [were contrary.
Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends
K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny. [makes destiny:
Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace
My babes were destined to a fairer death, [life.
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer
K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.
Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd [life.
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom,
Whose hand soever lanced their tender hearts,
Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:
No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt [heart,
Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.
But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame, [name my boys
My tongue should to thy ears not
Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.
K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise
And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours
Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd! [the face of heaven,
Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with
To be discover'd, that can do me good?
K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.
Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?
K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of fortune, [glory.
The high imperial type of this earth's
Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrows with report of it; [honour,
Tell me what state, what dignity, what
Canst thou demise to any child of mine?
K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and all,
Will I withal endow a child of thine;
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul
Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs
Which thou supposest I have done to thee.
Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness [date.
Last longer telling than thy kindness'
K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter.
Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.
K. Rich. What do you think?
Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul:
So from thy soul's love didst thou love her brothers; [thee for it.
And from my heart's love I do thank
K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning: [daughter,
I mean, that with my soul I love thy
And do intend to make her Queen of England.
Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?
K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen: who else should be?
Q. Eliz. What, thou?
K. Rich. I, even I: what think you of it, madam?
Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?
K. Rich. That I would learn of you, [humour,
As one being best acquainted with her
Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?
K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.
Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers, [grave
A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon en-
Edward and York; then, haply, will she weep: [Margaret
Therefore present to her,—as sometime
Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,— [drain
A handkerchief; which, say to her, did
The purple sap from her sweet brother's body, [withal.
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes
If this inducement move her not to love.
Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;
Tell her thou madest away her uncle Clarence,
Her uncle Rivers; ay, and for her sake,
Madest quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne.
K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is not the way
To win your daughter.
Q. Eliz. There is no other way;

Unless thou couldst put on some other shape, [this.
And not be Richard that hath done all
K. Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her?
Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee, [spoil.
Having bought love with such a bloody

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,
Which after-hours give leisure to repent. [sons,
If I did take the kingdom from your
To make amends, I'll give it to your daughter.
If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,
To quicken your increase, I will beget
Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter:
A grandam's name is little less in love
Than is the doting title of a mother;
They are as children but one step below,
Even of your mettle, of your very blood;
Of all one pain, save for a night of groans [sorrow.
Endured of her, for whom you bid like
Your children were vexation to your youth, [age.
But mine shall be a comfort to your
The loss you have is but a son being king, [queen.
And by that loss your daughter is made
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindness as I can.
Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul
Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall call home
To high promotions and great dignity:
The king that calls your beauteous daughter wife,
Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother;
Again shall you be mother to a king,
And all the ruins of distressful times
Repair'd with double riches of content.
What! we have many goodly days to see: [shed
The liquid drops of tears that you have
Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl,
Advantaging their loan with interest
Of ten times double gain of happiness.
Go, then, my mother, to thy daughter go; [experience;
Make bold her bashful years with your
Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale;
Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame [princess
Of golden sovereignty; acquaint the
With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys: [chastised
And when this arm of mine hath
The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, [I come,
Bound with triumphant garlands will
And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed;
To whom I will retail my conquest won,
And she shall be sole victress, Cæsar's Cæsar.
Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother
Would be her lord? or shall I say, her uncle? [uncles?
Or, he that slew her brothers and her
Under what title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the law, my honour and her love, [years?

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best
K. Rich. Then in plain terms tell her my loving tale.
Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest is too harsh a style. [and too quick.
K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow

Q. Eliz. O no, my reasons are too deep and dead;
Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves.
K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam; that is past.
Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I till heart-strings break.
K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown,—
Q. Eliz. Profaned, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd.
K. Rich. I swear— [no oath:
Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is
Thy George, profaned, hath lost his holy honour;
Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue;
Thy crown, usurp'd, disgraced his kingly glory. [believed,
If something thou wouldst swear to be
Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.
K. Rich. Now, by the world,—
Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.
K. Rich. My father's death,—
Q. Eliz. Thy life hath that dishonour'd.
K. Rich. Then, by myself,—
Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-misused.
K. Rich. Why then, by God,— [all.
Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of
If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by Him,
The unity the king thy brother made
Had not been broken, nor my brother slain: [Him,
If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by
The imperial metal, circling now thy head, [child;
Had graced the tender temples of my
And both the princes had been breathing here, [dust,
Which now, two tender bedfellows for
Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms.
What canst thou swear by now?
K. Rich. The time to come.
Q. Eliz. That thou hast wronged in the time o'erpast;
For I myself have many tears to wash
Hereafter time, for time past wrong'd by thee. [hast slaughter'd,
The children live, whose parents thou

Misused ere used, by times ill-used o'erpast. [repent,
K. Rich. As I intend to prosper and
So thrive I in my dangerous attempt
Of hostile arms! myself myself confound! [hours!
Heaven and fortune bar me happy
Day, yield me not thy light; nor, night, thy rest!
Be opposite all planets of good luck
To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,

In her consists my happiness and thine;
Without her, follows to myself, and thee, [soul,
Herself, the land, and many a Christian
Death, desolation, ruin, and decay:
It cannot be avoided but by this;
It will not be avoided but by this.
Therefore, dear mother,—I must call you so,—
Be the attorney of my love to her:
Plead what I will be, not what I have been;
Not my deserts, but what I will deserve:
Urge the necessity and state of times,
And be not peevish-fond in great designs. [devil thus?

[Kissing her. Exit Q. Elizabeth.
Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman!

Enter Ratcliff; Catesby following.

How now! what news?
Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast
Rideth a puissant navy; to the shore
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends, [back:
Unarm'd, and unresolved to beat them
'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral; [aid
And there they hull, expecting but the
Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.
K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk:
Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby; where is he?
Cate. Here, my lord.
K. Rich. Fly to the duke. [To Ratcliff] Post thou to Salisbury:
When thou comest thither,—[To Catesby] Dull, unmindful villain, [to the duke?
Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not
Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure,
What from your grace I shall deliver to him. [him levy straight
K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby: bid
The greatest strength and power he can make,
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.
Cate. I go. [Exit.
Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?
K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go?
Rat. Your highness told me I should post before.

Enter Stanley.

K. Rich. My mind is changed.—Stanley, what news with you?
Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;
Nor none so bad but well may be reported. [good nor bad!
K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither
What need'st thou run so many miles about, [est way?
When thou mayst tell thy tale the near-
Once more, what news?
Stan. Richmond is on the seas.
K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him! [there?
White-liver'd runagate, what doth he

K. Rich. Well, as you guess?
Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton,
He makes for England, here, to claim the crown. [sword unsway'd?

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to
You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.
Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.
Stan. No, mighty liege; therefore mistrust me not.
K. Rich. Where is thy power then, to beat him back?
Where be thy tenants and thy followers?
Are they not now upon the western shore, [ships?
Safe-conducting the rebels from their
Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.
K. Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the north,
When they should serve their sovereign in the west?
Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty king:
Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave,
I'll muster up my friends, and meet your grace [shall please.
Where and what time your majesty
K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:
I will not trust you, sir.
Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful:
I never was nor never will be false.
K. Rich. Well, go, muster men; but, hear you, leave behind
Your son, George Stanley: look your heart be firm,
Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you. [Exit.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,
As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many more confederates, are in arms.

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms;
And every hour more competitors
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter a third Messenger.

Third Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death? [He strikes him.
There, take thou that, till thou bring better news. [your majesty

Third Mess. The news I have to tell
Is, that by sudden floods and fall of waters, [scatter'd;
Buckingham's army is dispersed and
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.

K. Rich. O, I cry thee mercy:
There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

Third Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter a fourth Messenger.

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms;
If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Cate. My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken;
That is the best news: that the Earl of Richmond [ford,
Is with a mighty power landed at Mil-
Is colder tidings, yet they must be told.

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! while we reason here,
A royal battle might be won and lost:
Some one take order Buckingham be brought
To Salisbury; the rest march on with me. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—LORD STANLEY'S House.

Enter STANLEY and SIR CHRISTOPHER URSWICK.

Stan. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me:
That in the sty of this most bloody boar
My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold: [head;
If I revolt, off goes young George's

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury. An open Place.

Enter the Sheriff, and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me speak with him? [patient.
Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be
Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Rivers, Grey, [Edward,
Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By underhand corrupted foul injustice,
If that your moody discontented souls
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction!
This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?
Sher. It is, my lord.
Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.
This is the day that, in King Edward's time, [found
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was
False to his children or his wife's allies;
This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall
By the false faith of him whom most I trusted; [soul
This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful
Is the determined respite of my wrongs.
That high All-Seer which I dallied with
Hath turned my feigned prayer on my head, [jest.
And given in earnest what I begg'd in
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points on their masters' bosoms:
Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck:
'When he,' quoth she, 'shall split thy heart with sorrow,
Remember Margaret was a prophetess.'
Come, sirs, convey me to the block of shame;
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Plain near Tamworth.

Enter RICHMOND, OXFORD, SIR JAMES BLUNT, SIR WALTER HERBERT, and Others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,
Bruised underneath the yoke of tyranny,
Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we march'd on without impediment; [Stanley
And here receive we from our father
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement. [boar,
The wretched, bloody, and usurping

Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough [swine
In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul
Lies now even in the centre of this isle,
Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn: [day's march.
From Tamworth thither is but one
In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war.
Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand swords,
To fight against that bloody homicide.
Herb. I doubt not but his friends will turn to us.
Blunt. He hath no friends but who are friends for fear, [him.
Which in his dearest need will fly from
Richm. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name, march:
True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings;
Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter KING RICHARD, and Forces; the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and Others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tents, even here in Bosworth field. [sad?
My Lord of Surrey, why look you so
Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.
K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk,—
Nor. Here, most gracious liege.
K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; ha! must we not?
Nor. We must both give and take, my gracious lord.
K. Rich. Up with my tent! here will I lie to-night!
[Soldiers begin to set up the KING'S tent.

K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:
I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.
Set it down. Is ink and paper ready?
Rat. It is, my lord.
K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.

Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent
And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.
[KING RICHARD retires into his tent. Exeunt RATCLIFF, CATESBY, and the other Attendants.

The Ghost of PRINCE EDWARD, Son to HENRY THE SIXTH, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. [To RICHARD.] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!
Think, how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth [die!
At Tewksbury: despair therefore, and
[To RICHMOND] Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls
Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:
King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of KING HENRY THE SIXTH rises.

Ghost. [To RICHARD.] When I was mortal, my anointed body
By thee was punched full of deadly holes: [and die!
Think on the Tower and me: despair,
Harry the Sixth bids thee despair and die. [thou conqueror!

[To RICHMOND.] Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;
Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of QUEEN ANNE rises.

Ghost. [To RICHARD.] Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,
That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!
[To RICHMOND.] Thou, quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;
Dream of success and happy victory!
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of BUCKINGHAM rises.

Ghost. [To RICHARD.] The first was I that help'd thee to the crown;
The last was I that felt thy tyranny:
O, in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness!
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death:
[thy breath!
Fainting, despair; despairing, yield
[To RICHMOND.] I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid:
But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
[mond's side;
God and good angels fight on Rich-
And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

Then fly. What, from myself? Great
Lest I revenge. What, myself on myself?
[for any good
Alack! I love myself. Wherefore?
That I myself have done unto myself?
O, no! alas, I rather hate myself
For hateful deeds committed by myself!
I am a villain: yet I lie, I am not.
Fool, of thyself speak well: fool, do not flatter.
[tongues,
My conscience hath a thousand several
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
[villain.
And every tale condemns me for a
Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree;
Murder, stern murder, in the direst degree;
All several sins, all used in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all 'Guilty guilty!'
[loves me;
I shall despair. There is no creature
And if I die, no soul will pity me:
Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself?

Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd [threat
Came to my tent; and every one did
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord!
K. Rich. 'Zounds! who is there?
Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn;
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour. [a fearful dream!
K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I have dream'd
What think'st thou, will our friends prove all true?
Rat. No doubt, my lord. [fear,—
K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I fear, I
Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.
K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night [Richard

Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams
That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,
Have I since your departure had, my lords. [Richard murder'd,
Methought their souls, whose bodies
Came to my tent, and cried on victory:
I promise you my heart is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream.
How far into the morning is it, lords?
Lords. Upon the stroke of four.
Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His Oration to his Soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on: yet remember this,
God and our good cause fight upon our side; [souls,
The prayers of holy saints and wronged
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces; [against
Richard except, those whom we fight
Had rather have us win than him they follow. [gentlemen,
For what is he they follow? truly,
A bloody tyrant and a homicide;
One raised in blood, and one in blood establish'd; [he hath,
One that made means to come by what
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him; [foil
A base foul stone, made precious by the
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy:
Then, if you fight against God's enemy,
God will in justice ward you as his soldiers;

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond?
Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.
K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smiled and said 'The better for our purpose.'
K. Rich. He was i' the right; and so indeed it is. [Clock strikes.
Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar.
Who saw the sun to-day?
Rat. Not I, my lord.
K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for by the book [ago:
He should have braved the east an hour

PROLOGUE.

I come no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such as give
Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling
Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceived; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known
The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye: think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living; think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng
And sweat
Of thousand friends; then in a moment see
How soon this mightiness meets misery,
And if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK at one door; at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD ABERGAVENNY.

Buck. Good-morrow, and well met. How have you done,
Since last we saw in France?
Nor. I thank your grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.
Buck. An untimely ague
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber when [men,
Those suns of glory, those two lights of
Met in the vale of Andren.
Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde:
I was then present, saw them salute on horseback; [they clung
Beheld them, when they lighted, how
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what four throned ones could have weigh'd
Such a compounded one?
Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.
Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: men might say, [now married
Till this time pomp was single, but
To one above itself. Each following day [last Became the next day's master, till the
Made former wonders its. To-day the French, [gods,
All clinquant, all in gold, like heathen
Shone down the English; and to-morrow they [stood
Made Britain India: every man that Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
As cherubins, all gilt: the madams too,
Not used to toil, did almost sweat to bear [labour
The pride upon them, that their very
Was to them as a painting: now this masque [suing night
Was cried incomparable; and the en-
Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings, [worst,
Equal in lustre, were now best, now
As presence did present them; him in eye [both,
Still him in praise; and being present
'Twas said they saw but one; and no discerner
Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns—
For so they phrase 'em—by their heralds challenged [form
The noble spirits to arms, they did per-
Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story,
Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That Bevis was believed.
Buck. O, you go far.
Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect [thing
In honour honesty, the tract of every
Would by a good discourser lose some life [was royal;
Which action's self was tongue to. All
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd;
Order gave each thing view; the office did
Distinctly his full function.
Buck. Who did guide,
I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together, as you guess? [element
Nor. One, certes, that promises no
In such a business.
Buck. I pray you, who, my lord?
Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion
Of the right reverend Cardinal of York.
Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed [he
From his ambitious finger. What had
To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder
That such a keech can with his very bulk
Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun,
And keep it from the earth.
Nor. Surely, sir,
There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends; [whose grace
For, being not propp'd by ancestry,
Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon [neither allied
For high feats done to the crown;
To eminent assistants, but, spider-like, [note
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us
The force of his own merit makes his way; [buys
A gift that heaven gives for him, which

A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him; let some graver eye [pride
Pierce into that; but I can see his
Peep through each part of him: whence has he that?
If not from hell, the devil is a niggard;
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil,
Upon this French going-out, took he upon him, [appoint
Without the privity o' the king, to
Who should attend on him? He makes up the file [such
Of all the gentry; for the most part
To whom as great a charge as little honour [letter,
He meant to lay upon: and his own
The honourable board of council out,
Must fetch him in he papers.

Aber. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have [never
By this so sicken'd their estates, that
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O, many
Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em [vanity
For this great journey. What did this
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it.

Buck. Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was [broke
A thing inspired; and, not consulting,
Into a general prophecy: That this tempest, [aboded
Dashing the garment of this peace,
The sudden breach on 't.

Nor. Which is budded out;
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd
Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore
The ambassador is silenced?

Nor. Marry, is't.

Aber. A proper title of a peace, and purchased
At a superfluous rate!

Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor. Like it your grace,
The state takes notice of the private difference you—
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise
And take it from a heart that wishes towards you [read
Honour and plenteous safety—that you
The cardinal's malice and his potency
Together; to consider further that
What his high hatred would effect wants not [his nature,
A minister in his power. You know
That he's revengeful, and I know his sword [may be said
Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and 't
It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend, [counsel;
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my
You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that rock
That I advise your shunning.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, the purse borne before him, certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The CARDINAL in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCKINGHAM on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor, ha?
Where's his examination?

First Secr. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready?

First Secr. Ay, please your grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham
Shall lessen this big look.

[Exeunt WOLSEY and his Train.

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore best [gar's book
Not wake him in his slumber. A beg-
Outworths a noble's blood.

Nor. What, are you chafed?
Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only
Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in's looks
Matter against me; and his eye reviled
Me as his abject object: at this instant
He bores me with some trick: he's gone to the king;
I'll follow and outstare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choler question

What 'tis you go about: to climb steep hills
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like [way,
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king;
And from a mouth of honour quite cry down [proclaim
This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or
There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advised;
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself: we may out-run, [run at,
By violent swiftness, that which we
And lose by over-running. Know you not, [run o'er,
The fire that mounts the liquor till 't
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advised:
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself, [quench,
If with the sap of reason you would
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you; and I'll go along
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow— [but Whom from the flow of gall I name not
From sincere motions—by intelligence
And proofs as clear as founts in July when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not 'treasonous.'

Buck. To the king I'll say't; and make my vouch as strong
As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox, [ravenous
Or wolf, or both,—for he is equal
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief [place
As able to perform 't; his mind and
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally,—
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our master
To this last costly treaty, the interview,
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal
The articles o' the combination drew
As himself pleased; and they were ratified [end
As he cried 'Thus let be,' to as much
As give a crutch to the dead: but our count-cardinal [Wolsey,
Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,—
Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason,—Charles the emperor, [aunt,— Under pretence to see the queen his
For 'twas, indeed, his colour; but he came [tation:
To whisper Wolsey,—here makes visi-
His fears were that the interview betwixt [their amity,
England and France might, through
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league [privily
Peep'd harms that menaced him: he
Deals with our cardinal; and, as I trow,— [emperor
Which I do well; for I am sure the Paid ere he promised; whereby his suit was granted [was made
Ere it was ask'd;—but when the way
And paved with gold, the emperor thus desired, [course,
That he would please to alter the king's
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king know, [cardinal
As soon he shall by me, that thus the
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him, and could wish he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable:
I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON; a Sergeant-at-Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. Sir,
My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl [ton, I
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northamp-

Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.
Buck. Lo you, my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish
Under device and practice.
Bran. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present. 'Tis his highness' pleasure
You shall to the Tower.
Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence; for that dye is on me
Which makes my whitest part black. The will of heaven
Be done in this and all things! I obey.
O my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!
Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. [To ABERGAVENNY] The king [you know
Is pleased you shall to the Tower, till
How he determines further.
Aber. As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure
By me obey'd!
Bran. Here is a warrant from
The king to attach Lord Montacute; and the bodies
Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—
Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs o' the plot: no more, I hope.
Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.
Buck. O, Nicholas Hopkins?
Bran. He.
Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal
Hath show'd him gold. My life is spann'd already:
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham;
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on, [farewell.
By darkening my clear sun. My lord,
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Council-Chamber.

Cornets. Enter KING HENRY, leaning on the CARDINAL'S shoulder; the Lords of the Council, SIR THOMAS LOVELL, Officers, and Attendants. The CARDINAL places himself under the KING'S feet on his right side.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, [i' the level
Thanks you for this great care: I stood
Of a full-charged confederacy, and give thanks [before us
To you that choked it. Let be call'd
This gentleman of Buckingham's: in person
I'll hear him his confessions justify:
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.

A noise within, crying 'Room for the Queen!' Enter QUEEN KATHARINE, ushered by the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK: she kneels. The KING riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.
K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us: half your suit [power:
Never name to us; you have half our
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repeat your will, and take it.
Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.
That you would love yourself, and in that love [nor
Not unconsider'd leave your honour,
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.
K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.
Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects [been commissions
Are in great grievance: there have Sent down among 'em, which hath flaw'd the heart
Of all their loyalties: wherein, although,
My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter-on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master—
Whose honour heaven shield from soil!—even he escapes not
Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks [pears
The sides of loyalty, and almost ap-
In loud rebellion.
Nor. Not almost appears;
It doth appear: for, upon these taxations,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing, have put off

The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner — [in uproar,
Daring the event to the teeth, are all
And Danger serves among them.
K. Hen. Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation?—My lord cardinal, [us,
You that are blamed for it alike with
Know you of this taxation?
Wol. Please you, sir,
I know but of a single part in aught
Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.
Q. Kath. No, my lord,
You know no more than others; but you frame
Things t at are known alike; which are not wholesome
To those which would not know them, and yet must [exactions,
Perforce be their acquaintance. These
Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are [bear 'em,
Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say [suffer
They are devised by you; or else you
Too hard an exclamation.
K. Hen. Still exaction!
The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?
Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd [subjects' grief
Under your promised pardon. The
Comes through commissions, which compel from each [levied
The sixth part of his substance, to be
Without delay; and the pretence for this [makes bold mouths:
Is named your wars in France: this
Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance in them; their curses now
Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass,
This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.
K. Hen. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.
Wol. And for me,
I have no further gone in this than by
A single voice; and that not pass'd me but [If I am
By learned approbation of the judges.
Traduced by ignorant tongues, which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake [must not stint
That virtue must go through. We
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further [best,
Than vainly longing. What we oft do
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at, [or sit
We should take root here where we sit,
State-statues only.
K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear; [issue
Things done without example, in their
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent [any.
Of this commission? I believe, not
We must not rend our subjects from our laws, [part of each?
And stick them in our will. Sixth
A trembling contribution! Why, we take [the timber;
From every tree lop, bark, and part o'
And though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd, [county
The air will drink the sap. To every
Where this is question'd send our letters, with [denied
Free pardon to each man that has
The force of this commission: pray, look to 't;
I put it to your care.
Wol. [To the Secretary.] A word with you.
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The grieved commons
Hardly conceive of me: let it be noised

That through our intercession this revokement [you
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise
Further in the proceeding.
[Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.
K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker; [ing such
To nature none more bound; his train-
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers, [Yet see,
And never seek for aid out of himself.
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well disposed, the mind growing once corrupt, [more ugly
They turn to vicious forms, ten times
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete, [and when we,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders,
Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find [lady,
His hour of speech a minute; he, my
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces [black
That once were his, and is become as
As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear— [him
This was his gentleman in trust—of
Things to strike honour sad.—Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.
Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.
K. Hen. Speak freely.
Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day : [king
It would infect his speech, that if the
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so [words
To make the sceptre his: these very
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abergavenny; to whom by oath he menaced
Revenge upon the cardinal.
Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.
Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.
K. Hen. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown
Upon our fail? to this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?
Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.
K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?
Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.
K. Hen. How know'st thou this?
Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France, [parish
The duke being at the Rose, within the Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand [doners
What was the speech among the Lon-
Concerning the French journey: I replied, [perfidious,
Men fear'd the French would prove
To the king's danger. Presently the duke [he doubted
Said, 'twas the fear, indeed; and that
'Twould prove the verity of certain words [says he,
Spoke by a holy monk; 'that oft,'
'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour [moment:
To hear from him a matter of some
Whom after under the confession's seal
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke
My chaplain to no creature living but
To me should utter, with demure confidence [king nor 's heirs,
This pausingly ensued: Neither the
Tell you the duke, shall prosper: bid him strive [the duke
To gain the love o' the commonalty:
Shall govern England.'
Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office [good heed
On the complaint o' the tenants: take
You charge not in your spleen a noble person, [heed;
And spoil your nobler soul: I say, take
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on.
Go forward.
Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth. [illusions
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's
The monk might be deceived; and that 'twas dangerous for him
To ruminate on this so far, until
It forged him some design, which, being believed, ['Tush,
It was much like to do: he answer'd,
It can do me no damage;' adding further, [fail'd,
That, had the king in his last sickness
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.
K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha! [thou say further?
There's mischief in this man: canst
Surv. I can, my liege.
K. Hen. Proceed.
Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reproved the duke
About Sir William Blomer,—
K. Hen. I remember
Of such a time: being my servant sworn, [what hence?
The duke retain'd him his. But on;
Surv. 'If,' quoth he, 'I for this had been committed,
As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
The usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury, [which if granted,
Made suit to come in 's presence;
As he made semblance of his duty, would
Have put his knife into him.'
K. Hen. A giant traitor!
Wol. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom,
And this man out of prison?
Q. Kath. God mend all!
K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee; what say'st? [with 'the knife,' Surv. After 'the duke his father,'
He stretch'd him, and with one hand on his dagger, [his eyes,
Another spread on 's breast, mounting
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour
Was,—were he evil used, he would outgo
His father by as much as a performance
Does an irresolute purpose.
K. Hen. There's his period,
To sheathe his knife in us. He is attach'd;
Call him to present trial: if he may
Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek 't of us: by day and night!
He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, and LORD SANDS.

Cham. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle
Men into such strange mysteries?
Sands. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let them be unmanly, yet are follow'd. [our English
Cham. As far as I see, all the good
Have got by the late voyage is but merely [shrewd ones;
A fit or two o' the face; but they are
For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.
Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones: one would take it,
That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin
Or springhalt reign'd among 'em.
Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too, [dom.
That, sure, they've worn out Christen-

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

How now!
What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?
Lov. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.
Cham. What is't for?
Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants, [and tailors.
That fill the court with quarrels, talk,
Cham. I'm glad 'tis there: now I would pray our monsieurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,

And never see the Louvre.
Lov. They must either,
For so run the conditions, leave those remnants [France,
Of fool and feather that they got in
With all their honourable points of ignorance [works;
Pertaining thereunto, as fights and fire-
Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom; renouncing clean [stockings,
The faith they have in tennis and tall
Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,
And understand again like honest men;
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,
They may 'cum, privilegio,' wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at. [their diseases
Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physic,
Are grown so catching.
Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!
Lov. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whoresons [ladies;
Have got a speeding trick to lay down
A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.
Sands. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they're going, [now
For, sure, there's no converting of 'em:
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song [by'r lady,
And have an hour of hearing; and,
Held current music too.
Cham. Well said, Lord Sands;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.
Sands. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.
Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a-going?
Lov. To the cardinal's:
Your lordship is a guest too.
Cham. O, 'tis true:
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you. [teous mind indeed,
Lov. That churchman bears a boun-
A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;
His dews fall every where.
Cham. No doubt he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him. [withal: in him
Sands. He may, my lord; has where-
Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine:
Men of his way should be most liberal;
They are set here for examples.
Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;
Your lordship shall along.—Come, good Sir Thomas, [not be,
We shall be late else; which I would
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford,
This night to be comptrollers.
Sands. I am your lordship's.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. The Presence-Chamber in York Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for the CARDINAL, a longer table for the guests. Then enter at one door ANNE BULLEN, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as guests; at another door, enter SIR HENRY GUILDFORD.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates
To fair content and you: none here, he hopes, [her
In all this noble bevy, has brought with
One care abroad; he would have all as merry [good welcome,
As first-good company, good wine,
Can make good people.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, LORD SANDS, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

O, my lord, you're tardy:
The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.
Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guildford. [cardinal
Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the
But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these [rested,
Should find a running banquet ere they
I think would better please 'em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.
Lov. O, that your lordship were but now confessor
To one or two of these!

Sands. I would I were;
They should find easy penance.
Lov. Faith, how easy?
Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.
Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry,
Place you that side; I'll take the charge of this: [not freeze;
His grace is entering. Nay, you must
Two women placed together makes cold weather: ['em waking;
My Lord Sands, you are one will keep
Pray, sit between these ladies.
Sands. By my faith,
And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies:
[Seats himself between ANNE BULLEN and another Lady.
If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.
Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too: [now,
But he would bite none; just as I do
He would kiss you twenty with a breath. [Kisses her.
Cham. Well said, my lord.
So, now you're fairly seated. Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.
Sands. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, attended, and takes his state.

Wol. You're welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady
Or gentleman that is not freely merry,
Is not my friend: this, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all, good health. [Drinks.
Sands. Your grace is noble:
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.
Wol. My Lord Sands,
I am beholden to you: cheer your neighbours.
Ladies, you are not merry: gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?
Sands. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em
Talk us to silence.
Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My Lord Sands.
Sands. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship: and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing—
Anne. You cannot show me.
Sands. I told your grace they would talk anon.
[Drum and Trumpets within: Chambers discharged.
Wol. What's that?
Cham. Look out there, some of ye. [Exit a Servant.
Wol. What warlike voice,
And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear not; [leged.
By all the laws of war you're privi-

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now! what is't?
Serv. A noble troop of strangers;
For so they seem: they have left their barge, and landed;
And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.
Wol. Good lord chamberlain,
Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue;
And, pray, receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em [of beauty
Into our presence, where this heaven
Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him.
[Exit Chamberlain, attended. All rise, and tables removed.
You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend it. [more
A good digestion to you all: and once
I shower a welcome on ye; welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the KING and Others, as masquers, habited like Shepherds, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the CARDINAL, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?
Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd
To tell your grace; that, having heard by fame
Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no less, [beauty,
Out of the great respect they bear to

But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct, [entreat
Crave leave to view these ladies, and An hour of revels with 'em.
Wol. Say, lord chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay 'em
A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures.
[They choose Ladies for the dance. The KING chooses ANNE BULLEN.
K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O beauty,
Till now I never knew thee!
[Music. Dance.
Wol. My lord!
Cham. Your grace?
Wol. Pray, tell 'em thus much from me: [his person,
There should be one amongst 'em, by More worthy this place than myself; to whom, [duty
If I but knew him, with my love and I would surrender it.
Cham. I will, my lord.
[Whispers the Masquers.
Wol. What say they? [confess,
Cham. Such a one, they all
There is indeed; which they would have your grace
Find out, and he will take it.
Wol. Let me see, then.
[Comes from his state.
By all your good leaves, gentlemen; here I'll make
My royal choice.
K. Hen. [Unmasking.] Ye have found him, cardinal: [lord:
You hold a fair assembly; you do well,
You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.
Wol. I am glad
Your grace is grown so pleasant.
K. Hen. My lord chamberlain,
Prithee, come hither: what fair lady's that?
Cham. An 't please your grace, Sir Thomas Bullen's daughter,—
The Viscount Rochford,—one of her highness' women.
K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one.—Sweetheart,
I were unmannerly to take you out,
And not to kiss you.—A health, gentlemen!
Let it go round.
Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready
I' the privy chamber?
Lov. Yes, my lord.
Wol. Your grace,
I fear, with dancing is a little heated.
K. Hen. I fear, too much.
Wol. There's fresher air, my lord,
In the next chamber.
K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one. Sweet partner,
I must not yet forsake you. Let's be merry: [dozen healths
Good my lord cardinal, I have half-a-
To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure [dream
To lead 'em once again; and then let's
Who's best in favour. Let the music knock it.
[Exeunt with Trumpets.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Westminster. A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

First Gent. Whither away so fast?
Sec. Gent. O, God save you!
Even to the hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.
First Gent. I'll save you
That labour, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony
Of bringing back the prisoner.
Sec. Gent. Were you there?
First Gent. Yes, indeed was I.
Sec. Gent. Pray speak what has happen'd. [what.
First Gent. You may guess quickly
Sec. Gent. Is he found guilty?
First Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon 't.
Sec. Gent. I am sorry for 't.
First Gent. So are a number more.
Sec. Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?
First Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke [tions
Came to the bar; where to his accusa-
He pleaded still not guilty, and alleged
Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.
The king's attorney on the contrary
Urged on the examinations, proofs, confessions [desired
Of divers witnesses: which the duke
To have brought vivâ voce to his face:

At which appeared against him his surveyor; [John Car,
Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and Confessor to him; with that devil monk,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.
Sec. Gent. That was he
That fed him with his prophecies?
First Gent. The same.
All these accused him strongly; which he fain [he could not:
Would have flung from him, but indeed
And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much [all
He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but
Was either pitied in him or forgotten.
Sec. Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself?
First Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear
His knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirr'd [tremely,
With such an agony, he sweat ex-
And something spoke in choler, ill and hasty:
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience. [death.
Sec. Gent. I do not think he fears
First Gent. Sure, he does not;
He never was so womanish; the cause
He may a little grieve at.
Sec. Gent. Certainly,
The cardinal is the end of this.
First Gent. 'Tis likely,
By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainder,
Then deputy of Ireland; who removed,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
Lest he should help his father.
Sec. Gent. That trick of state
Was a deep envious one.
First Gent. At his return
No doubt he will requite it. This is noted, [favours,
And generally; whoever the king
The cardinal instantly will find employment,
And far enough from court too.
Sec. Gent. All the commons
Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience, [as much
Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke
They love and dote on; call him bounteous Buckingham,
The mirror of all courtesy—
First Gent. Stay there, sir,
And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

Enter BUCKINGHAM from his Arraignment; Tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; Halberds on each side: with him, SIR THOMAS LOVELL, SIR NICHOLAS VAUX, SIR WILLIAM SANDS, and common people.

Sec. Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.
Buck. All good people,
You that thus far have come to pity me,
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me. [judgment,
I have this day received a traitor's
And by that name must die: yet, heaven bear witness, [me,
And, if I have a conscience, let it sink
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!
The law I bear no malice for my death;
'T has done, upon the premises, but justice: [more Christians:
But those that sought it I could wish
Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em: [chief,
Yet let 'em look they glory not in mis-
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men; [against 'em.
For then my guiltless blood must cry
For further life in this world I ne'er hope, [mercies
Nor will I sue, although the king have
More than I dare make faults. You few that loved me, [ham,
And dare he bold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me, [fice,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacri-
And lift my soul to heaven.—Lead on, o' God's name. [charity,
Lov. I do beseech your grace, for
If ever any malice in your heart
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly. [forgive you
Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all;
There cannot be those numberless offences

'Gainst me, I can't take peace with: no black envy
Shall make my grave. Commend me to his grace; [tell him
And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray,
You met him half in heaven: my vows and prayers [forsake,
Yet are the king's; and, till my soul
Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live [years!
Longer than I have time to tell his Ever beloved and loving may his rule be! [his end,
And when old time shall lead him to
Goodness and he fill up one monument!
Lov. To the water side I must conduct your grace; [Vaux,
Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas
Who undertakes you to your end.
Vaux. Prepare there;
The duke is coming: see the barge be ready,
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.
Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone; my state now will but mock me. [constable
When I came hither, I was lord high
And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun:
Yet I am richer than my base accusers,
That never knew what truth meant: I now seal it; [day groan for't.
And with that blood will make 'em one
My noble father, Henry of Bucking ham,
Who first raised head against usurping Richard, [ister,
Flying for succour to his servant Ban-
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd, [with him!
And without trial fell; God's peace be
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying [prince,
My father's loss, like a most royal
Restored me to my honours, and, out of ruins, [his son,
Made my name once more noble. Now
Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all [has taken
That made me happy, at one stroke
For ever from the world. I had my trial, [which makes me
And, must needs say, a noble one;
A little happier than my wretched father: [both
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes:
Fell by our servants, by those men we loved most;
A most unnatural and faithless service!
Heaven has an end in all: yet, you that hear me, [tain:
This from a dying man receive as cer-
Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels [make friends
Be sure you be not loose; for those you
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive [away
The least rub in your fortunes, fall
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good people, [the last hour
Pray for me! I must now forsake ye;
Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell:
And when you would say something that is sad, [God forgive me!
Speak how I fell. I have done; and [Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and Train.
First Gent. O, this is full of pity! Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.
Sec. Gent. If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inkling
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.
First Gent. Good angels keep it from us! [my faith, sir?
What may it be? You do not doubt
Sec. Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require
A strong faith to conceal it.
First Gent. Let me have it;
I do not talk much.
Sec. Gent. I am confident;
You shall, sir: did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation
Between the king and Katharine?
First Gent. Yes, but it held not:
For when the king once heard it, out of anger [straight
He sent command to the lord mayor
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.
Sec. Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now: for it grows again [certain
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,

Or some about him near, have, out of malice
To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple [too,
That will undo her: —to confirm this
Cardinal Campeius is arrived, and lately;
As all think, for this business.
First Gent. 'Tis the cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the emperor, [ing,
For not bestowing on him, at his ask-
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purposed.
Sec. Gent. I think you have hit the mark: but is't not cruel
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal
Will have his will, and she must fall.
First Gent. 'Tis woeful.
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter.

Cham. 'My lord, The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission and main power, took 'em from me; with this reason: His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir.'

I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have them:
He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Nor. Well met, my lord chamberlain.
Cham. Good day to both your graces.
Suf. How is the king employ'd?
Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.
Nor. What's the cause?
Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife
Has crept too near his conscience.
Suf. No, his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.
Nor. 'Tis so:
This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal: [fortune,
That blind priest, like the eldest son of Turns what he list. The king will know him one day.
Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else. [business!
Nor. How holily he works in all his
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd the league
Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew, [scatters
He dives into the king's soul, and there
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, [his marriage:
Fears and despairs; and all these for
And out of all these to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce; a loss of her
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre; [lence
Of her that loves him with that excel-
That angels love good men with; even of her [tune falls,
That, when the greatest stroke of for-
Will bless the king: and is not this course pious?
Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true
These news are every where; every tongue speaks 'em,
And every true heart weeps for 't: all that dare [end,
Look into these affairs see this main
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open [upon
The king's eyes, that so long have slept
This bold bad man.
Suf. And free us from his slavery.
Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages: all men's honours [fashion'd
Lie in one lump before him, to be
Into what pitch he please.
Suf. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed: [stand,
As I am made without him, so I'll
If the king please; his curses and his blessings [believe in.
Touch me alike; they're breath I not
I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him

To him that made him proud, the pope.
Nor. Let's in;
And with some other business put the king [much upon him:
From these sad thoughts that work too
My lord, you'll bear us company?
Cham. Excuse me;
The king hath sent me otherwhere: besides, [him:
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb
Health to your lordships.
Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain.

NORFOLK opens a folding-door. The KING is discovered sitting and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.
K. Hen. Who's there, ha?
Nor. Pray God he be not angry.
K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves
Into my private meditations?
Who am I? ha?
Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences [this way
Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty
Is business of estate; in which we come
To know your royal pleasure.
K. Hen. Ye are too bold:
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business: [ha?
Is this an hour for temporal affairs,

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal? O my Wolsey,
The quiet of my wounded conscience;
Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To CAM.] You're welcome,
Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:
Use us and it. [To WOL.] My good lord, have great care
I be not found a talker.
Wol. Sir, you cannot.
I would your grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference. [are busy; go.
K. Hen. [To NOR. and SUF.] We
Nor. [Aside to SUF.] This priest has no pride in him?
Suf. [Aside to NOR.] Not to speak of:
I would not be so sick though for his place:
But this cannot continue.
Nor. [Aside to SUF.] If it do,
I'll venture one have-at-him.
Suf. [Aside to NOR.] I another.
[Exeunt NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.
Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom
Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Christendom; [reach you?
Who can be angry now? what envy
The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her, [goodness,
Must now confess, if they have any
The trial just and noble. All the clerks,
I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms
Have their free voices: Rome, the nurse of judgment,
Invited by your noble self, hath sent
One general tongue unto us, this good man, [Campeius;
This just and learned priest, Cardinal
Whom once more I present unto your highness.
K. Hen. And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome,
And thank the holy conclave for their loves: [have wish'd for.
They have sent me such a man I would
Cam. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves, [hand
You are so noble. To your highness'
I tender my commission; by whose virtue,— [you, my Lord
The court of Rome commanding,—
Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant [ness.
In the unpartial judging of this busi-
K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted
Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?
Wol. I know your majesty has always loved her
So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law,
Scholars allow'd freely to argue for her.
K. Hen. Ay, and the best she shall have; and my favour
To him that does best: God forbid else.
Cardinal, [secretary:
Prithee, call Gardiner to me, my new
I find him a fit fellow. [Exit WOLSEY.

Re-enter WOLSEY, with GARDINER.

Wol. [Aside to GARD.] Give me your hand: much joy and favour to you;

You are the king's now.
Gard. [Aside to WOL.] But to be commanded [has raised me.
For ever by your grace, whose hand
K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner.
[They converse apart,
Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace
In this man's place before him?
Wol. Yes, he was.
Cam. Was he not held a learned man?
Wol. Yes, surely.
Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then
Even of yourself, lord cardinal.
Wol. How! of me?
Cam. They will not stick to say you envied him, [virtuous,
And fearing he would rise, he was so
Kept him a foreign man still; which so grieved him
That he ran mad and died.
Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!
That's Christian care enough: for living murmurers [fool;
There's places of rebuke. He was a
For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow, [ment:
If I command him, follows my appoint-
I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother, [persons.
We live not to be grip'd by meaner
K. Hen. Deliver this with modesty to the queen.
[Exit GARDINER.
The most convenient place that I can think of [Friars;
For such receipt of learning is Black-
There ye shall meet about this weighty business. [lord,
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O, my
Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience!
O, 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. An Antechamber of the QUEEN'S Apartments.

Enter ANNE BULLEN and an Old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither: here's the pang that pinches:
His highness having lived so long with her, and she [ever
So good a lady that no tongue could Pronounce dishonour of her—by my life, [after
She never knew harm-doing—O, now,
So many courses of the sun enthroned,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp,—the which [than
To leave 's a thousandfold more bitter
'Tis sweet at first to acquire,—after this process,
To give her the avaunt! it is a pity
Would move a monster.
Old L. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her.
Anne. O, God's will! much better
She ne'er had known pomp: though 't be temporal,
Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging
As soul and body's severing.
Old L. Alas, poor lady!
She's a stranger now again.
Anne. So much the more
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content, [grief
Than to be perk'd up in a glistering
And wear a golden sorrow.
Old L. Our content
Is our best having. [head,
Anne. By my troth and maiden-
I would not be a queen.
Old L. Beshrew me, I would,
And venture maidenhead for 't; and so would you,
For all this spice of your hypocrisy:
You, that have so fair parts of woman on you, [yet
Have too a woman's heart; which ever
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty;
Which, to say sooth, are blessings; and which gifts,
Saving your mincing, the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.
Anne. Nay, good troth.
Old L. Yes, troth, and troth; you would not be a queen?
Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.
Old L. 'Tis strange: a three-pence bow'd would hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it: but, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
To bear that load of title?
Anne. No, in truth.
Old L. Then you are weakly made: pluck off a little; [way,
I would not be a young count in your
For more than blushing comes to: if your back [weak
Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too
Ever to get a boy.
Anne. How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.
Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd
No more to the crown but that. Lo, who comes here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good-morrow, ladies. What were't worth to know
The secret of your conference?
Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.
Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming [hope
The action of good women: there is
All will be well.
Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!
Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings
Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady, [note 's
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty [and Commends his good opinion of you,
Does purpose honour to you no less flowing [which title
Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.
Anne. I do not know
What kind of my obedience I should tender; [prayers
More than my all is nothing; nor my
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes [prayers and wishes
More worth than empty vanities; yet
Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship, [obedience,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my
As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness,
Whose health and royalty I pray for.
Cham. Lady,
I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit [perused her well;
The king hath of you. [Aside] I have
Beauty and honour in her are so mingled [who knows yet
That they have caught the king: and
But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle?—I'll to the king,
And say I spoke with you.
Anne. My honour'd lord.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain.
Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court,
Am yet a courtier beggarly, nor could
Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here,—fie, fie upon
This compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd up
Before you open it.
Anne. This is strange to me.
Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no. [story,
There was a lady once, 'tis an old
That would not be a queen, that would she not, [heard it?
For all the mud in Egypt: have you
Anne. Come, you are pleasant.
Old L. With your theme, I could
O'ermount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke! [respect!
A thousand pounds a year for pure
No other obligation! By my life,
That promises more thousands: Honour's train [time
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this
I know your back will bear a duchess: say,
Are you not stronger than you were?
Anne. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy, [no being,
And leave me out on't. Would I had
If this salute my blood a jot: it faints me,
To think what follows.
The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful

In our long absence: pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard to her.
Old L. What do you think me?
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Hall in Black-Friars.

Trumpets, Sennet and Cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors; after them, the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY alone; after him, the Bishops of LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bareheaded, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two CARDINALS; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the KING and QUEEN and their Trains. The KING takes place under the cloth of state; the two CARDINALS sit under him as Judges. The QUEEN takes place at some distance from the KING. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.
K. Hen. What's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd;
You may then spare that time.
Wol. Be 't so. Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.
Crier. Henry King of England, etc.
K. Hen. Here.
Scribe. Say, Katharine Queen of England, come into court.
Crier. Katharine, Queen of England, etc.
[The QUEEN makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the KING, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.
Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice;
And to bestow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here [assurance
No judge indifferent, nor no more
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir, [cause
In what have I offended you? what
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure, [me off
That thus you should proceed to put
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness, [wife,
I have been to you a true and humble
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry [hour
As I saw it inclined. When was the
I ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends [knew
Have I not strove to love, although I
He were mine enemy? what friend of mine [did I
That had to him derived your anger,
Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice [call to mind
He was from thence discharged? Sir,
That I have been your wife, in this obedience, [blest
Upward of twenty years, and have been
With many children by you: if, in the course [report,
And process of this time, you can
And prove it too, against mine honour aught, [duty,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and
Against your sacred person, in God's name, [tempt
Turn me away; and let the foul'st con-
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharp'st kind of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmatch'd wit and judgment: Ferdinand, [one
My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd
The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many
A year before: it is not to be question'd

That they had gather'd a wise council to them [business,
Of every realm, that did debate this
Who deem'd our marriage lawful: wherefore I humbly
Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my friends in Spain advised; whose counsel [God,
I will implore: if not, i' the name of
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,
And of your choice, these reverend fathers; men
Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect o' the land, who are assembled [fore bootless
To plead your cause: it shall be there-
That longer you desire the court; as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace
Hath spoken well and justly: therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed;
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produced and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal,
To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?

Q. Kath. Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that [so, certain
We are a queen, or long have dream'd
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.

Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before,
Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induced by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy; and make my challenge [you
You shall not be my judge: for it is
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me; [I say again,
Which God's dew quench! Therefore
I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more, [think not
I hold my most malicious foe, and
At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess
You speak not like yourself; who ever yet
Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom
O'ertopping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong: [justice
I have no spleen against you, nor in-
For you or any: how far I have proceeded,
Or how far further shall, is warranted
By a commission from the consistory,
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me [it:
That I have blown this coal: I do deny
The king is present: if it be known to him [wound,
That I gainsay my deed, how may he
And worthily, my falsehood! yea, as much [he know
As you have done my truth. But if
That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me; and the cure is to Remove these thoughts from you: the which before [seech
His highness shall speak in, I do be-
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking,
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. You're meek and humble-mouth'd;
You sign your place and calling, in full seeming, [heart
With meekness and humility; but your
Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and pride. [favours,
You have, by fortune and his highness'
Gone slightly o'er low steps; and now are mounted [your words,
Where powers are your retainers, and
Domestics to you, serve your will as 't please [tell you, Yourself pronounce their office. I must
You tender more your person's honour than [again
Your high profession spiritual; that
I do refuse you for my judge; and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness,
And to be judged by him.

[She curtsies to the KING, and offers to depart.

Cam. The queen is obstinate,

Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it and [well.
Disdainful to be tried by it: 'tis not
She's going away.
K. Hen. Call her again.
Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.
Griffith. Madam, you are call'd back.
Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way:
When you are call'd, return. Now the Lord help!
They vex me past my patience. Pray you, pass on:
I will not tarry, no, nor ever more
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts.
[Exit, with her Attendants.
K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate:
That man i' the world who shall report he has [trusted,
A better wife, let him in nought be
For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out, [noble born;
The queen of earthly queens. She is
And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.
Wol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness, [hearing
That it shall please you to declare, in
Of all these ears,—for where I am robb'd and bound, [there
There must I be unloosed, although not
At once and fully satisfied,—whether ever I [ness, or Did broach this business to your high-
Laid any scruple in your way, which might [ever
Induce you to the question on 't? or
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such [that might
A royal lady, spake one the least word
Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?
K. Hen. My lord cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour, [taught
I free you from 't. You are not to be
That you have many enemies, that know not [curs,
Why they are so, but, like to village-
Bark when their fellows do: by some of these [excused:
The queen is put in anger. You're
But will you be more justified? you ever [ness; never desired
Have wish'd the sleeping of this busi-
It to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd, oft, [honour,
The passages made toward it: on my
I speak my good lord cardinal to this point, [moved me to 't,
And thus far clear him. Now, what
I will be bold with time and your attention:
Then mark the inducement. Thus it came: give heed to 't:
My conscience first received a tenderness, [utter'd
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches
By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador; [bating
Who had been hither sent on the de-
A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and [this business,
Our daughter Mary: i' the progress of
Ere a determinate resolution, he,
I mean the bishop, did require a respite;
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager, [respite shook
Sometimes our brother's wife. This
The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, [to tremble
Yea, with a splitting power, and made
The region of my breast; which forced such way, [throng
That many mazed considerings did
And press'd in with this caution. First, methought [who had
I stood not in the smile of heaven;
Commanded nature that my lady's womb, [should
If it conceived a male-child by me,
Do no more offices of life to 't than
The grave does to the dead; for her male issue [shortly after
Or died where they were made, or
This world had air'd them: hence I took a thought, [kingdom,
This was a judgment on me, that my
Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should not

Be gladded in 't by me: then follows that
I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in [to me
By this my issue's fail; and that gave
Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in [steer
The wild sea of my conscience, I did
Toward this remedy, whereupon we are
Now present here together; that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience, which
I then did feel full sick and yet not well,
By all the reverend fathers of the land
And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private [remember
With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you
How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first moved you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long: be pleased yourself to say
How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment in't
And consequence of dread, that I committed
The daring'st counsel which I had to doubt;
And did entreat your highness to this course
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then moved you,
My Lord of Canterbury; and got your leave [solicited
To make this present summons: unI left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded
Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on; [person
For no dislike i' the world against the
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points [ward:
Of my alleged reasons, drive this forProve but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her, [creature
Katharine our queen, before the primest
That 's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness [day:
That we adjourn this court till further
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

K. Hen. [Aside.] I may perceive
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer, [know,
Prithee, return: with thy approach, I
My comfort comes along.—Break up the court:
I say, set on.

[Exeunt in manner as they entered.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. The QUEEN'S Apartments.

The QUEEN and her Women at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles;
Sing, and disperse 'em, if thou canst: leave working.

SONG.

'Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung, as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.

'Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing, die.'

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now!

Gent. An 't please your grace, the two great cardinals
Wait in the presence. [me?

Q. Kath. Would they speak with

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces
To come near. [Exit GENT.] What can be their business
With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favour? [on't.
I do not like their coming, now I think
They should be good men, their affairs as righteous;
But all hoods make not monks.

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness!

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife ;
I would be all, against the worst may happen. [end lords ?
What are your pleasures with me, rever-
Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw [give you
Into your private chamber, we shall
The full cause of our coming.
Q. Kath. Speak it here ;
There's nothing I have done yet, o'my conscience, [women
Deserves a corner : would all other
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do ! [happy
My lords, I care not, so much I am
Above a number, if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em,
I know my life so even. If your business [in,
Seek me out, and that way I am wife
Out with it boldly : truth loves open dealing.
Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,—
Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming, [lived in :
As not to know the language I have
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious ;
Pray speak in English : here are some will thank you, [tress' sake ;
If you speak truth, for their poor mis-
Believe me, she has had much wrong : lord cardinal,
The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
May be absolved in English.
Wol. Noble lady,
I am sorry my integrity should breed,
And service to his majesty and you,
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses ;
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow,—
You have too much, good lady,—but to know [difference
How you stand minded in the weighty
Between the king and you : and to deliver, [opinions
Like free and honest men, our just
And comforts to your cause.
Cam. Most honour'd madam,
My Lord of York, out of his noble nature, [grace,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure [too far,
Both of his truth and him, which was
Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.
Q. Kath. [Aside.] To betray me.—
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills ; [ye prove so !
Ye speak like honest men ; pray God,
But how to make ye suddenly an answer, [mine honour,—
In such a point of weight, so near
More near my life, I fear,—with my weak wit, [ing,
And to such men of gravity and learn-
In truth, I know not. I was set at work [knows, looking
Among my maids ; full little, God
Either for such men or such business.
For her sake that I have been,—for I feel [your graces,
The last fit of my greatness,—good
Let me have time and counsel for my cause : [less !
Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hope-
Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears :
Your hopes and friends are infinite.
Q. Kath. In England
But little for my profit : can you think, lords, [counsel ?
That any Englishman dare give me
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,— [honest,—
Though he be grown so desperate to be
And live a subject ? Nay, forsooth, my friends, [tions,
They that must weigh out my afflic-
They that my trust must grow to, live not here :
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence
In mine own country, lords.
Cam. I would your grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.
Q. Kath. How, sir ?
Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection ;
He's loving and most gracious : 'twill be much [cause ;
Both for your honour better and your
For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,
You'll part away disgraced.

Wol. He tells you rightly.
Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,—my ruin: [upon ye!
Is this your Christian counsel? out
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a Judge
That no king can corrupt.
Cam. Your rage mistakes us.
Q. Kath. The more shame for ye: holy men I thought ye,
Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues; [fear ye:
But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I
Mend 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort? [lady,
The cordial that ye bring a wretched
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye half my miseries;
I have more charity; but say, I warn'd ye; [heed, lest at once
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.
Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.
Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: woe upon ye
And all such false professors! would you have me—
If you have any justice, any pity;
If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits— [hates me?
Put my sick cause into his hands that
Alas, has banish'd me his bed already,
His love, too long ago! I am old, my lords, [him
And all the fellowship I hold now with
Is only my obedience. What can happen [your studies
To me above this wretchedness? all
Make me a curse like this.
Cam. Your fears are worse.
Q. Kath. Have I lived thus long—let me speak myself, [true one?
Since virtue finds no friends—a wife, a
A woman, I dare say without vain-glory,
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? loved him next heaven? obey'd him?
Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him? [him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content
And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords, [husband,
Bring me a constant woman to her
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure; [most,
And to that woman, when she has done
Yet will I add an honour,—a great patience. [good we aim at.
Wol. Madam, you wander from the
Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,
To give up willingly that noble title
Your master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.
Wol. Pray, hear me.
Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth,
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts. [lady?
What will become of me now, wretched
I am the most unhappy woman living.
Alas, poor wenches, where are now your fortunes! [no pity,
Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where
No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me; [lily,
Almost, no grave allow'd me: like the
That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head and perish.
Wol. If your grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest, [we, good lady,
You'd feel more comfort: why should
Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
The way of our profession is against it:
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em. [do;
For goodness' sake, consider what you
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage.
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits [storms.
They swell, and grow as terrible as
I know you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: pray think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.
Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears: a noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;

Beware you lose it not: for us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are [ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: and pray forgive me,
If I have used myself unmannerly;
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray do my service to his majesty:
He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers [reverend fathers,
While I shall have my life. Come,
Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs,
That little thought, when she set footing here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Ante-chamber to the KING'S Apartment.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
Cannot stand under them: if you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain more new disgraces
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke,
To be revenged on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have uncontemn'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person
Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me I know;
What we can do to him, though now the time
Gives way to us, I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
Any thing on him; for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in's tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not;
His spell in that is out: the king hath found
Matter against him that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this
Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true:
In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears
As I would wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came
His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O, how, how?

Suf. The cardinal's letters to the pope miscarried,
And came to the eye o' the king: wherein was read,
How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
To stay the judgment o' the divorce; for if
It did take place, 'I do,' quoth he, 'perceive
My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen.'

Sur. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts and hedges his own way. But in this point All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic already
After his patient's death: the king Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord!
For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now, all my joy
Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't!

Nor. All men's!

Suf. There's order given for her coronation: [be left
Marry, this is yet but young, and may
To some ears unrecounted. But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, [which shall
In it be memorized.

Sur. But will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal's ?
The Lord forbid !
Nor. Marry, amen !
Suf. No, no ;
There be more wasps that buzz about his nose [dinal Campeius
Will make this sting the sooner. Car-
Is stolen away to Rome ; hath ta'en no leave ; [handled, and
Has left the cause o' the king un-
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you
The king cried 'Ha !' at this.
Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry 'Ha !' louder !
Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer ?
Suf. He is return'd in his opinions ; which
Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom : shortly, I believe, [and
His second marriage shall be publish'd,
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager
And widow to Prince Arthur.
Nor. This same Cranmer 's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.
Suf. He has ; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.
Nor. So I hear.
Suf. 'Tis so.
The cardinal !

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody. [you the king ?
Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it
Crom. To his own hand, in's bedchamber. [paper ?
Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the Crom. Presently
He did unseal them, and the first he view'd,
He did it with a serious mind ; a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bade
Attend him here this morning.
Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad ?
Crom. I think, by this he is.
Wol. Leave me awhile.
[Exit CROMWELL.
Aside] It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon, [marry her.
The French king's sister : he shall
Anne Bullen ! No ; I'll no Anne Bullens for him : [Bullen !
There is more in it than fair visage.
No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish
To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke !
Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be, he hears the king
Does whet his anger to him.
Sur. Sharp enough,
Lord, for thy justice !
Wol. [Aside.] The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress ! the queen's queen ! [snuff it ;
This candle burns not clear : 'tis I must Then out it goes. What though I know her virtuous [for
And well deserving ? yet I know her
A spleeny Lutheran, and not wholesome to [bosom of
Our cause, that she should lie i' the
Our hard-ruled king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer ; one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
And is his oracle.
Nor. He is vex'd at something.
Sur. I would 'twere something that would fret the string,
The master-cord on 's heart !

Enter the KING, reading a schedule, and LOVELL.

Suf. The king, the king !
K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated [by the hour
To his own portion ! and what expense
Seems to flow from him ! How, i' the name of thrift, [lords,
Does he rake this together !—Now, my
Saw you the cardinal ?
Nor. My lord, we have
Stood here observing him : some strange commotion [starts ;
Is in his brain : he bites his lip, and
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground, [straight
Then lays his finger on his temple ;
Springs out into fast gait ; then stops again, [casts
Strikes his breast hard, and anon he
His eye against the moon : in most strange postures

We have seen him set himself.
K. Ken. It may well be;
There is a mutiny in's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I required; and wot you what I found [tingly?
There, on my conscienec, put unwit-
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing;
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, [hold; which Rich stuffs, and ornaments of house-
I find at such proud rate that it outspeaks
Possession of a subject.
Nor. It's heaven's will:
Some spirit put this paper in the packet,
To bless your eye withal.
K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth, [still
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should
Dwell in his musings: but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.
[He takes his seat and whispers LOVELL, who goes to WOLSEY.
Wol. Heaven forgive me!
Ever God bless your highness!
K. Hen. Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory [which
Of your best graces in your mind; the
You were now running o'er: you have scarce time [span
To steal from spiritual leisure a brief
To keep your earthly audit: sure, in that [glad
I deem you an ill husband, and am
To have you therein my companion.
Wol. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which [require
I bear i' the state; and nature does
Her times of preservation, which perforce [mortal,
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren
Must give my tendence to.
K. Hen. You have said well.
Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together,
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying!
K. Hen. 'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well:
And yet words are no deeds. My father loved you: [crown
He said he did; and with his deed did
His words upon you. Since I had my office, [not alone
I have kept you next my heart; have
Employ'd you where high profits might come home, [stow
But pared my present havings, to be-
My bounties upon you. [mean?
Wol. [Aside.] What should this
Sur. [Aside.] The Lord increase this business!
K. Hen. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me, [found true:
If what I now pronounce you have
And, if you may confess it, say withal,
If you are bound to us or no. What say you? [royal graces,
Wol. My sovereign, I confess your
Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could [went
My studied purposes requite; which
Beyond all man's endeavours: my endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet filed with my abilities: mine own ends [pointed
Have been mine so that evermore they
To the good of your most sacred person and [graces
The profit of the state. For your great
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks;
My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty, [ing,
Which ever has and ever shall be grow-
Till death, that winter, kill it.
K. Hen. Fairly answer'd;
A loyal and obedient subject is
Therein illustrated: the honour of it
Does pay the act of it; as, i' the contrary, [presume
The foulness is the punishment. I
That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you, [honour, more
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd
On you than any; so your hand and heart, [power,
Your brain, and every function of your
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.
Wol. I do profess

That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own; [1] that I am, have, and will be.
Though all the world should crack their duty to you [perils did
And throw it from their soul; though
Abound, as thick as thought could make 'em, and [duty,
Appear in forms more horrid; yet my
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken.
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open 't. [Giving him papers.] Read o'er this; [with
And after, this; and then to breakfast
What appetite you have.

[Exit KING, frowning upon CARDINAL WOLSEY: the Nobles throng after him, smiling and whispering.

Wol. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion [gall'd him;
Upon the daring huntsman that has
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper;
I fear, the story of his anger.—'Tis so;
This paper has undone me: 'tis the account [drawn together
Of all that world of wealth I have
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom, [negligence!
And fee my friends in Rome. O
Fit for a fool to fall by: what cross devil [packet
Made me put this main secret in the
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this? [brains?
No new device to beat this from his
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know [fortune
A way, if it take right, in spite of
Will bring me off again. What's this? 'To the Pope!' [ness
The letter, as I live, with all the busi-
I writ to's holiness. Nay then, farewell!

[1] It is possible that something is here lost.

I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness;
And, from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Re-enter the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you
To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands; and to confine yourself [chester's,
To Asher-house, my Lord of Win-
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol. Stay:
Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry
Authority so weighty.

Suf. Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly? [words to do it,—

Wol. Till I find more than will or
I mean your malice,—know, officious lords,
I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded—envy:
How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,
As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton [ruin!
Ye appear in every thing may bring my
Follow your envious courses, men of malice; [and, no doubt,
You have Christian warrant for 'em,
In time will find their fit rewards. That seal
You ask with such a violence, the king,
Mine and your master, with his own hand gave me; [honours,
Bade me enjoy it, with the place and
During my life; and, to confirm his goodness, [take it?
Tied it by letters-patent: now, who'll

Sur. The king, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself, then.

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest:
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land

Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
With thee and all thy best parts bound together, [your policy!
Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of
You sent me deputy for Ireland;
Far from his succour, from the king, from all [thou gavest him;
That might have mercy on the fault
Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolved him with an axe.
Wol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit, [law
I answer, is most false. The duke by Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness. [tell you
If I loved many words, lord, I should
You have as little honesty as honour,
That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.
Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldst feel
My sword i' the life-blood of thee else.
—My lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap like larks.
Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.
Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one, [tortion;
Into your own hands, cardinal, by ex-
The goodness of your intercepted packets [your goodness,
You writ to the pope against the king:
Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious. [noble,
My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despised nobility, our issues,
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles [you
Collected from his life. I'll startle
Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench
Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.
Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise this man, [it!
But that I am bound in charity against
Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand:
But, thus much, they are foul ones.
Wol. So much fairer
And spotless shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.
Sur. This cannot save you:
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall. [cardinal,
Now, if you can blush and cry 'guilty,'
You'll show a little honesty.
Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections: if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.
Sur. I had rather want those than my head. Have at you!
First, that without the king's assent or knowledge, [power
You wrought to be a legate; by which
You maim'd the jurisdiction of all bishops. [Rome, or else

To foreign princes, 'Ego et Rex meus'
Was still inscribed; in which you brought the king
To be your servant. [knowledge
Suf. Then, that without the
Either of king or council, when you went [bold
Ambassador to the emperor, you made
To carry into Flanders the great seal.
Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance, [Ferrara.
A league between his highness and
Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caused [king's coin.
Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the
Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance—
By what means got, I leave to your own conscience— [ways
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing

Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.
Cham. O my lord!
Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him
So little of his great self.
Sur. I forgive him.
Suf. Lord cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,— [of late,
Because all those things you have done
By your power legatine, within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a præmunire,—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you; [ments,
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tene-
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection. This is my charge. [meditations
Nor. And so we'll leave you to your

So fare you well, my little good lord
[Exeunt all but WOLSEY.
Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear me. [greatness!
Farewell! a long farewell, to all my
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth [blossoms,
The tender leaves of hope; to-morrow
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him; [frost,
The third day comes a frost, a killing
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full surely [root,
His greatness is a-ripening,—nips his
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured, [bladders,
Like little wanton boys that swim on
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride [has left me,
At length broke under me; and now
Weary and old with service, to the mercy [hide me.
Of a rude stream, that must for ever
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye:
I feel my heart new open'd. O, how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours! [aspire to,
There is, betwixt that smile we would
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin, [women have;
More pangs and fears than wars or
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, and stands amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell!
Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.
Wol. What, amazed
At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder [you weep,
A great man should decline? Nay, an
I am fall'n indeed.
Crom. How does your grace?
Wol. Why, well;
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell. [me
I know myself now; and I feel within
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cured me,
I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders,
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy, too much honour: [den
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a bur-
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven!
Crom. I am glad your grace has made that right use of it.
Wol. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks,
Out of a fortitude of soul I feel, [far
To endure more miseries and greater
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?
Crom. The heaviest and the worst
Is your displeasure with the king.
Wol. God bless him!
Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord chancellor in your place.
Wol. That's somewhat sudden:
But he's a learned man. May he continue [justice
Long in his highness' favour, and do
For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones, [blessings,
When he has run his course and sleeps in

May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!
What more? [with welcome,
Crom. That Cranmer is return'd
Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.
Wol. That's news indeed.
Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married, [queen,
This day was view'd in open as his
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.
Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell,
The king has gone beyond me: all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever:
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours, [waited
Or gild again the noble troops that
Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell;
I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: seek the king; [have told him
That sun, I pray, may never set! I
What and how true thou art: he will advance thee; [him—
Some little memory of me will stir
I know his noble nature—not to let
Thy hopeful service perish too: good Cromwell, [provide Neglect him not; make use now, and
For thine own future safety.
Crom. O my lord,
Must I then leave you? must I needs forego
So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron, [his lord.
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves
The king shall have my service; but my prayers
For ever and for ever shall be yours.
Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear [forced me,
In all my miseries; but thou hast
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman. [me, Cromwell;
Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear
And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention [taught thee,
Of me more must be heard of, say, I
Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour,
Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in; [miss'd it.
A sure and safe one, though thy master
Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me. [ambition:
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away
By that sin fell the angels; how can man then, [by it?
The image of his Maker, hope to win
Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, [and fear not:
To silence envious tongues. Be just,
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr! Serve the king;
And,—prithee, lead me in:
There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe
And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare now call my own. O Cromwell, Cromwell! [zeal
Had I but served my God with half the
I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Wol. So I have. Farewell
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster. Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

First Gent. You're well met once again.
Sec. Gent. So are you.
First Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold [tion?
The Lady Anne pass from her corona-
Sec. Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter, [his trial.
The Duke of Buckingham came from
First Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd sorrow;
This, general joy.
Sec. Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds—
As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward—
In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants, and sights of honour.
First Gent. Never greater,
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.
Sec. Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That paper in your hand?
First Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day
By custom of the coronation.
The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims [Norfolk,
To be high-steward; next, the Duke of
He to be earl marshal: you may read the rest.
Sec. Gent. I thank you, sir: had I not known those customs,
I should have been beholden to your paper. [Katharine,
But, I beseech you, what's become of
The princess dowager? how goes her business? [The Archbishop
First Gent. That I can tell you too.
Of Canterbury, accompanied with other [order,
Learned and reverend fathers of his
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off [to which
From Ampthill, where the princess lay;
She was often cited by them, but appear'd not: [and
And, to be short, for not appearance
The king's late scruple, by the main assent [divorced,
Of all these learned men she was
And the late marriage made of none effect: [bolton,
Since which she was removed to Kim-
Where she remains now sick.
Sec. Gent. Alas, good lady! [Trumpets.
The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

A lively Flourish of Trumpets.

1. Two Judges.
2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.
3. Choristers, singing. [Music.
4. Mayor of London, bearing the mace. Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head a gilt copper crown.
5. MARQUESS DORSET, bearing a sceptre of gold; on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him, the EARL OF SURREY, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.
6. DUKE OF SUFFOLK, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.
7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports; under it, the QUEEN in her robe; in her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side of her, the Bishops of LONDON and WINCHESTER.
8. The old DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the QUEEN'S train.
9. Certain Ladies or Countessses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

They pass over the stage in order and state.

Sec. Gent. A royal train, believe me. These I know:
Who's that that bears the-sceptre?
First Gent. Marquess Dorset:
And that the Earl of Surrey, with the rod. [That should be Sec. Gent. A bold brave gentleman.
The Duke of Suffolk?
First Gent. 'Tis the same: high-steward.
Sec. Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk?
First Gent. Yes.
Sec. Gent. [Looking on the QUEEN.] Heaven bless thee! [on.
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd
Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;
Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
And more and richer, when he strains that lady:
I cannot blame his conscience.
First Gent. They that bear
The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports.
Sec. Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all are near her.

I take it, she that carries up the train
Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.
First Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.
Sec. Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed,
And sometimes falling ones.
First Gent. No more of that.

[Exit Procession, and then a great flourish of Trumpets.

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?
Third Gent. Among the crowd i' the Abbey; where a finger
Could not be wedged in more: I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.
Sec. Gent. You saw
The ceremony?
Third Gent. That I did.
First Gent. How was it?
Third Gent. Well worth the seeing.
Sec. Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.
Third Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream
Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen
To a prepared place in the choir, fell off
A distance from her; while her grace sat down
To rest awhile, some half an hour or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.
Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever lay by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,
As loud and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks,—
Doublets, I think,—flew up; and had their faces
Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rams
In the old time of war, would shake the press,
And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living
Could say 'This is my wife' there; all were woven
So strangely in one piece.
Sec. Gent. But what follow'd?
Third Gent. At length her grace rose, and with modest paces
Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, and saintlike devoutly:
Cast her fair eyes to heaven and pray'd devoutly:
Then rose again and bow'd her to the people:
When by the Archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal makings of a queen;
As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems
Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the choir,
With all the choicest music of the kingdom,
Together sung 'Te Deum.' So she parted,
And with the same full state paced back again
To York-place, where the feast is held.
First Gent. Sir,
You must no more call it York-place: that's past;
For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost:
'Tis now the king's, and call'd Whitehall.
Third Gent. I know it;
But 'tis so lately alter'd that the old name
Is fresh about me.
Sec. Gent. What two reverend bishops
Were those that went on each side of the queen?
Third Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner; the one of Winchester,
Newly preferr'd from the king's secretary,
The other, London.
Sec. Gent. He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
The virtuous Cranmer.
Third Gent. All the land knows that:
However, yet there's no great breach; when it comes,
Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from him.
Sec. Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?
Third Gent. Thomas Cromwell;
A man in much esteem with the king, and truly
A worthy friend. The king has made him master o' the jewel-house,
And one, already, of the privy council.
Sec. Gent. He will deserve more.
Third Gent. Yes, without all doubt.
Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which
Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests:

Something I can command. As I walk thither,
I'll tell ye more.
Both. You may command us, sir.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick; led between GRIFFITH and PATIENCE.

Grif. How does your grace?
Kath. O Griffith, sick to death!
My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,
Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair.
So; now, methinks, I feel a little ease.
Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,
That the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey,
Was dead? [your grace,
Grif. Yes, madam; but I think
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't. [how he died:
Kath. Prithee, good Griffith, tell me
If well, he stepp'd before me, happily
For my example.
Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam:
For after the stout Earl Northumberland [forward,
Arrested him at York, and brought him
As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his mule.
Kath. Alas, poor man!
Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester;
Lodged in the abbey; where the reverend abbot,
With all his convent, honourably received him; [father abbot,
To whom he gave these words: 'O
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!'
So went to bed; where eagerly his sickness [after this,
Pursued him still; and three nights
About the hour of eight, which he himself foretold should be his last, full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace. [gently on him!
Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie
Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,
And yet with charity. He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking [gestion
Himself with princes; one that by sug-
Tied all the kingdom: simony was fair-play; [presence
His own opinion was his law: i' the
He would say untruths; and be ever double [was never,
Both in his words and meaning: he
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:
His promises were, as he then was, mighty; [nothing:
But his performance, as he is now,
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.
Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues [highness
We write in water. May it please your
To hear me speak his good now?
Kath. Yes, good Griffith;
I were malicious else.
Grif. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly [his cradle.
Was fashion'd to much honour from
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one; [suading;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and per-
Lofty and sour to them that loved him not; [sweet as summer.
But to those men that sought him,
And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
Which was a sin, yet in bestowing, madam, [him
He was most princely: ever witness for
Those twins of learning that he raised in you, [with him,
Ipswich and Oxford! one of which fell
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it; [famous,
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue. [him;
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon
For then, and not till then, he felt himself, [little:
And found the blessedness of being
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God. [other herald,
Kath. After my death I wish no

No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as
Griffith. [made me,
Whom I most hated living, thou hast
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour: peace be with him! [lower:
Patience, be near me still; and set me
I have not long to trouble thee.—Good
Griffith, [note
Cause the musicians play me that sad
I named my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.
[Sad and solemn music.
Grif. She is asleep: good wench,
let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her: softly, gentle
Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which the other four make reverent curtsies; then the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, as it were by inspiration, she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? are ye all gone,
And leave me here in wretchedness
behind ye?
Grif. Madam, we are here.
Kath. It is not you I call for:
Saw ye none enter since I slept?
Grif. None, madam.
Kath. No? Saw you not, even now,
a blessed troop [faces
Invite me to a banquet; whose bright
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promised me eternal happiness;
And brought me garlands, Griffith,
which I feel [assuredly.
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall,
Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams
Possess your fancy.
Kath. Bid the music leave;
They are harsh and heavy to me.
[Music ceases.
Pat. Do you note
How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden? [she looks,
How long her face is drawn? how pale
And of an earthy cold? Mark you her eyes! [pray.
Grif. She is going, wench: pray.
Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,—
Kath. You are a saucy fellow:
Deserve we no more reverence?
Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not lose her wonted
greatness,
To use so rude behaviour: go to, kneel.
Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon;
My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying [see you.
A gentleman, sent from the king, to Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith:
but this fellow
Let me ne'er see again.
[Exeunt GRIFFITH and Messenger.

Re-enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCIUS.

If my sight fail not,
You should be lord ambassador from the emperor, [Capucius.
My royal nephew, and your name
Cap. Madam, the same; your servant.
Kath. O, my lord,
The times and titles now are alter'd
strangely [But, I pray you,
With me since first you knew me.
What is your pleasure with me?
Cap. Noble lady,
First, mine own service to your grace;
the next, [you;

Kath. O my good lord, that comfort 'Tis like a pardon after execution : That gentle physic, given in time, had cured me ; [but prayers.
But now I am past all comforts here How does his highness ?
Cap. Madam, in good health.
Kath. So may he ever do ! and ever flourish, [poor name
When I shall dwell with worms, and my Banish'd the kingdom ! Patience, is that letter
I caused you write yet sent away ?
Pat. No, madam.
[Giving it to KATHARINE.
Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.
Cap. Most willing, madam.
Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness

By that you love the dearest in this As you wish Christian peace to souls departed, [urge the king
Stand these poor people's friend, and To do me this last right.
Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man !
Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his highness :
Say his long trouble now is passing Out of this world ; tell him, in death I bless'd him, [Farewell,
For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. My lord.—Griffith, farewell.—Nay, Patience, [bed ;
You must not leave me yet : I must to Call in more women. When I am dead, good wench, [over [Exeunt, leading KATHARINE.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not ?
Boy. It hath struck.
Gar. These should be hours for necessities, [nature
Not for delights ; times to repair our With comforting repose, and not for us To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas !
Whither so late ? [my lord ?
Lov. Came you from the king,
Gar. I did, Sir Thomas ; and left him at primero
With the Duke of Suffolk.
Lov. I must to him too, Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.
Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter ? [be
It seems you are in haste : an if there

No great offence belongs to 't, give your friend [affairs that walk,
Some touch of your late business: As they say spirits do, at midnight, have [ness
In them a wilder nature than the busi-That seeks dispatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear [queen's in labour,
Much weightier than this work. The They say, in great extremity; and fear'd
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may find
Good time, and live: but for the stock, Sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks I could
Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says [does
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,—
Hear me, Sir Thomas: you're a gentle-man [religious;
Of mine own way; I know you wise, And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take 't of me, [and she,
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, Sleep in their graves. [two

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of
The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,—
Beside that of the jewel-house, he's made master [further, sir,
O' the rolls, and the king's secretary; Stands in the gap and trade of more preferments, [archbishop
With which the time will load him. The Is the king's hand and tongue; and who dare speak
One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventured [this day,—
To speak my mind of him: and indeed Sir, I may tell it you,—I think I have Incensed the lords o' the council that he is—
For so I know he is, they know he is—
A most arch-heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land: with which they moved [so far
Have broken with the king; who hath
Given ear to our complaint, of his great grace [mischiefs
And princely care foreseeing those fell
Our reasons laid before him, he hath commanded [board
To-morrow morning to the council-He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas, [affairs
And we must root him out. From your I hinder you too long: good night, Sir Thomas. [rest your servant.

Lov. Many good nights, my lord: I [Exeunt GARDINER and Page.

Enter the KING and SUFFOLK.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night; [for me.
My mind's not on 't; you are too hard

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play. [the news?
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her [woman
What you commanded me, but by her I sent your message; who return'd her thanks [your highness
In the great'st humbleness, and desired Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What say'st thou, ha?
To pray for her? what, is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made
Almost each pang a death.

K. Hen. Alas, good lady!

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladding of Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles;
Prithee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember [me alone;
The estate of my poor queen. Leave For I must think of that which company
Would not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness
A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.
[Exit SUFFOLK.

Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows? [archbishop,
Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the
As you commanded me.
K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?
Den. Ay, my good lord. [Denny?
K. Hen. 'Tis true: where is he,
Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.
K. Hen. Bring him to us.
[Exit DENNY.
Lov. [Aside.] This is about that which the bishop spake:
I am happily come hither.

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery. [LOVELL seems to stay.] Ha! I have said. Be gone.
What! [Exeunt LOVELL and DENNY,
Cran. [Aside.] I am fearful: wherefore frowns he thus?
'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.
K. Hen. How now, my lord! you do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.
Cran. [Kneeling.] It is my duty
To attend your highness' pleasure.
K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury. [gether;
Come, you and I must walk a turn to-
I have news to tell you: come, come,
give me your hand.
Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak, [follows:
And am right sorry to repeat what
I have, and most unwillingly, of late Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, [being consider'd,
Grievous complaints of you; which,
Have moved us and our council, that you shall [I know,
This morning come before us; where,
You cannot with such freedom purge
yourself,
But that, till further trial in those charges [must take
Which will require your answer, you
Your patience to you, and be well contented [brother of us,
To make your house our Tower: you a
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.
Cran. [Kneeling.] I humbly thank your highness; [occasion
And am right glad to catch this good
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff [know,
And corn shall fly asunder: for, I
There's none stands under more calum-
nious tongues
Than I myself, poor man. [bury:
K. Hen. Stand up, good Canter-
Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted
In us, thy friend: give me thy hand,
stand up: [dame,
Prithee, let's walk. Now, by my holi-
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd [that
You would have given me your petition
I should have ta'en some pains to bring

Yourself and your accusers; and to Without indurance, further.
Cran. Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth and honesty:
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh not, [nothing
Being of those virtues vacant. I fear
What can be said against me.
K. Hen. Know you not
How your state stands i' the world,
with the whole world?
Your enemies are many, and not small;
their practices [not ever
Must bear the same proportion; and
The justice and the truth o' the question carries [lease
The due o' the verdict with it: at what Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt
To swear against you? Such things have been done. [malice
You are potently oppos'd, and with a
Of as great size. Ween you of better luck, [Master,
I mean, in perjured witness, than your Whose minister you are, whiles here he lived
Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.
Cran. God and your majesty
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me!
K. Hen. Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail than we give way to. [ing see
Keep comfort to you; and this morn-

You do appear before them. If they shall chance,
In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them.—Look, the good man weeps!
He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest mother!
I swear he is true-hearted, and a soul
None better in my kingdom.—Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. [Exit CRAN.] He has strangled
His language in his tears.

Enter an Old Lady.

Gent. [Within.] Come back: what mean you?

Old Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners.—Now, good angels
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Old Lady. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy: the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen
Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Lovell!

Re-enter LOVELL.

Lov. Sir?

K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit.

Old Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' more.
An ordinary groom is for such payment.
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this, the girl was like to him?
I will have more, or else unsay 't; and now,
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Lobby before the Council-chamber. Pursuivants, Pages, etc., attending.

Enter CRANMER.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast? what means this? Ho!
Who waits there? Sure, you know me?

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Yes, my lord;
But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor BUTTS.

Cran. So.

Butts. [Aside.] This is a piece of malice. I am glad
I came this way so happily: the king
Shall understand it presently. [Exit.

Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts,
The king's physician: as he pass'd along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain,
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,—
God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice,—
To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me
Wait else at door, a fellow-councillor,
Among boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter, at a window above, the KING and BUTTS.

Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight,—

K. Hen. What's that, Butts?

Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day.

K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord:
The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury; [pursuivants,
Who holds his state at door, 'mongst
Pages, and footboys.

K. Hen. Ha! 'tis he, indeed:

Is this the honour they do one another?
'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought [among 'em,
They had parted so much honesty At least good manners, as not thus to suffer [favour,
A man of his place, and so near our To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures, [packets.
And at the door too, like a post with By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery:
Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close;
We shall hear more anon. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Council-chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, the Lord Chamberlain, GARDINER, and CROMWELL. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. CROMWELL at the lower end, as secretary. Keeper at the door.

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary:
Why are we met in council?
Crom. Please your honours,
The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.
Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?
Crom. Yes.
Nor. Who waits there?
Keep. Without, my noble lords?
Gar. Yes.
Keep. My lord archbishop;
And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.
Chan. Let him come in.
Keep. Your grace may enter now.

CRANMER enters and approaches the council-table.

Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry
To sit here at this present, and behold
That chair stand empty: but we all are men,
In our own natures frail, incapable;
Of our flesh few are angels: out of which frailty
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,
Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little, [filling
Toward the king first, then his laws, in The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,— [opinions,
For so we are inform'd,—with new Divers and dangerous; which are heresies, [ous.
And, not reform'd, may prove pernici-
Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too, [wild horses
My noble lords; for those that tame Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle;
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em, [suffer,
Till they obey the manage. If we Out of our easiness and childish pity
To one man's honour, this contagious sickness, [then?
Farewell all physic: and what follows Commotions, uproars, with a general taint [our neighbours,
Of the whole state: as, of late days, The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
Yet freshly pitied in our memories.
Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress [labour'd,
Both of my life and office, I have And with no little study, that my teaching
And the strong course of my authority Might go one way, and safely; and the end [ing—
Was ever to do well: nor is there liv-
I speak it with a single heart, my lords—
A man that more detests, more stirs against, [place,
Both in his private conscience and his Defacers of a public peace, than I do.
Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart [make
With less allegiance in it! Men that Envy and crooked malice nourishment
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships, [accusers,
That, in this case of justice, my Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.
Suf. Nay, my lord,
That cannot be: you are a councillor,
And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you.
Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,

We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' pleasure,
And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower;
Where, being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah, my good Lord of Winchester, I thank you;
You are always my good friend; if your will pass, [and juror,
I shall both find your lordship judge
You are so merciful. I see your end;
'Tis my undoing. Love and meekness, lord, [bition:
Become a churchman better than am-
Win straying souls with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself, [patience,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my
I make as little doubt, as you do conscience; [more,
In doing daily wrongs. I could say
But reverence to your calling makes me modest. [sectary;

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers, [weakness.
To men that understand you, words and

Crom. My Lord of Winchester, you are a little, [so noble,
By your good favour, too sharp; men
However faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty
To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary,
I cry your honour mercy; you may, worst
Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer
Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest! [their fears.
Men's prayers then would seek you, not

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Do.
Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much;
Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed,
I take it, by all voices, that forthwith
You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner; [pleasure
There to remain till the king's further
Be known unto us: are you all agreed, lords?

All. We are. [mercy,

Cran. Is there no other way of
But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other
Would you expect? you are strangely troublesome.
Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?
Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him,
And see him safe i' the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords,
I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords;
By virtue of that ring, I take my cause
Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it [master.
To a most noble judge, the king my

Chan. This is the king's ring.

Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven: I told ye all, [a-rolling,
When we first put this dangerous stone
'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords,
The king will suffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?

Chan. 'Tis now too certain:
How much more is his life in value with him?
Would I were fairly out on 't!

Crom. My mind gave me,
In seeking tales and informations
Against this man, whose honesty the devil
And his disciples only envy at,
Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye!

Enter the King, frowning on them; he takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven [prince;
In daily thanks, that gave us such a

He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee:
By all that's holy, he had better starve
Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your grace,—

K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me. [understanding
I had thought I had had men of some
And wisdom of my council; but I find none.
Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
This good man,—few of you deserve that title,— [boy
This honest man, wait like a lousy foot-
At chamber-door? and one as great as you are? [commission
Why, what a shame was this! Did my Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye [him,
Power as he was a councillor to try
Not as a groom: there's some of ye, I see,
More out of malice than integrity,
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;
Which ye shall never have while I live.

Chan. Thus far,
My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace [was purposed
To let my tongue excuse all. What

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords,
Take him, and use him well; he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, if a prince
May be beholden to a subject, I
Am, for his love and service, so to him.
Make me no more ado, but all embrace him: [Lord of Canterbury,
Be friends, for shame, my lords! My
I have a suit which you must not deny me; [wants baptism;
That is, a fair young maid that yet
You must be godfather, and answer for her. [alive may glory

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons: you shall have
Two noble partners with you; the old Duchess of Norfolk,
And Lady Marquess Dorset: will these please you? [charge you
Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I
Embrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart
And brother-love I do it.

Cran. And let heaven
Witness how dear I hold this confirmation.

K. Hen. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart:
The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which says thus: 'Do my Lord of Canterbury
A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever.'
Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Palace Yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals: do you take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

One Within. Good master porter, I belong to the larder.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue! Is this a place to roar in?—Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to 'em.—I'll scratch your heads: you must be seeing christenings? do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much impossible—
Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons— [sleep
To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em
On May-day morning; which will never be: [stir 'em.
We may as well push against Paul's as
Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?
Man. Alas, I know not; how gets the tide in? [foot—
As much as one sound cudgel of four
You see the poor remainder—could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand, to mow 'em down before me; but if I spared any that had a head to hit, either young or old, he or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, let me never hope to see a chine again; and that I would not for a cow, God save her! [porter?

One Within. Do you hear, master

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy.—Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand; here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in 's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance: that fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pinked porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I missed the meteor once, and hit that woman; who cried out 'Clubs!' when I might see from far some forty truncheoneers draw to her succour, which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place: at length they came to the broomstaff with me; I defied 'em still: when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in and let 'em win the work: the devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely.

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the Limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beadles, that is to come.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here! [are coming,
They grow still too; from all parts they
As if we kept a fair here. Where are these porters, [hand, fellows:
These lazy knaves? Ye have made a fine
There's a trim rabble let in: are all these [We shall have
Your faithful friends o' the suburbs?
Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies, [ing.
When they pass back from the christen-
Port. An 't please your honour,
We are but men; and what so many may do,
Not being torn a-pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule 'em.
Cham. As I live,
If the king blame me for 't, I'll lay ye all [your heads
By the heels, and suddenly; and on
Clap round fines for neglect: ye're lazy knaves;

And here ye lie baiting of bombards when
Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound; [tening:
They're come already from the chris-
Go, break among the press, and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly: or I'll find
A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months. [cess.

I'll pick you o'er the pales else.

SCENE V.—The Palace.

Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, with his marshal's staff, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening-gifts; then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the Child richly habited in a mantle, etc., train borne by a Lady; then follows the MARCHIONESS OF DORSET, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter the KING, and Train.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal grace, and the good queen,
My noble partners and myself thus pray: [lady,
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!

K. Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop:
What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

K. Hen. Stand up, lord.

[The KING kisses the Child.

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee!
Into whose hand I give thy life.

Cran. Amen.

K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal:
I thank ye heartily; so shall this lady,
When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir,
For Heaven now bids me; and the words I utter ['em truth.
Let none think flattery, for they'll find
This royal infant,—heaven still move about her!—
Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings, [shall be—
Which time shall bring to ripeness: she
But few now living can behold that goodness—
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never [virtue
More covetous of wisdom and fair
Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces, [this is,
That mould up such a mighty piece as
With all the virtues that attend the good, [shall nurse her,
Shall still be doubled on her: truth
Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her: [shall bless her;
She shall be loved and fear'd: her own
Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,
And hang their heads with sorrow: good grows with her:
In her days every man shall eat in safety, [and sing
Under his own vine, what he plants;
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours: [about her
God shall be truly known; and those
From her shall read the perfect ways of honour, [by blood.
And by those claim their greatness, not
Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but, as when [phœnix,
The bird of wonder dies, the maiden
Her ashes new create another heir,
As great in admiration as herself,
So shall she leave her blessedness to one,—
When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness,—
Who from the sacred ashes of her honour [she was,
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as

And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror, [infant,
That were the servants to this chosen
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him: [shine,
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall
His honour and the greatness of his name [shall flourish,
Shall be, and make new nations: he
And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches [dren's children
To all the plains about him: our chil-
Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England, [her,
An aged princess; many days shall see
And yet no day without a deed to crown it. [must die;
Would I had known no more! but she
She must; the saints must have her; yet a virgin,
A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K. Hen. O lord archbishop.
Thou hast made me now a man! never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing.
This oracle of comfort has so pleased me, [desire
That, when I am in heaven, I shall
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker. [mayor,
I thank ye all. To you, my good lord
And your good brethren, I am much beholden; [presence,
I have received much honour by your
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, lords:
Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye; [man think
She will be sick else. This day, no
He has business at his house; for all shall stay:
This little one shall make it holiday.

Exeunt.

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one this play can never please [their ease,
All that are here: some come to take
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear, [so 'tis clear
We have frighted with our trumpets;
They'll say 'tis nought: others, to hear the city [witty!'
Abused extremely, and to cry 'That's
Which we have not done neither: that, I fear, [hear
All the expected good we are like to
For this play at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women; [smile,
For such a one we show'd 'em: if they
And say 'twill do, I know, within a while [hap
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy there lies the scene. From isles of Greece [chafed,
The princes orgulous, their high blood
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships, [ments
Fraught with the ministers and instru-
Of cruel war: sixty-and-nine, that wore
Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay [vow is made
Put forth toward Phrygia; and their
To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.
To Tenedos they come;
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge [dan plains
Their warlike fraughtage: now on Dar-
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch [gated city,
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-
Dardan, and Tymbria, Helias, Chetas, Trojan,
And Antenorides, with massy staples
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr up the sons of Troy.
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits, [Greek,
On one and other side, Trojan and
Sets all on hazard: and hither am I come
A prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of author's pen or actor's voice, but suited
In like conditions as our argument,
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those broils, [thence away
Beginning in the middle; starting
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are; [war.
Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my varlet; I'll unarm again: [Troy,
Why should I war without the walls of

That find such cruel battle here within ?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field ; Troilus, alas, hath none !

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended ?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant ;
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance ;
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skilless as unpractised infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this : for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried ?

Pan. Ay, the grinding ; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried ?

Pan. Ay, the bolting ; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening ; but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking ; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,
Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.
At Priam's royal table do I sit ;
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,—
So, traitor !—'When she comes !'—When is she thence ?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee :—when my heart, [twain,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive in
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me, [storm,
I have, as when the sun doth light a
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile ;
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness, [sadness.
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's,—well, go to,—there were no more comparison between the women,—but, for my part, she is my kinswoman ; I would not, as they term it, praise her : but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but—

Tro. O Pandarus ! I tell thee, Pandarus,— [lie drown'd,
When I do tell thee, there my hopes
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee I am mad [is fair ;'
In Cressid's love : thou answer'st 'she
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice ; [hand,
Handlest in thy discourse, O, that her
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach ; to whose soft seizure [of sense
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit
Hard as the palm of ploughman : this thou tell'st me, [love her ;
As true thou tell'st me, when I say I
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm, [given me
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath
The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in 't. Let her be as she is : if she be fair, 'tis the better for her ; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus, how now, Pandarus !

Pan I have had my labour for my travail ; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you ; gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus ? what, with me ?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen : an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I ? I care not an she were a black-a-moor : 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I she is not fair ?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father ; let her to the Greeks ; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her : for my part, I'll meddle nor make no more i' the matter.

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me: I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. [Exit. An alarum.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!
Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair, [her thus.
When with your blood you daily paint
I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starved a subject for my sword.
But Pandarus—O gods, how do you plague me! [dar;
I cannot come to Cressid but by Pan-
And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?
Her bed in India; there she lies, a pearl:
Between our Ilium and where she resides, [flood;
Let it be call'd the wild and wandering
Ourself the merchant; and this sailing Pandar [bark.
Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our

Alarum. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, Prince Troilus! wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there: this woman's answer sorts,
For womanish it is to be from thence.
What news, Æneas, from the field today? [and hurt.

Æne. That Paris is returned home,

Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Æne. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;
Paris is gored with Menelaus' horn.
[Alarum.

Æne. Hark, what good sport is out of town to-day!

Tro. Better at home, if 'would I might' were 'may.'
But to the sport abroad: are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale, [patience
To see the battle. Hector, whose
Is, as a virtue, fix'd, to-day was moved:
He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer; [war,
And, like as there were husbandry in
Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, [flower
And to the field goes he; where every
Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw
In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks [Hector;
A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to
They call him Ajax.

Cres. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se,
And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attaint but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: he hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say he yesterday coped Hector in the battle and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Cres. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good-morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good-morrow, cousin Cressid: what do you talk of? Good-morrow, Alexander. How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector armed and gone ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so: Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too; he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that: and there's Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus; I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres. Ay, if ever I saw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees. [is himself.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus! I would he were.

Cres. So he is.

Pan. Condition, I had gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself: would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; time must friend or end: well, Troilus, well, I would my heart were in her body! No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. The other's not come to 't; you shall tell me another tale, when the other's come to 't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him; his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece: Helen herself swore the other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour,—for so 'tis, I must confess,—not brown neither,—

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown. [true.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not

Pan. She praised his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into the compassed window,—and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin,—

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young: and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man and so old a lifter?

Pan. But, to prove to you that Helen loves him: she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,—

Cres. Juno have mercy! how came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled: I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to, then: but to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,—

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus! why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin; indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess,—

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin. [is richer.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart

Pan. But there was such laughing! Queen Hecuba laughed that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones.

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was a more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, 'Here's but one-and-fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.'

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. 'One-and-fifty hairs,' quoth he, 'and one white: that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.' 'Jupiter!' quoth she, 'which of these hairs is Paris my husband?' 'The forked one,' quoth he, 'pluck it out, and give it him.' But there was such laughing! and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed.

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on 't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true; he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May.

[A Retreat sounded.

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field: shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely: I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

ÆNEAS passes.

Pan. That's Æneas: is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you: but mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

ANTENOR passes.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one o' the soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see. [more.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have

HECTOR passes.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector! There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks! there's a countenance! is 't not a brave man?

Cres. O, a brave man!

Pan. Is 'a not? it does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there: there's no jesting; there's laying on, take 't off who will, as they say: there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

Pan. Swords! any thing, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one: by God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris.

PARIS passes.

Look ye yonder, niece; is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt; why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha! Would I could see Troilus now! you shall see Troilus anon.

HELENUS passes.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Helenus: I marvel where Troilus is.—That's Helenus.—I think he went not forth to-day.—That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus! no;—yes, he'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark! do you not hear the people cry 'Troilus'?—Helenus is a priest. [yonder?

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes

TROILUS passes.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece!—Hem!—Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him. O brave Troilus! Look well upon him, niece; look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hacked than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three-and-twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way! Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Cres. Here come more.

Common Soldiers pass.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die i' the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone: crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. 'Well, well!' Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a minced man: and then to be baked with no date in the pie; for then the man's date's out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it is past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter TROILUS's Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where? [unarms him.

Boy. At your own house; there he

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy.] I doubt he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle. [by.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and

Cres. To bring, uncle?

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd. [Exit PANDARUS.

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice,
He offers in another's enterprise:
But more in Troilus thousandfold I see
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be; [wooing:
Yet hold I off. Women are angels,
Things won are done; joy's soul lies in the doing. [knows not this:
That she beloved knows nought that
Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:
That she was never yet that ever knew
Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.

Therefore this maxim out of love I teach :
Achievement is command ; ungain'd, beseech : [love doth bear,
Then though my heart's content firm
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp. Before AGAMEMNON'S Tent.

Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and Others.

Agam. Princes, [your cheeks ?
What grief hath set the jaundice on
The ample proposition that hope makes
In all designs begun on earth below
Fails in the promised largeness : checks and disasters [rear'd ;
Grow in the veins of actions highest
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infect the sound pine and divert his grain [growth.
Tortive and errant from his course of
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us
That we come short of our suppose so far [walls stand ;
That after seven years' siege yet Troy
Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim
And that unbodied figure of the thought [then, you princes,
That gave't surmised shape. Why
Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works, [indeed nought else
And think them shames ? which are
But the protractive trials of great Jove
To find persistive constancy in men :
The fineness of which metal is not found
In Fortune's love ; for then the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all affined and kin : [frown,
But, in the wind and tempest of her
Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away ;
And what hath mass or matter, by itself
Lies rich in virtue and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance [being smooth,
Lies the true proof of men : the sea
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail [way
Upon her patient breast, making their
With those of noble bulk !
But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and anon behold
The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut, [ments,
Bounding between the two moist ele-
Like Perseus' horse : where's then the saucy boat [now
Whose weak untimber'd sides but even
Co-rivall'd greatness ? either to harbour fled,
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Doth valour's show and valours worth divide [and brightness
In storms of Fortune ; for in her ray
The herd hath more annoyance by the breese, [ting wind
Than by the tiger ; but when the split-
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks, [the thing of courage,
And flies fled under shade, why then,
As roused with rage, with rage doth sympathize, [key,
And with an accent tuned in selfsame
Returns to chiding Fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,
Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece, [spirit,
Heart of our numbers, soul and only
In whom the tempers and the minds of all [speaks.
Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses
Besides the applause and approbation
The which, [To AGAMEMNON] most mighty for thy place and sway,
[To NESTOR] And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,
I give to both your speeches, which were such [Greece
As Agamemnon and the hand of
Should hold up high in brass ; and such again
As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver,
Should with a bond of air, strong as the axletree [Greekish ears
On which heaven rides, knit all the
To his experienced tongue, yet let it please both, [speak.
Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses

Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca ; and be't of less expect [den,
That matter needless, of importless bur-
Divide thy lips, than we are confi-dent,

When rank Thersites opes his mastiff jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.
Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,
And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master,
But for these instances. [lected:
The specialty of rule hath been neg-
And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand [factions.
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow
When that the general is not like the hive
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded, [mask.
The unworthiest shows as fairly in the
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre,
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line of order:
And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
In noble eminence enthroned and sphered [eye
Amidst the other; whose medicinable
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king, [the planets
Sans check to good and bad: but when
In evil mixture to disorder wander,
What plagues and what portents, what mutiny, [earth,
What raging of the sea, shaking of
Commotion in the winds, frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity and married calm of states
Quite from their fixure! O, when degree is shaked,
Which is the ladder to all high designs,
The enterprise is sick! How could communities, [cities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place?
Take but degree away, untune that string, [thing meets
And, hark, what discord follows! each
In mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters [shores,
Should lift their bosoms higher than the
And make a sop of all this solid globe:
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead: [and wrong.
Force should be right; or rather, right
Between whose endless jar justice resides, [justice too.
Should lose their names, and so should
Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforce an universal prey,
And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking.
And this neglection of degree it is
That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose [dain'd
It hath to climb. The general's dis-
By him one step below; he by the next;
That next by him beneath: so every step,
Exampled by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation:
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot, [length,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength. [discover'd
Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here
The fever whereof all our power is sick.
Agam. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses,
What is the remedy?
Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
The sinew and the forehand of our host,
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent [Patroclus,
Lies mocking our designs: with him,
Upon a lazy bed, the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests; [action,
And with ridiculous and awkward
Which, slanderer, he imitation calls,
He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy topless deputation he puts on;
And, like a strutting player, whose conceit [it rich
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think

To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage,— [ing
Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seem-
He acts thy greatness in; and when he speaks, [unsquared,
'Tis like a chime a-mending; with terms
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd,
Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff, [lolling,
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
Cries 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.
Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy beard,
As he being dress'd to some oration.'
That's done; as near as the extremest ends [wife:
Of parallels; as like as Vulcan and his
Yet god Achilles still cries 'Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patroclus,
Arming to answer in a night alarm.'
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age [and spit,
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough
And, with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget, [sport
Shake in and out the rivet: and at this
Sir Valour dies; cries 'O, enough, Patroclus; [all
Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split
In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions, [truce,
Excitements to the field, or speech for Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes. [twain,—

Nest. And in the imitation of these
Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice,—many are infect. [head
Ajax is grown self-will'd, and bears his
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him; [of war,
Makes factious feasts; rails on our state
Bold as an oracle; and sets Thersites,
A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint,
To match us in comparisons with dirt;
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice;
Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Forestall prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand; the still and mental parts [strike
That do contrive how many hands shall
When fitness calls them on, and know by measure [weight—
Of their observant toil the enemies'
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-war; [wall,
So that the ram that batters down the
For the great swing and rudeness of his poise, [the engine,
They place before his hand that made
Or those that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons. [Trumpet sounds.

Agem. What trumpet? look, Menelaus.

Men. From Troy.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Agam. What would you 'fore our tent?

Æne. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?

Agam. Even this. [a prince

Æne. May one that is a herald and
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice
Call Agamemnon head and general.

Æne. Fair leave and large security. How may
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How!

Æne. Ay:
I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phœbus: [men?
Which is that god in office, guiding
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan scorns us, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious courtiers. [unarm'd,
Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair,
As bending angels; that's their fame in peace: [they have galls,
But when they would seem soldiers,
Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's accord [Æneas,
Nothing so full of heart. But peace,
Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips! [worth,
The worthiness of praise distains his

But what the repining enemy com-

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Æneas?
Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name.
Agam. What's your affair, I pray you? [non's ears.
Æne. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamem-
Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.
Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him:
I bring a trumpet to awake his ear;
To set his sense on the attentive bent,
And then to speak.
Agam. Speak frankly as the wind;
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour:
That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.
Æne. Trumpet, blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents; [know,
And every Greek of mettle, let him
What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud. [Trumpet sounds.
We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy [father,—
A prince call'd Hector,—Priam is his
Who in this dull and long-continued truce [trumpet,
Is rusty grown: he bade me take a
And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords! [Greece
If there be one among the fair'st of
That holds his honour higher than his ease; [his peril;
That seeks his praise more than he fears
That knows his valour, and knows not his fear; [confession
That loves his mistress more than in
With truant vows to her own lips he loves, [worth
And dare avow her beauty and her
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge. [Greeks
Hector, in view of Trojans and of
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it,
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms; [call,
And will to-morrow with his trumpet
Midway between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love:
If any come, Hector shall honour him;
If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires, [not worth
The Grecian dames are sunburnt, and
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.
Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord Æneas, [kind,
If none of them have soul in such a
We left them all at home: but we are soldiers; [prove,
And may that soldier a mere recreant

If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he. [was a man
Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that
When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now;
But if there be not in our Grecian host
One noble man that hath one spark of fire, [me
To answer for his love, tell him from
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver,
And in my vantbrace put this wither'd brawn; [my lady
And, meeting him, will tell him that
Was fairer than his grandam and as chaste [flood,
As may be in the world: his youth in
I'll prove this truth with my three drops of blood.
Æne. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!
Ulyss. Amen. [touch your hand;
Agam. Fair Lord Æneas, let me
To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir.
Achilles shall have word of this intent;
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent; [go,
Yourself shall feast with us before you
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but ULYSSES and NESTOR.

Ulyss. Nestor!

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain; [shape.
Be you my time to bring it to some

Nest. What is 't?

Ulyss. This 'tis; [seeded pride
Blunt wedges rive hard knots; the
That hath to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles must or now be cropp'd, [evil,
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like
To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how?

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance, [up:
Whose grossness little characters sum
And, in the publication, make no strain.
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren [knows,
As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo
'Tis dry enough,—will, with great speed of judgment,
Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him. [think you?

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer,

Nest. Yes,
It is most meet: whom may you else oppose, [off,
That can from Hector bring his honour
If not Achilles? Though 't be a sportful combat,
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute [me, Ulysses,
With their finest palate: and trust to
Our imputation shall be oddly poised
In this wild action; for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes, although small pricks [seen
To their subsequent volumes, there is
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is supposed [choice:
He that meets Hector issues from our
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election; and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence the conquering part,
To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments, [bows
In no less working than are swords and
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech;—
Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector. [est wares,
Let us, like merchants, show our foul-
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed
By showing the worse first. Do not consent
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame in this
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were he not proud, we all should share with him:
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Afric sun
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes, [were foil'd,
Should he 'scape Hector fair: if he
Why, then we did our main opinion crush [lottery;
In taint of our best man. No, make a
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves
Give him allowance for the better man;
For that will physic the great Myrmidon
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss; [assumes;
Our project's life this shape of sense
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Ulysses,
Now I begin to relish thy advice;

And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. Agamemnon—how if he had boils? full, all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. And those boils did run?—Say so,—did not the general run then? were not that a botchy core?

Ajax. Dog!

Ther. Then would come some matter from him; I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel, then.

[Strikes him.

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou vinewedst leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strikest me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation!

Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, propentine, do not; my fingers itch.

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation!

Ther. Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit. [son cur!

Ajax. [Beating him.] You whore-

Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assinego may tutor thee: thou scurvy-valiant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. You scurvy lord!

Ajax. [Beating him.] You cur!

Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you thus? How now, Thersites! what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. 'Well!' why, so I do.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him; for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly and his guts in his head, I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say, this Ajax—

[AJAX offers to strike him, ACHILLES interposes.

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

Ther. Has not so much wit—
Achil. Nay, I must hold you.
Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.
Achil. Peace, fool!
Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there; that he; look you there!
Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall—
Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's? [will shame it.
Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's
Patr. Good words, Thersites.
Achil. What's the quarrel?
Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.
Ther. I serve thee not.
Ajax. Well, go to, go to.
Ther. I serve here voluntary.
Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary; Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.
Ther. E'en so; a great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains: 'a were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.
Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?
Ther. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor, whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draught-oxen, and make you plough up the wars.
Achil. What, what?
Ther. Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles! to, Ajax! to!
Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.
Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards. [peace!
Patr. No more words, Thersites;
Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I?
Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.
Ther. I will see you hanged, like clotpoles, ere I come any more to your tents: I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools. [Exit.
Patr. A good riddance.
Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host:
That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun, [and Troy,
Will with a trumpet 'twixt our tents To-morrow morning call some knight to arms [that dare
That hath a stomach; and such a one
Maintain—I know not what: 'tis trash. Farewell. [him?
Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer
Achil. I know not; 'tis put to lottery; otherwise
He knew his man.
Ajax. O, meaning you. I'll go learn more of it. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Troy. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent, [Greeks:
Thus once again says Nestor from the 'Deliver Helen, and all damage else—
As honour, loss of time, travail, expense,
Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consumed
In hot digestion of this cormorant war—
Shall be struck off.' Hector, what say you to 't? [Greeks than I,
Hect. Though no man lesser fears the
As far as toucheth my particular,
Yet, dread Priam,
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spungy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out 'Who knows what follows?' [is surety,
Than Hector is: the wound of peace
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd [searches
The beacon of the wise, the tent that
To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go, [this question,
Since the first sword was drawn about
Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes, [of ours:
Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean,
If we have lost so many tenths of ours,
To guard a thing not ours nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,
What merit's in that reason which denies
The yielding of her up?
Tro. Fie, fie, my brother!
Weight you the worth and honour of a king
So great as our dread father in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum

The past proportion of his infinite ?
And buckle-in a waist most fathomless
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons ? fie, for godly shame ! [sharp at reasons,
Hel. No marvel, though you bite so
You are so empty of them. Should not our father [reasons,
Bear the great sway of his affairs with
Because your speech hath none that tells him so ?
Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest ;
You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons :
You know an enemy intends you harm ;
You know a sword employ'd is perilous,
And reason flies the object of all harm :
Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels,
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star disorb'd ? Nay, if we talk of reason,
Let's shut our gates, and sleep : manhood and honour
Should have hare-hearts, would they but fat their thoughts
With this cramm'd reason : reason and respect
Make livers pale and lustihood deject.
Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost
The holding.
Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valued ? [ticular will ;
Hect. But value dwells not in par-
It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer : 'tis mad idolatry
To make the service greater than the god ;
And the will dotes that is attributive
To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit. [election
Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my
Is led on in the conduct of my will ;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears, [shores
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous
Of will and judgment : how may I avoid, [elected,
Although my will distaste what it
The wife I chose ? there can be no evasion
To blench from this, and to stand firm by honour.
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant [remainder viands
When we have soil'd them ; nor the
We do not throw in unrespective sieve,
Because we now are full. It was thought meet [Greeks :
Paris should do some vengeance on the
Your breath of full consent bellied his sails ; [took a truce,
The seas and winds, old wranglers,
And did him service ; he touch'd the ports desired ;
And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness
Wrinkles Apollo's and makes pale the morning.
Why keep we her ? the Grecians keep our aunt : [pearl,
Is she worth keeping ? why, she is a
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,
And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,— ['Go, go,'—
As you must needs, for you all cried
If you'll confess he brought home noble prize,— [your hands
As you must needs, for you all clapp'd
And cried 'Inestimable !'—why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate ;
And do a deed that Fortune never did,
Beggar the estimation which you prized [most base,
Richer than sea and land ? O theft
That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep ! [stol'n,
But thieves unworthy of a thing so
That in their country did them that disgrace
We fear to warrant in our native place !
Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry !
Pri. What noise ? what shriek is this ?
Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.
Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans !
Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry ! lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I wi l fill them with prophetic tears.
Hect. Peace, sister, peace !

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled eld,
Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes [come.
A moiety of that mass of moan to
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears! [stand;
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion
Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood [reason,
So madly hot that no discourse of
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act [it;
Such and no other than event doth form
Nor once deject the courage of our minds, [sick raptures
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel [engaged
Which hath our several honours all
To make it gracious. For my private part, [sons:
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's
And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us [est spleen
Such things as might offend the weak-
To fight for and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince of levity [counsels:
As well my undertakings as your
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.
For what, alas, can these my single arms? [valour,
What propugnation is in one man's
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights: [gall;
You have the honey still, but these the

The pleasures such a beauty brings with
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wiped off, in honourable keepng her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen, [shame to me,
Disgrace to your great worths, and
Now to deliver her possession up
On terms of base compulsion! Can it be
That so degenerate a strain as this
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms? [party
There's not the meanest spirit on our

Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfamed [say,
Where Helen is the subject: then, I
Well may we fight for her whom, we know well, [allel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said well; [hand
And on the cause and question now in
Have glozed, but superficially; not much [thought
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle
Unfit to hear moral philosophy.
The reasons you allege do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenge [voice
Have ears more deaf than adders to the

All dues be render'd to their owners: now,
What nearer debt in all humanity

If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,

As it is known she is, these moral laws
Of nature and of nations speak aloud
To have her back return'd: thus to persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this in way of truth; yet, ne'erthe-less,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:
Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds,
Whose present courage may beat down [our foes,
And fame in time to come canonize us;
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promised glory
As smiles upon the forehead of this action
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks
Will strike amazement to their drowsy [spirits:
I was advertised their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept:
This, I presume, will wake him.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp. Before ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. How now, Thersites! what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O, worthy satisfaction! would it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles, a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, if ye take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have! which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the Neapolitan bone-ache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers; and devil Envy say Amen. What, ho! my Lord Achilles!

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites! Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could ha' remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldst not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter; thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon 't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; the heavens hear me!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where? Art thou come? why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles; then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites: then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus: then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayst tell that knowest,
Achil. O, tell, tell.
Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.
Patr. You rascal!
Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done.
Achil. He is a privileged man. Proceed, Thersites.
Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.
Achil. Derive this; come.
Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.
Patr. Why am I a fool?
Ther. Make that demand of the prover. It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here?
Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody. Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.
Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold and a whore; a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now, the dry serpigo on the subject! and war and lechery confound all! [Exit.

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

Agam. Where is Achilles?
Patr. Within his tent; but ill-disposed, my lord.
Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here. [by
He shent our messengers; and we lay
Our appertainments, visiting of him:
Let him be told so; lest perchance he think [place,
We dare not move the question of our
Or know not what we are.
Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.
Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent:
He is not sick.
Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why, why? let him show us a cause.—A word, my lord. [Takes AGAMEMNON aside.
Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him? [fool from him.
Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his Nest. Who? Thersites?
Ulyss. He.
Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.
Ulyss. No, you see, he is his argument that has his argument; Achilles.
Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish than their faction: but it was a strong composure a fool could disunite.
Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus.

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Nest. No Achilles with him.
Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy; his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.
Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry,
If any thing more than your sport and pleasure [state
Did move your greatness and this noble
To call upon him; he hopes it is no other [sake,
But for your health and your digestion
An after-dinner's breath.
Agam. Hear you, Patroclus;
We are too well acquainted with these answers: [scorn,
But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with
Cannot outfly our apprehensions.
Much attribute he hath; and much the reason [virtues,
Why we ascribe it to him: yet all his
Not virtuously on his own part beheld,
Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss;
Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, [him,
Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell
We come to speak with him; and you shall not sin,
If you do say we think him over-proud
And under-honest; in self-assumption greater
Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than himself
Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on, [mand,
Disguise the holy strength of their com-
And underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predominance; yea, watch

His pettish lunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action [and add,
Rode on his tide. Go, tell him this;
That if he overhold his price so much,
We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine
Not portable, lie under this report:
'Bring action hither, this cannot go to war:
A stirring dwarf we do allowance give
Before a sleeping giant,' Tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently. [Exit.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied; [enter you.
We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, [Exit ULYSSES.

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind's the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. [Aside.] And yet he loves himself: is it not strange?

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none;
But carries on the stream of his dispose
Without observance or respect of any,
In will peculiar and in self-admission,

Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request,
Untent his person, and share the air with us?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only
He makes important: possess'd he is with greatness; [pride
And speaks not to himself but with a
That quarrels at self-breath: imagined worth [discourse
Holds in his blood such swoln and hot
That 'twixt his mental and his active parts [rages
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion
And batters down himself: what should I say? [tokens of it
He is so plaguy proud that the death-
Cry 'No recovery.'

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.
Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent: [be led,
'Tis said he holds you well; and will
At your request, a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so! [makes
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax
When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord [seam,
That bastes his arrogance with his own
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve [shipp'd
And ruminate himself, shall he be wor-
Of that we hold an idol more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord [acquired;
Must not so stale his palm, nobly
Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles: [pride,
That were to enlard his fat-already
And add more coals to Cancer when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid,
And say in thunder 'Achilles, go to him.'

Nest. [Aside.] O, this is well; he rubs the vein of him.

Dio. [Aside.] And how his silence drinks up this applause!

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist
I'll pash him o'er the face.

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.

Ajax. An 'a be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride:
Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.
Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!
Nest. [Aside.] How he describes himself!
Ajax. Can he not be sociable?
Ulyss. [Aside.] The raven chides blackness.
Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.
Agam. [Aside.] He will be the physician that should be the patient.
Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—
Ulyss. [Aside.] Wit would be out of fashion.
Ajax. 'A should not bear it so, 'a should eat swords first: shall pride carry it? [carry half.
Nest. [Aside.] An 'twould, you'd
Ulyss. [Aside.] He'd have ten shares. [him supple.
Ajax. I'll knead him, I will make
Nest. [Aside.] He's not yet thorough warm: force him with praises: pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry.
Ulyss. [To AGAMEMNON.] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike. [so.
Nest. Our noble general, do not do
Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.
Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.
Here is a man—but 'tis before his face;
I will be silent.
Nest. Wherefore should you so?
He is not emulous, as Achilles is.
Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.
Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!
I would he were a Trojan! [now,—
Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax
Ulyss. If he were proud,—
Dio. Or covetous of praise,—
Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne,—
Dio. Or strange, or self-affected!
Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure;
Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee suck: [nature
Famed be thy tutor, and thy parts of Thrice-famed, beyond all erudition:
But he that disciplined thy arms to fight,
Let Mars divide eternity in twain,
And give him half: and, for thy vigour,
Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield
To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom, [confines
Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore,
Thy spacious and dilated parts: here's Nestor;
Instructed by the antiquary times,
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise:
But pardon, father Nestor, were your days [temper'd,
As green as Ajax', and your brain so
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Ajax.
Ajax. Shall I call you father?
Nest. Ay, my good son.
Dio. Be ruled by him, Lord Ajax.
Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hart Achilles [general
Keeps thicket. Please it our great
To call together all his state of war:
Fresh kings are come to Troy: tomorrow [stand fast:
We must with all our main of power
And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west, [the best.
And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope
Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep:
Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: do not you follow the young Lord Paris?
Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me. [mean?
Pan. You depend upon him, I
Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the Lord.
Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.
Serv. The Lord be praised!
Pan. You know me, do you not?
Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.
Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the Lord Pandarus.
Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better.
Pan. I do desire it.
Serv. You are in the state of grace.
Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles. [Music within.] What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir: it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to 't, indeed, sir: marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul.

Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complimental assault upon him, for my business seethes.

Serv. Sodden business! there's a stewed phrase indeed!

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.—Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin: and, by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.—Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir,— [very rude.

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth,

Par. Well said, my lord! well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen.—My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me.—But, marry, thus, my lord: my dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen. My Lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himself most affectionately to you—

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen! that's a sweet queen, i' faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My Lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen, my very very sweet queen?

Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night?

Helen. Nay, but, my lord,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen?—My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wide: come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I spy.

Pan. You spy! what do you spy? Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain.

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, prithee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O, Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, i' faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so. [Sings.

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!
For, O, love's bow
Shoots buck and doe:
The shaft confounds,
Not that it wounds,
But tickles still the sore.
These lovers cry Oh! oh! they die!
Yet that which seems the wound to kill
Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!
So dying love lives still:
Oh! oh! awhile, but ha! ha! ha!
Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!
Heigh-ho!

Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers: is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's afield to-day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have armed to-day, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Helen. He hangs the lip at something: you know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped to-day.—You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit. A Retreat sounded.

Par. They're come from field: let us to Priam's hall,
To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you
To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles, [gers touch'd,
With these your white enchanting fin-
Shall more obey than to the edge of steel
Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do more [great Hector
Than all the island kings,—disarm
Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris;
Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty
Gives us more palm in beauty than we have,
Yea, overshines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. PANDARUS' Orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and TROILUS' Boy, meeting.

Pan. How now! where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?

Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. O, here he comes.—How now, how now!

Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy.

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door, [banks
Like a strange soul upon the Stygian
Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon, [those fields
And give me swift transportance to
Where I may wallow in the lily-beds
Proposed for the deserver! O gentle Pandarus, [painted wings,
From Cupid's shoulder pluck his
And fly with me to Cressid!

Pan. Walk here i' the orchard, I'll bring her straight. [Exit.

Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.
The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense: what will it be, [indeed
When that the watery palate tastes
Love's thrice-repured nectar? death, I fear me; [fine,
Swooning destruction; or some joy too
Too subtle-potent, tuned too sharp in sweetness,
For the capacity of my ruder powers:
I fear it much; and I do fear besides
That I shall lose distinction in my joys;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight; you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain: she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow. [Exit.

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom: [pulse;
My heart beats thicker than a feverous
And all my powers do their bestowing lose, [ing
Like vassalage at unawares encounter-
The eye of majesty.

Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? shame's a baby.—Here she is now: swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me.—What, are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways: an you draw backward, we'll put you i' the fills.—Why do you not speak to her?—Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loth you are to offend daylight! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now! a kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds: but she'll bereave you o' the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably'—Come in, come in: I'll go get a fire. [Exit.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me thus!

Cres. Wished, my lord! The gods grant—O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: to fear the worst oft cures the worst.

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster. [neither?

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstruosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? such are not we: praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert before his birth; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth, and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What, blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord: if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too: our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now,
and brings me heart. [and day
Prince Troilus, I have loved you night
For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won: but I was won, my lord,
With the first glance that ever—pardon
me; [tyrant.
If I confess much, you will play the
I love you now; but not, till now, so much
But I might master it:—in faith, I lie;
My thoughts were like unbridled
children, grown [we fools!
Too headstrong for their mother. See,
Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true
to us,
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?
But, though I loved you well, I woo'd
you not; [man,
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;
For in this rapture I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence, [ness draws
Cunning in dumbness, from my weak-
My very soul of counsel! Stop my mouth. [issues thence.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music

Pan. Pretty, i' faith. [don me;

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, par-
'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss: [I done?
I am ashamed; O heavens! what have
For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid?

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:
I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self that itself will leave
To be another's fool. I would be gone:
Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love; [sion
And fell so roundly to a large confes-
To angle for your thoughts: but you are wise; [and love
Or else you love not; for to be wise
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above. [a woman—

Tro. O, that I thought it could be in
As, if it can, I will presume in you—
To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love; [youth,
To keep her constancy in plight and Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind [decays!
That doth renew swifter than blood
Or that persuasion could but thus convince me,
That my integrity and truth to you
Might be affronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;
How were I then uplifted! but, alas!
I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be most right! [to come
True swains in love shall in the world
Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes, [pare,
Full of protest, of oath, and big com-
Want similes, truth tired with iteration,— [moon,
'As true as steel, as plantage to the
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,'—
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited,
'As true as Troilus' shall crown up
the verse
And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!
If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When waterdrops have worn the stones
of Troy,
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing, yet let memory,

From false to false, among false maids in love,
Upbraid my falsehood! when they've said 'as false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son,'
'Yea,' let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
'As false as Cressid.'

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it; I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand; here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name; call them all Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! Say 'amen.'

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber with a bed; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away!
And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you,
The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind
That, through the sight I bear in things from Jove,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incurr'd a traitor's name; exposed myself
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition,
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan? make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you—often have you thanks therefore—
Desired my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied: but this Antenor,
I know, is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence
Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have
What he requests of us. Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal, bring word if Hector will tomorrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to bear.
[Exeunt DIOMEDES and CALCHAS.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their Tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i' the entrance of his tent:
Please it our general pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him;
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me
Why such unplausive eyes are bent on him:
If so, I have derision medicinable,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink.
It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on
A form of strangeness as we pass along;
So do each lord; and either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more
Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.
Achil. What, comes the general to speak with me?
You know my mind; I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.
Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us?
Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?
Achil. No.
Nest. Nothing, my lord.
Agam. The better.
[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and NESTOR.
Achil. Good day, good day.
Men. How do you? how do you?
[Exit.
Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?
Ajax. How now, Patroclus!
Achil. Good-morrow, Ajax.
Ajax. Ha?
Achil. Good-morrow.
Ajax. Ay, and good next day too.
[Exit.
Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?
Patr. They pass by strangely: they were used to bend, [Achilles;
To send their smiles before them to
To come as humbly as they used to creep
To holy altars.
Achil. What, am I poor of late?
'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune, [declined is,
Must fall out with men too: what the
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others [butterflies,
As feel in his own fall: for men, like
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer;
And not a man, for being simply man.
Hath any honour; but honour for those honours [favour,
That are without him, as place, riches,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit:
Which when they fall, as being slippery standers, [too,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery
Do one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:
Fortune and I are friends: I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out [beholding
Something not worth in me such rich
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses;
I'll interrupt his reading.
How now, Ulysses!
Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!
Achil. What are you reading?
Ulyss. A strange fellow here
Writes me: 'That man, how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without or in,
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath, [reflection;
Nor feels not what he owes, but by
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.'
Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face [itself
The bearer knows not, but commends
To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself,
That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself, [opposed
Not going from itself; but eye to eye
Salutes each other with each other's form:
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell'd, and is mirror'd there [strange at all.
Where it may see itself. This is not
Ulyss. I do not strain at the position—
It is familiar—but at the author's drift;
Who in his circumstance expressly proves
That no man is the lord of any thing,
Though in and of him there be much consisting,
Till he communicate his parts to others;
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught [applause
Till he behold them form'd in the
Where they're extended; who, like an arch, reverberates
The voice again; or, like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in this;

And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax. [horse;
Heavens, what a man is there! a very
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,
Most abject in regard, and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem, [to-morrow—
And poor in worth! Now shall we see
An act that very chance doth throw upon him— [men do,
Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall, [eyes!
Whiles others play the idiots in her
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness! [already
To see these Grecian lords! Why, even They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder; [breast,
As if his foot were on brave Hector's
And great Troy shrieking.

Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by me [to me
As misers do by beggars, neither gave Good word nor look: what, are my deeds forgot? [at his back,

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratitudes:
Those scraps are good deeds past,
which are devour'd
As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant way; [row,
For honour travels in a strait so nar-
When one but goes abreast: keep then the path;
For emulation hath a thousand sons
That one by one pursue: if you give way, [right,
Or hedge aside from the direct forth-
Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by
And leave you hindmost:
Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank, [rear,
Lie there for pavement to the abject
O'errun and trampled on: then what they do in present,
Though less than yours in past, must
o'ertop yours;
For time is like a fashionable host
That slightly shakes his parting guest
by the hand, [would fly,
And with his arms outstretch'd, as he
Grasps in the comer: welcome ever smiles, [not virtue seek
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit, [service,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin: [born gauds,
That all, with one consent, praise new-
Though they are made and moulded of things past;
And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.
The present eye praises the present
object: [complete man,
Then marvel not, thou great and
That all the Greeks begin to worship
Ajax; [eye
Since things in motion sooner catch the Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee, [again,
And still it might, and yet it may
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive,
And case thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields
of late, [god themselves,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the
And drave great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroical: [love
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in
With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha! known?

Ulyss. Is that a wonder? [state
The providence that's in a watchful
Knows almost every grain of Plutus'
gold; [deeps;
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive
Keeps place with thought, and almost,
like the gods, [cradles.
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb
There is a mystery, with whom relation
Durst never meddle, in the soul of state;
Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath or pen can give expressure
to:

All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord;
And better would it fit Achilles much
To throw down Hector than Polyxena:
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home, [her trump;
When Fame shall in our islands sound
And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing [win,
'Great Hector's sister did Achilles
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.' [speak;
Farewell, my lord: I as your lover
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break. [Exit.

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I moved you:
A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loathed than an effeminate man [for this;
In time of action. I stand condemn'd
They think my little stomach to the war
And your great love to me restrains you thus: [wanton Cupid
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold, [mane,
And, like a dewdrop from the lion's
Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay; and perhaps receive much honour by him. [stake;

Achil. I see my reputation is at
My fame is shrewdly gored.

Patr. O, then, beware;
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves:
Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus: [him
I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire
To invite the Trojan lords after the combat [woman's longing,
To see us here unarm'd: I have a
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace; [visage,
To talk with him and to behold his
Even to my full of view.—A labour saved!

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector; and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why, 'a stalks up and down like a peacock,—a stride and a stand: ruminates like an hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, an 'twould out:' and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he'll break it himself in vain-glory. He knows not me: I said 'Good-morrow, Ajax;' and he replies 'Thanks, Agamemnon.' What think you of this man, that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering: speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in 's arms. I will put on his presence: let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus: tell him I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent, and to procure safe-conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious six-or-seven-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon, et cetera. Do this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax!

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent,—

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe-conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon?

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to 't?

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other: howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart. [tune, is he?

Achil. Why, but he is not in this

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not; but, I am sure, none, unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on. [letter to him straight.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse; for that's the more capable creature. [fountain stirr'd;

Achil. My mind is troubled like a And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, at one side, ÆNEAS, and Servant with a torch; at the other, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, DIOMEDES, and Others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who's that there?

Dei. 'Tis the Lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person? Had I so good occasion to lie long As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business [pany. Should rob my bed-mate of my com-

Dio. That's my mind too. Good morrow, Lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas,—take his hand,— [wherein Witness the process of your speech, You told how Diomed a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir, During all question of the gentle truce; But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance As heart can think or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces. [long, health; Our bloods are now in calm; and, so But when contention and occasion meet, By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Par. This is the most despiteful gen- The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.

What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you; 'twas to bring this Greek [him, To Calchas' house; and there to render For the enfreed Antenor, the fair Cressid: [please, Let's have your company; or, if you Haste there before us. I constantly do think, [knowledge, Or rather, call my thought a certain My brother Troilus lodges there to-night: [approach, Rouse him and give him note of our With the whole quality wherefore: I fear We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you: Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help; The bitter disposition of the time Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good-morrow, all.
[Exit with Servant.
Par. And tell me, noble Diomed, faith, tell me true, [ship,
Even in the soul of sound good-fellow-
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best,

Dio. Both alike:

And you as well to keep her, that de-

Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman.
Dio. She's bitter to her country: hear me, Paris:
For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Trojan hath been slain: since she could speak, [breath
She hath not given so many good words

But we in silence hold this virtue well,
We'll not commend what we intend not sell.

SCENE II.—The Same. Court of PANDARUS' House.

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold.
Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down;
He shall unbolt the gates.
Tro. Trouble him not;
To bed, to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes, [senses
And give as soft attachment to thy
As infants' empty of all thought!
Cres. Good-morrow, then.
Tro. I prithee now, to bed.
Cres. Are you aweary of me?
Tro. O Cressida! but that the busy day, [ribald crows,
Waked by the lark, hath roused the
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,
I would not from thee.
Cres. Night hath been too brief.
Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays
As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love [than thought.
With wings more momentary-swift
You will catch cold, and curse me.
Cres. Prithee, tarry:
You men will never tarry.
O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark! there's one up.
Pan. [Within.] What, all the doors open here?
Tro. It is your uncle.
Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life!

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. How now, how now! how go maidenheads? Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid?
Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle! [me too.
You bring me to do—and then you flout
Pan. To do what? to do what? let her say what: what have I brought you to do?
Cres. Come, come; beshrew your heart! you'll ne'er be good,
Nor suffer others.
Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!
Cres. Did I not tell you?—Would he were knock'd o' the head?
[Knocking within.
Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see. [chamber:
My lord, come you again into my

You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha, ha!

Cres. Come, you are deceived, I think of no such thing.

[Knocking within.

How earnestly they knock! Pray you, come in:
I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now! what's the matter?

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. Good-morrow, lord, good-morrow.

Pan. Who's there? my Lord Æneas! By my troth, I knew you not: what news with you so early?

Æne. Is not Prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! what should he do here?

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him:
It doth import him much to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know, I'll be sworn: for my own part, I came in late. What should he do here?

Æne. Who! nay, then: come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you are 'ware: you'll be so true to him, to be false to him: do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go.

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. How now! what's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash: there is at hand
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes' hand
The Lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?

Æne. By Priam and the general state of Troy:
They are at hand and ready to effect it.

Tro. How my achievements mock me! [Æneas,
I will go meet them: and, my Lord
We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity.

[Exeunt TROILUS and ÆNEAS.

Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got but lost? The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke 's neck!

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now! what is the matter? who was here?

Pan. Ah, ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord? gone! Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!

Cres. O the gods! what's the matter?

Pan. Prithee, get thee in. Would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death. O, poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus: 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it.

Cres. O you immortal gods!—I will not go.

Pan. Thou must. [got my father;

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have for-
I know no touch of consanguinity;
No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me [divine!
As the sweet Troilus. O you gods
Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood [and death,
If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force,
Do to this body what extremes you can; [love
But the strong base and building of my
Is as the very centre of the earth,
Drawing all things to it. I'll go in and weep,—

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks,
Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart
With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before PANDARUS' House.

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, ÆNEAS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour prefix'd
Of her delivery to this valiant Greek
Comes fast upon. Good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the lady what she is to do,
And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house;
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently:
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there offering to it his own heart. [Exit.

Par. I know what 'tis to love;
And would, as I shall pity, I could help!
Please you walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in PANDARUS' House.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it: how can I moderate it?
If I could temporize with my affection,
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief:
My love admits no qualifying dross;
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes. Ah, sweet ducks!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus! [Embracing him.

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. 'O heart,' as the goodly saying is,

'O heart, heavy heart,
Why sigh'st thou without breaking?'

where he answers again,

'Because thou canst not ease thy smart
By friendship nor by speaking.'

There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse: we see it, we see it. How now, lambs!

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity, [fancy,
That the blest gods—as angry with my
More bright in zeal than the devotion which [thee from me.
Cold lips blow to their deities,—take

Cres. Have the gods envy? [a case.

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain

Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance [by Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows [breath:
Even in the birth of our own labouring
We two, that with so many thousand sighs [ourselves
Did buy each other, must poorly sell
With the rude brevity and discharge of one. [haste
Injurious Time now with a robber's
Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how:
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to them,
He fumbles up into a loose adieu;
And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Æne. [Within.] My lord, is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call'd: some say the Genius so [must die.—
Cries 'Come!' to him that instantly
Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root! [Exit.

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!
When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love: be thou but true of heart,—

Cres. I true! how now! what wicked deem is this? [kindly,

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation
For it is parting from us: [thee;
I speak not 'be thou true,' as fearing
For I will throw my glove to Death himself, [heart:
That there's no maculation in thy
But 'be thou true,' say I, to fashion in
My sequent protestation; be thou true,
And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be exposed, my lord, to dangers
As infinite as imminent! but I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you? [tinels,

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sen-
To give thee nightly visitation.
But yet, be true. [again!

Cres. O heavens! 'be true' again!

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love:
The Grecian youths are full of quality;
They're loving, well composed with gifts of nature,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy—
And flowing o'er with arts and exercise:
How novelty may move, and parts with person,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy—
Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin—
Makes me afeard.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain, then! [tion
In this I do not call your faith in ques-

Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk, [all,
Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues

That tempts most cunningly: but be

Tro. No. [will not:
But something may be done that we
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves, [powers,
When we will tempt the frailty of our
Presuming on their changeful potency.

Æne. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither; [you.
And bring Æneas and the Grecian with

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I? alas, it is my vice, my fault: [opinion,
While others fish with craft for great
I with great truth catch mere simplicity;
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns, [mine bare.
With truth and plainness I do wear
Fear not my truth: the moral of my wit [reach of it.
Is 'plain and true;' there's all the

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTENOR, DEIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! here is the lady
Which for Antenor we deliver you:
At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand; [is.
And by the way possess thee what she
Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek, [sword,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid,
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects: [cheek,
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly. [courteously,

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me
To shame the zeal of my petition to thee [Greece,
In praising her: I tell thee, lord of
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises [servant.
As thou unworthy to be call'd her
I charge thee use her well, even for my charge; [not,
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat. [Troilus:

Dio. O, be not moved, Prince
Let me be privileged by my place and message
To be a speaker free; when I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust: and know you, lord, [worth
I'll nothing do on charge: to her own

She shall be prized; but that you say
'be 't so,' ['no!'
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour,
Tro. Come, to the port. I tell thee,
Diomed, [thy head.
This brave shall oft make thee to hide
Lady, give me your hand; and, as we walk, [talk.
To our own selves bend we our needful
[Exeunt TROILUS, CRESSIDA, and DIOMEDES. A Trumpet sounds.
Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.
Æne. How have we spent this morning! [remiss,
The prince must think me tardy and
That swore to ride before him to the field.
Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault: come, come,
to field with him.
Dei. Let us make ready straight.
Æne. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity, [heels:
Let us address to tend on Hector's
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Grecian Camp. Lists set out.

Enter AJAX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, and Others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,
Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to
Troy, [air
Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled
May pierce the head of the great combatant
And hale him hither.
Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse. [brazen pipe:
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy
Blow, villain, till thy sphered bias cheek
Outswell the colic of puff'd Aquilon:
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood;
Thou blow'st for Hector.
[Trumpet sounds.
Ulyss. No trumpet answers.
Achil. 'Tis but early days.
Agam. Is not yon Diomed, with
Calchas' daughter?
Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA.

Agam. Is this the Lady Cressid?
Dio. Even she.
Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.
Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.
Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular; [eral.
'Twere better she were kiss'd in gen-
Nest. And very courtly counsel:
I'll begin.
So much for Nestor.
Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady:
Achilles bids you welcome. [ing once.
Men. I had good argument for kiss-
Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now;
For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment,
And parted thus you and your argument. [all our scorns!
Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of
For which we lose our heads to gild his horns. [this mine:
Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss;
Patroclus kisses you.
Men. O, this is trim!
Patr. Paris and I kiss evermore for him. [by your leave.
Men. I'll have my kiss, sir.—Lady,
Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive?
Patr. Both take and give.
Cres. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give;
Therefore no kiss.
Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one. [or give none.
Cres. You're an odd man; give even.
Men. An odd man, lady! every man
is odd. [know, 'tis true,
Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you
That you are odd, and he is even with you.
Men. You fillip me o' the head.
Cres. No, I'll be sworn.
Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.
May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?
Cres. You may.
Ulyss. I do desire it.
Cres. Why, beg then

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss,
When Helen is a maid again, and his.
Cres. I am your debtor; claim it when 'tis due.— [kiss of you.
Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a
Dio. Lady, a word: I'll bring you to your father.
[Exit with CRESSIDA.
Nest. A woman of quick sense.
Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her!
There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip, [spirits look out
Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton
At every joint and motive of her body.
O, these encounterers, so glib of tongue,
That give a coasting welcome ere it comes, [thoughts
And wide unclasp the tables of their
To every ticklish reader! set them down
For sluttish spoils of opportunity
And daughters of the game.
[Trumpet within.
All. The Trojans' trumpet.
Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Flourish. Enter HECTOR, armed; ÆNEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all the state of Greece! what shall be done
To him that victory commands? or do you purpose [knights
A victor shall be known? will you the
Shall to the edge of all extremity
Pursue each other; or shall they be divided
By any voice or order of the field?
Hector bade ask. [have it?
Agam. Which way would Hector
Æne. He cares not; he'll obey conditions. [securely done,
Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but
A little proudly, and great deal misprizing
The knight opposed.
Æne. If not Achilles, sir,
What is your name?
Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.
Æne. Therefore Achilles: but, whate'er, know this:
In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well, [courtesy.
And that which looks like pride is
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood: [home;
In love whereof, half Hector stays at
Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek [half Greek.
This blended knight, half Trojan and
Achil. A maiden battle then? O, I perceive you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle knight, [Æneas
Stand by our Ajax: as you and Lord
Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breath: the combatants being kin [strokes begin.
Half stints their strife before their [AJAX and HECTOR enter the lists.
Ulyss. They are opposed already.
Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?
Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight; [word;
Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of
Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue; [soon calm'd:
Not soon provoked, nor, being provoked,
His heart and hand both open and both free; [he shows;
For what he has he gives, what thinks
Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty, [breath;
Nor dignifies an impair thought with
Many as Hector, but more dangerous;
For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes [action,
To tender objects; but he, in heat of
Is more vindicative than jealous love:
They call him Troilus, and on him erect
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.
Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth [soul
Even to his inches, and with private
Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me.
[Alarm. HECTOR and AJAX fight.
Agam. They are in action.
Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!
Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st;
Awake thee! [there, Ajax!
Agam. His blows are well disposed:
Dio. You must no more.
[Trumpets cease.

Æne. Princes, enough, so please you.
Ajax. I am not warm yet; let us fight again.
Dio. As Hector pleases.
Hect. Why, then will I no more:
Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
A cousin-german to great Priam's seed;
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation 'twixt us twain:
Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so [Grecian all,
That thou couldst say 'This hand is
And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg [mother's blood
All Greek, and this all Troy; my
Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister [potent,
Bounds in my father's;' by Jove multi-
Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member
Wherein my sword had not impressure made
Of our rank feud; but the just gods gainsay [mother,
That any drop thou borrow'st from thy
My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword [Ajax:
Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee,
By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms; [thus:
Hector would have them fall upon him
Cousin, all honour to thee!
Ajax. I thank thee, Hector:
Thou art too gentle and too free a man:
I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death.
Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,
On whose bright crest Fame with her loudest Oyes [himself
Cries 'This is he,' could promise to
A thought of added honour torn from Hector. [both the sides,
Æne. There is expectance here from
What further you will do.
Hect. We'll answer it;
The issue is embracement: Ajax, farewell. [success,—
Ajax. If I might in entreaties find
As seld I have the chance,—I would desire
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.
Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish; and great Achilles [Hector.
Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me;
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part;
Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cousin; [knights.
I will go eat with thee, and see your
Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here. [name by name;
Hect. The worthiest of them tell me
But for Achilles, my own searching eyes [size.
Shall find him by his large and portly
Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy;
But that's no welcome: understand more clear,
What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks
And formless ruin of oblivion;
But in this extant moment, faith and troth, [drawing,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome. [Agamemnon.
Hect. I thank thee, most imperious
Agam. [To TROILUS.] My well-famed lord of Troy, no less to you. [brother's greeting:
Men. Let me confirm my princely
You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.
Hect. Who must we answer?
Æne. The noble Menelaus.
Hect. O, you, my lord! by Mars his gauntlet, thanks! [oath;
Mock not, that I affect the untraded
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove: [her to you.
She 's well, but bade me not commend
Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.
Hect. O, pardon; I offend.
Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youth; and I have seen thee, [steed,
As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian
Despising many forfeits and subduements, [sword i' the air,
When thou hast hung thy advanced
Not letting it decline on the declined;
That I have said to some my standers-by,

'Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!'
And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Æne. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time:
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention,
As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha! thee to-morrow:
By this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow:
Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time—

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands
When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses, well.
Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue;
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls, that pertly front your town,
Yon towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet; and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood, the end crowns all;
And that old common arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome:
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou! Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
I have with exact view perused thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles?

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief: I will the second time, as I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O, like a book of sport thou 'lt read me o'er;
But there's more in me than thou understandst.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body
Shall I destroy him? whether there, or there, or there?
That I may give the local wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach whereout
Hector's great spirit flew: answer me, heavens!

Hect. It would discredit the blest gods, proud man,
To answer such a question stand again:
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly
As to prenominate in nice conjecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee, yea.

Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;
For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er.—
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag;
His insolence draws folly from my lips;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin:
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone
Till accident or purpose bring you to 't:
You may have every day enough of Hector, if you have stomach: the general state, I fear,

Can scarce entreat you to be odd with

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in
We have had pelting wars since you refused
The Grecians' cause.
Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death;
To-night all friends.
Hect. Thy hand upon that match.
Agam. First, all you peers of Greece,
go to my tent;
There in the full convive we: afterwards, [shall
As Hector's leisure and your bounties
Concur together, severally entreat him.
Beat loud the tabourines, let the trum-
pets blow, [know.
That this great soldier may his welcome

princely Troilus: [night;
There Diomed doth feast with him to-
Who neither looks upon the heaven nor

After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring me thither?

But still sweet love is food for fortune's

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Grecian Camp. Before ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greek-ish wine to-night, [morrow.
Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.
Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy!
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?
Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.
Achil. From whence, fragment?
Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.
Patr. Who keeps the tent now?
Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.
Patr. Well said, Adversity! and what need these tricks?
Ther. Prithee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.
Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that?
Ther. Why, his masculine whore.
Now, the rotten diseases of the south,
the guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs,
loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies,
cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, limekilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries!
Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?
Ther. Do I curse thee?
Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt;
you whoreson indistinguishable cur,
no.
Ther. No! why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleave silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such waterflies, dim-inutives of nature!
Patr. Out, gall!
Ther. Finch-egg!
Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am
thwarted quite [battle.
From my great purpose in to-morrow's
Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba,
A token from her daughter, my fair
love,
Both taxing me and gaging me to keep An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it: [or stay;
Fall Greeks; fail fame; honour or go
My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.

Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent: [spent.
This night in banqueting must all be Away, Patroclus!

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Ther. With too much blood and too little brain, these two may run mad; but, if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue and oblique memorial of cuckolds; a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form but that he is, should wit larded with malice and malice forced with wit turn him to? To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ox, were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus!—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hey-day! spirits and fires!

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.
Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;
There, where we see the lights.
Hect. I trouble you.
Ajax. No, not a whit. [you.
Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide

Re-enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.
Agam. So now, fair Prince of Troy, I bid good night.
Ajax commands the guard to tend on you. [Greeks' general.
Hect. Thanks and good night to the Men. Good night, my lord.
Hect. Good night, sweet Lord Menelaus.
Ther. Sweet draught: 'sweet,' quoth 'a! sweet sink, sweet sewer.
Achil. Good night and welcome, both at once, to those
That go or tarry.
Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt AGAM. and MENELAUS.

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Diomed,
Keep Hector company an hour or two.
Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business, [great Hector.
The tide whereof is now.—Good night,
Hect. Give me your hand.
Ulyss. [Aside to TROILUS.] Follow his torch; he goes [pany.
To Calchas' tent; I'll keep you com-
Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.
Hect. And so, good night.

[Exit DIOMEDES; ULYSSES and TROILUS following.

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt ACHILLES, HECTOR, AJAX, and NESTOR.

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabbler the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it; it is prodigious, there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector than not to dog him: they say he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent: I'll after. Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets! [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Before CALCHAS' Tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho? speak.
Cal. [Within.] Who calls?
Dio. Diomed. Calchas, I think. Where's your daughter?
Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance; after them, THERSITES.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.
Dio. How now, my charge!
Cres. Now, my sweet guardian! [Whispers] Hark, a word with you.
Tro. Yea, so familiar!

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Cres. Remember! yes.

Dio. Nay, but do, then;
And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember?

Ulyss. List. [no more to folly.

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what,—

Dio. Foh, foh! come, tell a pin: you are forsworn.

Cres. In faith, I cannot: what would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick,—to be secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me? [mine oath;

Cres. I prithee, do not hold me to Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Hold, patience!

Ulyss. How now, Trojan!

Cres. Diomed,— [fool no more.

Dio. No, no, good night: I'll be your

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark! one word in your ear.

Tro. O plague and madness!

Ulyss. You are moved, prince; let us depart, I pray you,
Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself [gerous;
To wrathful terms: this place is dan-
The time right deadly; I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you!

Ulyss. Nay, good my lord, go off:
You flow to great distraction; come, my lord.

Tro. I prithee, stay.

Ulyss. You have not patience; come.

Tro. I pray you, stay; by hell and all hell's torments,
I will not speak a word!

Dio. And so, good night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.

Tro. Doth that grieve thee?
O wither'd truth!

Ulyss. Why, how now, lord!

Tro. By Jove,
I will be patient.

Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!

Dio. Foh, foh! adieu; you palter.

Cres. In faith, I do not: come hither once again.

Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something: will you go?
You will break out.

Tro. She strokes his cheek!

Ulyss. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a word: [offences
There is between my will and all
A guard of patience: stay a little while.

Dio. But will you, then?

Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me else. [surety of it.

Dio. Give me some token for the Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.

Ulyss. You have sworn patience.

Tro. Fear me not, sweet lord;
I will not be myself, nor have cognition
Of what I feel: I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now! [sleeve.

Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this

Tro. O beauty! where's thy faith?

Ulyss. My lord,— [I will.

Tro. I will be patient; outwardly

Cres. You look upon that sleeve; behold it well. [me again.
He loved me—O false wench!—Give't

Dio. Whose was't? [again.

Cres. It is no matter, now I have't
I will not meet with you to-morrow night:
I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more.

Ther. Now she sharpens: well said, whetstone!

Dio. I shall have it.

Cres. What, this?

Dio. Ay, that.

Cres. O, all you gods! O pretty, pretty pledge! [bed
Thy master now lies thinking in his

He that takes that doth take my heart

Dio. I had your heart before; this follows it.

Tro. I did swear patience.
Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith, you shall not;
I'll give you something else.
Dio. I will have this: whose was it?
Cres. 'Tis no matter.
Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.
Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will.
But, now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yond, [whose.
And by herself, I will not tell you
Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm, [challenge it.
And grieve his spirit that dares not

It should be challenged.
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past;—and yet it is not;
I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why then, farewell;
Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cres. You shall not go: one cannot speak a word,
But it straight starts you.
Dio. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I, by Pluto; but that that likes not you
Pleases me best.
Dio. What, shall I come? the hour?
Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!—do come:—I shall be plagued.
Dio. Farewell till then.
Cres. Good night; I prithee, come. [Exit DIOMEDES.

Tro. It is.
Ulyss. Why stay we, then?
Tro. To make a recordation to my soul
Of every syllable that here was spoke.
But if I tell how these two did co-act,
Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
An esperance so obstinately strong,

Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.
Tro. She was not, sure.
Ulyss. Most sure she was.
Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.
Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.
Tro. Let it not be believed for womanhood! [advantage

Ther. Will 'a swagger himself out
Tro. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida:
If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimonies,
If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This is not she. O madness of discourse, [itself!

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be
In characters as red as Mars his heart
Inflamed with Venus: never did young man fancy
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed:
That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm: [skill,
Were it a casque composed by Vulcan's
My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false! [name,
Let all untruths stand by thy stained
And they'll seem glorious.
Ulyss. O, contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord:
Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home,
Tro. Have with you, prince.—My courteous lord, adieu.
Farewell, revolted fair! and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!
Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.
Tro. Accept distracted thanks.
[Exeunt TROILUS, ÆNEAS, and ULYSSES.
Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore; the parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery! still wars and lechery! nothing else holds fashion. A burning devil take them! [Exit.

SCENE III.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,
To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.
Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in:
By all the everlasting gods, I'll go!
And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.
Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?
And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent. [tion;
Consort with me in loud and dear peti-
Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd [night
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.
Cas. O, 'tis true.
Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound!
Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.
Hect. Be gone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.
Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows: [horr'd
They are polluted offerings, more abThan spotted livers in the sacrifice.
And. O, be persuaded! do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.
Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow; [hold:
But vows to every purpose must not
Unarm, sweet Hector.
Hect. Hold you still, I say;

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate: [dear man
Life every man holds dear; but the
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.

Enter TROILUS.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight to-day?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit CASSANDRA.

Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth;
I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war. [brave boy,
Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not,
I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy. [mercy on you,

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of
Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecians fall, [sword,
Even in the fan and wind of your fair
You bid them rise and live.

Hect. O, 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now! how now!

Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers; [on,
And when we have our armours buckled
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords, [from ruth!
Spur them to ruthful work, rein them

Hect. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars [tire;
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my re-
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears; [sword drawn,
Nor you, my brother, with your true
Opposed to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast: [stay,
He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back:
Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had visions;
Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Æneas is afield;
And I do stand engaged to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir, [leave
Let me not shame respect; but give me
To take that course by your consent and voice, [Priam.
Which you do here forbid me, royal

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him!

And. Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit ANDROMACHE.

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O, farewell, dear Hector!
Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye turns pale!
Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents! [cries out!
Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba
How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth! [ment,
Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amaze-
Like witless antics, one another meet,
And all cry 'Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!'

Tro. Away! away!—

Cas. Farewell: yet, soft! Hector, I take my leave:
Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. [Exit.

Hect. You are amazed, my liege, at her exclaim:
Go in and cheer the town: we'll forth and fight, [them at night.
Do deeds worth praise and tell you

Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally PRIAM and HECTOR. Alarums.

Tro. They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Tro. What now? [poor girl.

Pan. Here's a letter come from yond

Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson tisick, a whoreson rascally tisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days: and I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on 't. What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;
The effect doth operate another way.

[Tearing the letter.

Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together. [feeds,
My love with words and errors still she
But edifies another with her deeds.

[Exeunt severally.

SCENE IV.—The Field between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter THERSITES.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, of a sleeveless errand. O' the other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals, that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, is not proved worth a blackberry. They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here comes sleeve, and t'other.

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for shouldst thou take the river Styx,
I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire:
I do not fly; but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—Now for thy whore, Trojan!—Now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?
Art thou of blood and honour?

Ther. No, no: I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee. Live.

[Exit.

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck for frighting me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle: yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse; [Cressid:
Present the fair steed to my Lady
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty; [Trojan,
Tell her I have chastised the amorous
And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord.

[Exit.

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas [gareion
Hath beat down Menon: bastard Mar-
Hath Doreus prisoner,
And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,
Upon the pashed corses of the kings
Epistrophus and Cedius: Polyxenes is slain;
Amphimachus and Thoas deadly hurt;
Patroclus ta'en or slain; and Palamedes [Sagittary
Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful
Appals our numbers: haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles, [shame.
And bid the snail-paced Ajax arm for
There is a thousand Hectors in the field: [horse,
Now here he fights on Galathe his
And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot, [sculls
And there they fly or die, like scaled
Before the belching whale; then is he yonder, [his edge,
And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for Fall down before him, like the mower's swath: [and takes,
Here, there, and every where, he leaves
Dexterity so obeying appetite.
That what he will he does; and does so much
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, princes! great Achilles [vengeance:
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing
Patroclus' wounds have roused his drowsy blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him, [friend,
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it, [day
Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-
Mad and fantastic execution;
Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force and forceless care,
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.
Dio. Ay, there, there.
Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face;
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry:
Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?
Ajax. What wouldst thou?
Dio. I would correct him.
Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office
Ere that correction.—Troilus, I say, what, Troilus!

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O traitor Diomed! turn thy false face, thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse!
Dio. Ha, art thou there?
Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed.
Dio. He is my prize; I will not look upon.
Tro. Come both, you cogging Greeks; have at you both! [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Now do I see thee; ha! have at thee, Hector!
Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.
Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.
Be happy that my arms are out of use:
My rest and negligence befriend thee now,

But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
Till when, go seek thy fortune.
[Exit.

Hect. Fare thee well:
I would have been much more a fresher man,
Had I expected thee.

Re-enter TROILUS.

How now, my brother!

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas: shall it be? [heaven,
No, by the flame of yonder glorious
He shall not carry him; I'll be ta'en too, [I say!
Or bring him off. Fate, hear me what
I reck not though I end my life to-day.
[Exit.

Enter One in sumptuous armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark. [well;
No? wilt thou not? I like thy armour
I'll frush it, and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, beast, abide?
Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons; [I wheel:
Mark what I say. Attend me where
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath: [found,
And when I have the bloody Hector
Empale him with your weapons round about;
In fellest manner execute your arms.
Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye:
It is decreed Hector the great must die
[Exeunt.

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting: then THERSITES.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it. Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo! now my double-henned sparrow! 'loo, Paris, 'loo! The bull has the game; 'ware horns, ho!
[Exeunt PARIS and MENELAUS.

Enter MARGARELON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's.

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment: farewell, bastard.
[Exit.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward!
[Exit.

SCENE VIII.—Another part of the Field.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrefied core, so fair without, [life.
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy

Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood

[A Retreat sounded.
Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth,
And, stickler-like, the armies separates.

My half-supp'd sword, that frankly would have fed, [to bed.
Pleased with this dainty bit, thus goes

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail;
Along the field I will the Trojan trail.

SCENE IX.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and Others, marching. Shouts within.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?
Nest. Peace, drums!
[Voices within: 'Achilles! Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!'
Dio. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles.
Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be;
Great Hector was as good a man as he.
Agam. March patiently along: let one be sent
To pray Achilles see us at our tent.
If in his death the gods have us befriended, [are ended.
Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars

Scare Troy out of itself. But march
Hector is dead; there is no more to say.
Stay yet. You vile abominable tents,
Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,
Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
I'll through and through you! and, thou great-sized coward,
No space of earth shall sunder our two hates: [still,
I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience

As TROILUS is going out, enter from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!
Tro. Hence, broker-lackey! ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name! [Exit.
Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones!
O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitor and bawds, how earnestly are you set a-work, and how ill requited! why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it? Let me see:

Brethren, and sisters, of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my will shall here be made:
It should be now, but that my fear is this,
Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss:
Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases;
And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

First Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

First Cit. You are all resolved rather to die than to famish?

All. Resolved, resolved.

First Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know't, we know't.

First Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

All. No more talking on't; let it be done: away, away!

Sec. Cit. One word, good citizens.

First Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us. If they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

Sec. Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

All. Against him first: he's a very dog to the commonalty.

Sec. Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

First Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

Sec. Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

First Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft-conscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

Sec. Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous.

First Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations; he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o' the city is risen: why stay we prating here? to the Capitol!

All. Come, come.

First Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

Sec. Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

First Cit. He's one honest enough: would all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? where go you
With bats and clubs? the matter? speak, I pray you.

First Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate,; they have had inkling, this fortnight, what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths: they shall know we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
Will you undo yourselves?

First Cit. We cannot, sir, we are undone already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care [wants,
Have the patricians of you. For your
Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well [lift them
Strike at the heaven with your staves as Against the Roman state; whose course will on [sand curbs
The way it takes, cracking ten thou-
Of more strong link asunder than can ever [dearth,
Appear in your impediment. For the
The gods, not the patricians, make it, and [help. Alack,
Your knees to them, not arms, must
You are transported by calamity
Thither where more attends you; and you slander [like fathers,
The helms o' the state, who care for you
When you curse them as enemies.

First. Cit. Care for us! True, indeed! They ne'er cared for us yet suffer us: to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must
Confess yourselves wondrous malicious,
Or be accused of folly. I shall tell you
A pretty tale: it may be you have heard it; [venture
But, since it serves my purpose, I will
To stale 't a little more.

First Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir: yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale: but, an't please you, deliver. [body's members

Men. There was a time when all the
Rebell'd against the belly; thus accused it:
That only like a gulf it did remain
I' the midst o' the body, idle and inactive, [ing
Still cupboarding the viand, never bear-
Like labour with the rest; where the other instruments [feel,
Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk,
And, mutually participate, did minister
Unto the appetite and affection common [swered,—
Of the whole body. The belly an-

First Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

Men. Sir, I shall tell you. With a kind of smile, [even thus,—
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but
For, look you, I may make the belly smile
As well as speak—it tauntingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts [fitly
That envied his receipt; even so most
As you malign our senators for that
They are not such as you.

First Cit. Your belly's answer? What! [eye,
The kingly-crowned head, the vigilant
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier, [peter,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trum-
With other muniments and petty helps
In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then?—
'Fore me, this fellow speaks!—What then? what then?

First Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the sink o' the body,—

Men. Well, what then?

First Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,
What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you;
If you'll bestow a small—of what you have little— [answer.
Patience awhile, you'll hear the belly's

First Cit. You're long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:

'True is it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he,
'That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon; and fit it is,
Because I am the storehouse and the shop [member,
Of the whole body: but, if you do re-
I send it through the rivers of your blood, [seat o' the brain;
Even to the court, the heart, to the
And, through the cranks and offices of man, [veins
The strongest nerves and small inferior
From me receive that natural competency [all at once,
Whereby they live: and though that
You, my good friends,'—this says the belly, mark me,—

First Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. 'Though all at once cannot
See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all, [say you to 't?
And leave me but the bran.' What

First Cit. It was an answer: how apply you this? [good belly,

Men. The senators of Rome are this
And you the mutinous members: for examine [things rightly
Their counsels and their cares, digest
Touching the weal o' the common, you shall find
No public benefit which you receive
But it proceeds or comes from them to you [do you think,
And no way from yourselves.—What
You, the great toe of this assembly?

First Cit. I the great toe! Why the great toe?

Men. For that, being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest, [foremost:
Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st
Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run,
Lead'st first to win some vantage.
But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs: [battle;
Rome and her rats are at the point of
The one side must have bale.

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

Hail, noble Marcius!

Mar. Thanks. What's the matter, you dissentious rogues,
That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs?

First Cit. We have ever your good word. [to thee will flatter

Mar. He that will give good words
Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs,
That like nor peace nor war? the one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you, [you hares;
Where he should find you lions, find
Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is [dues him,
To make him worthy whose offence sub-
And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness [are Deserves your hate; and your affections
A sick man's appetite, who desires most that [that depends
Which would increase his evil. He
Upon your favours swims with fins of lead,
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trust ye?
With every minute you do change a mind, [hate,
And call him noble that was now your
Him vile that was your garland. What's the matter,
That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else [their seeking?
Would feed on one another?—What's

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof, they say,
The city is well stored.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say!
They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know [to rise,
What's done i' the Capitol; who's like
Who thrives and who declines; side factions, and give out
Conjectural marriages; making parties strong, [liking
And feebling such as stand not in their
Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough!
Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry [slaves, as high
With thousands of these quarter'd

As I could pick my lance.
Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded; [cretion,
For though abundantly they lack dis-
Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you,
What says the other troop?
Mar. They are dissolved: hang 'em!
They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs:
That hunger broke stone walls; that dogs must eat;
That meat was made for mouths; that the gods sent not [shreds
Corn for the rich men only: with these
They vented their complainings; which being answer'd, [one,—
And a petition granted them, a strange
To break the heart of generosity,
And made bold power look pale,—they threw their caps [o' the moon,
As they would hang them on the horns
Shouting their emulation.
Men. What is granted them?
Mar. Five tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms, [Brutus,
Of their own choice: one's Junius
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—
'Sdeath! [the city,
The rabble should have first unroof'd
Ere so prevail'd with me: it will in time [greater themes
Win upon power, and throw forth
For insurrection's arguing.
Men. This is strange.
Mar. Go, get you home, you fragments!

Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius?
Mar. Here what's the matter?
Mess. The news is, sir, the Volsces are in arms.
Mar. I am glad on 't: then we shall ha' means to vent [elders.
Our musty superfluity. See, our best

Enter COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators; JUNIUS BRUTUS, and SICINIUS VELUTUS.

First Sen. Marcius, 'tis true that you have lately told us;
The Volsces are in arms.
Mar. They have a leader,
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to 't.
I sin in envying his nobility;
And were I any thing but what I am,
I would wish me only he.
Com. You have fought together.
Mar. Were half to half the world by the ears, and he Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make
Only my wars with him: he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.
First Sen. Then, worthy Marcius,
Attend upon Cominius to these wars.
Com. It is your former promise.
Mar. Sir, it is;
And I am constant.—Titus Lartius, thou [face.
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus'
What, art thou stiff? stand'st out?
Tit. No, Caius Marcius;
I'll lean upon one crutch, and fight with t'other,
Ere stay behind this business.
Men. O, true-bred!
First Sen. Your company to the Capitol; where, I know,
Our greatest friends attend us.
Tit. [To COM.] Lead you on.
[To MAR.] Follow Cominius; we must follow you;
Right worthy you priority.
Com. Noble Marcius!
First Sen. [To the Citizens.] Hence! To your homes! be gone.
Mar. Nay, let them follow:
The Volsces have much corn; take these rats thither [mutineers,
To gnaw their garners.—Worshipful
Your valour puts well forth: pray, follow.

[Citizens steal away. Exeunt all but SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius?
Bru. He has no equal.
Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people,—
Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes?
Sic. Nay, but his taunts.
Bru. Being moved, he will not spare to gird the gods.
Sic. Bemock the modest moon.
Bru. The present wars devour him: he is grown
Too proud to be so valiant.
Sic. Such a nature,
Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow [wonder
Which he treads on at noon: but I do
His insolence can brook to be commanded
Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims,
In whom already he's well graced, can not [by Better be held nor more attain'd than
A place below the first: for what miscarries [perform
Shall be the general's fault, though he
To the utmost of a man; and giddy censure
Will then cry out of Marcius 'O, if he
Had borne the business!'
Sic. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.
Bru. Come:
Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcius, [all his faults
Though Marcius earn'd them not; and
To Marcius shall be honours, though indeed
In aught he merit not.
Sic. Let's hence, and hear
How the dispatch is made; and in what fashion,
More than his singularity, he goes
Upon this present action.
Bru. Let's along.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Corioli. The Senate-House.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, and certain Senators.

First Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, [counsels,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our
And know how we proceed.
Auf. Is it not yours?
What ever have been thought on in this state, [Rome
That could be brought to bodily act ere
Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone [words: I think
Since I heard thence: these are the
I have the letter here; yes, here it is.
[Reads] 'They have press'd a power, but it is not known [is great;
Whether for east or west: the dearth
The people mutinous; and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcius your old enemy,
Who is of Rome worse hated than of you, [Roman,
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant
These three lead on this preparation
Whither 'tis bent: most likely 'tis for you:
Consider of it.'
First Sen. Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.
Auf. Nor did you think it folly
To keep your great pretences veil'd till when
They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,
It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery [which was
We shall be shorten'd in our aim;
To take in many towns ere, almost, Rome
Should know we were afoot.
Sec. Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your bands:
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before's, for the remove [you'll find
Bring up your army; but, I think,
They've not prepared for us.
Auf. O, doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more,
Some parcels of their power are forth already, [honours.
And only hitherward. I leave your
If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us, we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.
All. The gods assist you!
Auf. And keep your honours safe!
First Sen. Farewell.
Sec. Sen. Farewell.
All. Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Rome. A Room in MARCIUS' House.

Enter VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA: they sit down on two low stools, and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: if my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when, for a day of kings' entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I, considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir, was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himsef a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam: how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely: had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not.
Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum; [hair;
See him pluck Aufidius down by the
As children from a bear, the Volsces shunning him:
Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus: [in fear,
'Come on, you cowards! you were got
Though you were born in Rome:' his bloody brow [he goes;
With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth
Like to a harvest-man that's task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter, no blood! [comes a man

Vol. Away, you fool! it more be-
Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hecuba, [not lovelier
When she did suckle Hector, look'd
Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood [Valeria
At Grecian swords, contemning.—Tell
We are fit to bid her welcome.

[Exit Gentlewoman.

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and her Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his schoolmaster.

Val. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear, 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together; has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; catched it again: or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it; O, I warrant, how he mammocked it!

Vol. One on's father's moods.

Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors!

Vol. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably; come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll you tell excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is: the Volsces have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady: as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In troth, I think she would.—Fare you well, then.—Come, good sweet lady.—Prithee, Virgilia, turn thy solemness out o' door, and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed, I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well then, farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Officers, and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news: a wager they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy? [not spoke as yet.

Mess. They lie in view; but have

Lart. So, the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell nor give him: lend you him I will

For half a hundred years.—Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work; [march from hence,

That we with smoking swords may

To help our fielded friends! Come, blow thy blast.

They sound a Parley. Enter, on the Walls, some Senators, and Others.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

First Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he,

That's lesser than a little. [Alarums afar off.] Hark, our drums

Are bringing forth our youth! we'll break our walls, [our gates,

Rather than they shall pound us up: Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes;

They'll open of themselves. [Other Alarums.] Hark you, far off!

There is Aufidius; list, what work he makes

Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O, they are at it!

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho!

The Volsces enter and pass over the Stage.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city. [and fight

Now put your shields before your hearts, With hearts more proof than shields.—Advance, brave Titus:

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,

Which makes me sweat with wrath.—Come on, my fellows:

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsce,

And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum. The Romans are beaten back to their Trenches. Re-enter MARCIUS.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you,

You shames of Rome! you herd of—Boils and plagues

Plaster you o'er; that you may be abhorr'd [another

Further than seen, and one infect

Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese, [you run

That bear the shapes of men, how have

From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell! [pale
All hurt behind; backs red, and faces
With flight and agued fear! Mend, and charge home, [foe,
Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the
And make my wars on you; look to't: come on; [their wives,
If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to
As they us to our trenches followed.

Another Alarum. The Volsces and Romans re-enter, and the Fight is renewed. The Volsces retire into Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the Gates.

So, now the gates are ope; now prove good seconds; [them,
'Tis for the followers fortune widens
Not for the fliers: mark me, and do the like. [He enters the Gates.

First Sol. Fool-hardiness; not I.

Sec. Sol. Nor I.

[MARCIUS is shut in.

First Sol. See, they have shut him in.

All. To the pot, I warrant him.

Re-enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcius?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless.

First Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels, [sudden,
With them he enters; who, upon the
Clapp'd to their gates: he is himself alone,
To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow!
Who sensibly outdares his senseless sword, [art left, Marcius:
And, when it bows, stands up. Thou
A carbuncle entire, a big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier [terrible
Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and
Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks and [sounds,
The thunder-like percussion of thy
Thou madest thine enemies shake, as if the world
Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

First Sol. Look, sir.

Lart. O, 'tis Marcius!
Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.

[They fight, and all enter the City.

SCENE V.—Within Corioli. A Street.

Enter certain Romans, with Spoils.

First Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

Sec. Rom. And I this.

Third Rom. A murrain on't! I took this for silver.

[Alarum continues still afar off.

Enter MARCIUS, and TITUS LARTIUS, with a Trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers that do prize their hours [spoons,
At a crack'd drachma! Cushions, leaden
Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would [base slaves,
Bury with those that wore them, these
Ere yet the fight be done, pack up: down with them! [To him!
And hark, what noise the general makes!
There is the man of my soul's hate Aufidius, [Titus, take Piercing our Romans: then, valiant
Convenient numbers to make good the city; [spirit, will haste
Whilst I, with those that have the
To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent
For a second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not;
My work hath yet not warm'd me: fare you well:
The blood I drop is rather physical
Than dangerous to me: to Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune,
Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms [gentleman,
Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold
Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less
Than those she placeth highest! So, farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius!

[Exit MARCIUS.

Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers o' the town,
Where they shall know our mind. Away! [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Near the Camp of COMINIUS.

Enter COMINIUS and Forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought; we are come off

Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs, [we have struck,
We shall be charged again. Whiles
By interims and conveying gusts we have heard [man gods,
The charges of our friends. Ye Ro-
Lead their successes as we wish our own; [fronts encountering,
That both our powers, with smiling
May give you thankful sacrifice!

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued, [battle;
And given to Lartius and to Marcius
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is 't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:
How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volsces
Held me in chase, that I was forced to wheel [sir,
Three or four miles about; else had I,
Half an hour since brought my report.

Com. Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods! [have
He has the stamp of Marcius; and I
Beforetime seen him thus.

Mar. [Within.] Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor
More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every meaner man.

Enter MARCIUS.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.

Mar. O, let me clip ye
In arms as sound as when I woo'd; in heart [done,
As merry as when our nuptial day was
And tapers burn'd to bedward!

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is 't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees: [to exile;
Condemning some to death, and some
Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the other;
Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone;
He did inform the truth: but for our gentlemen, [for them!—
The common file,—a plague! tribunes
The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge
From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think. [the field?
Where is the enemy? are you lords o'
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcius,
We have at disadvantage fought, and did
Retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? know you on which side
They have placed their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius,
Their bands i' the vaward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought, [by the vows
By the blood we have shed together,
We have made to endure friends, that you directly [tiates;
Set me against Aufidius and his An-
And that you not delay the present, but,
Filling the air with swords advanced and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never [of those Deny your asking: take your choice
That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they

That most are willing. If any such be here— [painting
As it were sin to doubt—that love this
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life, [self;
And that his country's dearer than him-
Let him alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius.

[They all shout, and wave their swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps.

O, me alone! make you a sword of me?
If these shows be not outward, which of you [is
But is four Volsces? none of you but
Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number, [all: the rest
Though thanks to all, must I select from
Shall bear the business in some other fight, [to march;
As cause will be obey'd. Please you
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclined.

Com. March on, my fellows;
Make good this ostentation, and you shall
Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a Guard upon Corioli, going with Drum and Trumpet toward COMINIUS and CAIUS MARCIUS, enters with a Lieutenant, a Party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch [will serve
Those centuries to our aid: the rest
For a short holding: if we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lieu. Fear not our care, sir.

Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon 's.
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Alarum. Enter MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS, meeting.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot. [other's slave,

Mar. Let the first budger die the
And the gods doom him after!

Auf. If I fly, Marcius,
Halloo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleased: 'tis not my blood [thy revenge
Wherein thou seest me mask'd; for
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Auf. Wert thou the Hector
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny,
Thou shouldst not 'scape me here.

[They fight, and certain Volsces come to the aid of AUFIDIUS.

Officious, and not valiant, you have shamed me
In your condemned seconds.

[Exeunt, fighting, driven in by MARCIUS.

SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarum. A Retreat sounded. Flourish. Enter at one side, COMINIUS and Romans; at the other side, MARCIUS, with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work, [I'll report it
Thou'dst not believe thy deeds: but
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles; [and shrug,
Where great patricians shall attend,
I' the end admire; where ladies shall be frighted, [the dull tribunes,
And, gladly quaked, hear more; where
That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours, [the gods
Shall say against their hearts 'We thank
Our Rome hath such a soldier!'
Yet camest thou to a morsel of this feast,

Having fully dined before.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his Power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison:
Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me grieves me.
I have done [induced
As you have done; that's what I can:
As you have been; that's for my country:
He that has but effected his good will
Hath overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know [men
The value of her own: 'twere a conceal-
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement, [that,
To hide your doings; and to silence
Which, to the spire and top of prais-s vouch'd, [beseech you—
Would seem but modest: therefore, I
In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done—before our army hear me. [and they smart

Mar. I have some wounds upon me,
To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude, [all the horses,
And tent themselves with death. Of
Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store, of all [city,
The treasure in this field achieved and
We render you the tenth; to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution, at
Your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it; [those
And stand upon my common part with
That have beheld the doing.

[A long Flourish. They all cry, 'Marcius! Marcius!' cast up their caps and lances: COMINIUS and LARTIUS stand bare.

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profane,
Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall
I' the field prove flatterers, let camps as cities be Made all of false-faced soothing! When steel grows [made
Soft as the parasite's silk, let him be
A coverture for the wars! No more, I say! [that bled,
For that I have not wash'd my nose
Or foil'd some debile wretch,—which, without note, [shout me forth
Here's many else have done,—you
In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I loved my little should be dieted
In praises sauced with lies.

Com. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report than grateful [patience,
To us that give you truly: by your
If 'gainst yourself you be incensed, we'll put you, [manacles,
Like one that means his proper harm, in
Then reason safely with you. Therefore, be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius [the which,
Wears this war's garland: in token of
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him, [this time,
With all his trim belonging; and from
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS! Bear
The addition nobly ever!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and Drums.

All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!

Cor. I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive [thank you.
Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I
[To COM.] I mean to stride your steed; and at all times
To undercrest your good addition
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent;
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write [Lartius,
To Rome of our success. You, Titus
Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now [to beg
Refused most princely gifts, am bound
Of my lord general.

Com. Take't; 'tis yours. What is 't?
Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli
At a poor man's house; he used me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.
Com. O, well begg'd!
Were he the butcher of my son, he should
Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.
Lart. Marcius, his name?
Cor. By Jupiter! forgot.
I am weary; yea, my memory is tired.
Have we no wine here?
Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come.
[Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volsces.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en!
First Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.
Auf. Condition!
I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsce, be that I am. Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find
I' the part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast
And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat. By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his: mine emulation
Hath not that honour in 't it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal
True sword to sword, I'll potch at him some way
Or wrath or craft may get him.
First Sol. He's the devil.
Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd,
With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep nor
Being naked, sick, nor fane nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius: where I find him,
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there,
Against the hospitable canon, would I
Wash my fierce hand in 's heart. Go you to the city;
Learn how 'tis held; and what they are
Be hostages for Rome.
First Sol. Will not you go?
Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove: I pray you—
'Tis south the city mills—bring me word thither
How the world goes; that to the pace
I may spur on my journey.
First Sol. I shall, sir.
[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.
Bru. Good or bad?
Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.
Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.
Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?
Sic. The lamb.
Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.
Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baes like a bear.
Men. He 's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men: tell me one thing that I shall ask you.
Both. Well, sir.
Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?
Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.
Sic. Especially in pride.
Bru. And topping all others in boasting.
Men. This is strange now: do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? do you?

Both. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—will you not be angry?

Both. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O that you could!

Bru. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates, alias fools, as any in Rome.

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in 't; said to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint; hasty and tinder-like upon too trivial motion; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter; and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such weals-men as you are,—I cannot call you Lycurguses,—if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worships have delivered the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables: and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly that tell you you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bisson conspectuities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too?

Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs: you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller, and then rejourn the controversy of threepence to a second day of audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the colic, you make faces like mummers; set up the bloody flag against all patience; and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause is, calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a botcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion; though, peradventure, some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. Good den to your worships: more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[BRUTUS and SICINIUS go aside.

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies,—and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,—whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home!

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee. Hoo! Marcius coming home!

Vir.
Val. } Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him: the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night: a letter for me!

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me! it gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricutic, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O, no, no, no.

Vol. O, he is wounded; I thank the gods for 't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much: brings 'a victory in his pocket? the wounds become him.

Vol. On 's brows, Menenius: he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes, they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had stayed by him, I wou'd not have been so fidiused for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go.—Yes, yes, yes; the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war: he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Val. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true.—Where is he wounded? [To the Tribunes] God save your good worships! Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud.—Where is he wounded?

Vol. I' the shoulder and i' the left arm: there will be large cicatrices to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' the body.

Men. One i' the neck, and two i' the thigh,—there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A Shout and Flourish.] Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius; before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears:
Death—that dark spirit, in 's nervy arm doth lie; [then men die.
Which, being advanced, declines; and

A Sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight [won,
Within Corioli gates: where he hath
With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these
In honour follows Coriolanus.
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus! [Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus! [my heart;

Cor. No more of this, it does offend
Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother!

Cor. O,
You have, I know, petition'd all the gods
For my prosperity! [Kneels.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;
My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving honour newly named,— [thee?—
What is it?—Coriolanus must I call
But, O, thy wife!

Cor. My gracious silence, hail!

Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home, [my dear,
That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.
Men. Now, the gods crown thee!
Cor. And live you yet? [To VALERIA] O my sweet lady, pardon.
Vol. I know not where to turn: O, welcome home:
And welcome, general: and you're welcome all. [I could weep
Men. A hundred thousand welcomes.
And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy. Welcome:
A curse begin at very root on 's heart,
That is not glad to see thee!—You are three [faith of men,
That Rome should dote on: yet, by the
We have some old crab-trees here at home that will not
Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors:
We call a nettle but a nettle, and
The faults of fools but folly.
Com. Ever right.
Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.
Her. Give way there, and go on!
Cor. [To VOL. and VIR.] Your hand, and yours: [head,
Ere in our own house I do shade my
The good patricians must be visited;
From whom I have received not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.
Vol. I have lived
To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy: only there [not but
Is one thing wanting, which I doubt
Our Rome will cast upon thee.
Cor. Know, good mother,
I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.
Com. On, to the Capitol!
[Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before. BRUTUS and SICINIUS come forward.
Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights [tling nurse
Are spectacled to see him: your prat-
Into a rapture lets her baby cry
While she chats him; the kitchen malkin pins [neck,
Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy
Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulks, windows,
Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges horsed
With variable complexions; all agreeing [flamens
In earnestness to see him: seld-shown
Do press among the popular throngs, and puff [dames
To win a vulgar station: our veil'd
Commit the war of white and damask in
Their nicely-gawded cheeks to the wanton spoil [pother,
Of Phœbus' burning kisses: such a
As if that whatsoever god who leads him [powers,
Were slily crept into his human
And gave him graceful posture.
Sic. On the sudden,
I warrant him consul.
Bru. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep.
Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours [but will
From where he should begin and end;
Lose those that he hath won.
Bru. In that there's comfort.
Sic. Doubt not the commoners, for whom we stand, [will
But they, upon their ancient malice,
Forget, with the least cause, these his new honours; [little question
Which that he'll give them, make as
As he is proud to do't.
Bru. I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he [put Appear i' the market-place, nor on him
The napless vesture of humility;
Nor showing, as the manner is, his wounds [breaths.
To the people, beg their stinking
Sic. 'Tis right.
Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it rather [try to him
Than carry it but by the suit o' the gen-
And the desire of the nobles.
Sic. I wish no better
Than have him hold that purpose and to put it
In execution.
Bru. 'Tis most like he will.
Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills;
A sure destruction.
Bru. So it must fall out
To him or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred

He still hath held them; that to's power he would
Have made them mules, silenced their pleaders, and [them,
Dispropertied their freedoms; holding
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world [their provand
Than camels in the war; who have
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall touch the people,—which time shall not want, [easy
If he be put upon 't; and that's as
As to set dogs on sheep,—will be his fire [blaze
To kindle their dry stubble; and their
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought [seen
That Marcius shall be consul: I have
The dumb men throng to see him, and the blind [gloves,
To hear him speak: matrons flung
Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchiefs, [bended,
Upon him as he pass'd: the nobles
As to Jove's statue; and the commons made [and shouts:
A shower and thunder with their caps
I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol,
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay cushions.

First Off. Come, come, they are almost here. How many stand for consulships?

Sec. Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

First Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

Sec. Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground; therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see 't.

First Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waved indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm: but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

Sec. Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country: and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report: but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury; to report otherwise were a malice that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

First Off. No more of him; he's a worthy man: make way, they are coming.

A Sennet. Enter, with Lictors before them, COMINIUS the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIOLANUS, Senators, SICINIUS and BRUTUS. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves. CORIOLANUS stands.

Men. Having determined of the Volsces, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service that
Hath thus stood for his country: therefore, please you, [sire
Most reverend and grave elders, to de-
The present consul, and last general

In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus; whom
We met here, both to thank and to remember
With honours like himself.

First Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think
Rather our state 's defective for requital
Than we to stretch it out. [To the Tribunes] Masters o' the people,
We do request your kindest ears; and after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are convented
Upon a pleasing treaty; and have hearts
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather
We shall be blest to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people than
He hath hereto prized them at.

Men. That's off, that's off;
I would you rather had been silent. Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly:
But yet my caution was more pertinent
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.
Worthy Cominius, speak.

[CORIOLANUS offers to go away.]
Nay, keep your place.

First Sen. Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal again
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope
My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
You soothed not, therefore hurt not: but your people,
I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head i' the sun
When the alarum were struck than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd.

[Exit.

Men. Masters o' the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter— [you now see
That's thousand to one good one—when
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour [Cominius,
Than one on 's ears to hear it? Proceed,

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly. It is held
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world [years,
Be singly counterpoised. At sixteen
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought [dictator,
Beyond the mark of others: our then
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight, [drove
When with his Amazonian chin he
The bristled lips before him: he bestrid [sul's view
An o'er-press'd Roman, and i' the con-
Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met, [day's feats,
And struck him on his knee; in that
When he might act the woman in the scene, [his meed
He proved best man i' the field, and for
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea;
And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since, [For this last,
He lurch'd all swords o' the garland.
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: he stopp'd the fliers; [coward
And by his rare example made the Turn terror into sport: as weeds before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword, death's stamp, [to foot
Where it did mark, it took; from face
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion [enter'd
Was timed with dying cries: alone he
The mortal gate o' the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny; aidless came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck

Corioli like a planet: now all's his;
When, by and by, the din of war 'gan pierce [doubled spirit
His ready sense; then straight his
Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the battle came he; where he did
Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual spoil: and till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!

First Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours
Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at,
And look'd upon things precious as they were [covets less
The common muck o' the world: he
Than misery itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble:
Let him be call'd for.

First Sen. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleased
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom; for I cannot [treat them,
Put on the gown, stand naked, and en-
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage: please you
That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to 't:
Pray you, go fit you to the custom, and
Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that?

Cor. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus; [should hide,
Show them the unaching scars which I
As if I had received them for the hire
Of their breath only!

Men. Do not stand upon 't.—
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people, [consul
Our purpose to them: and to our noble
Wish we all joy and honour.

Senators. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

[Flourish. Exeunt all but SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive 's intent! He will require them,
As if he did contemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

First Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

Sec. Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

Third Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: for if he show us his wounds and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous; and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

First Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

Third Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured; and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' the compass.

Sec. Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly?

Third Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will; 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward.

Sec. Cit. Why that way?

Third Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife.

Sec. Cit. You are never without your tricks: you may, you may.

Third Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter CORIOLANUS in a gown of humility, and MENENIUS.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility: mark his behaviour. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content.

[Exeunt Citizens.

Men. O sir, you are not right: have you not known
The worthiest men have done't?

Cor. What must I say?—
'I pray, sir,'—Plague upon 't! I cannot bring [my wounds!
My tongue to such a pace. 'Look, sir, I got them in my country's service, when [and ran
Some certain of your brethren roar'd From the noise of our own drums.'

Men. O me, the gods!
You must not speak of that: you must desire them
To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me! Hang 'em! I would they would forget me, like the virtues
Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar all: I'll leave you: pray you, speak to 'em, I pray you,
In wholesome manner. [Exit.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces, And keep their teeth clean.

Re-enter two Citizens.

So, here comes a brace. You know the cause, sir, of my standing here.

First Cit. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to 't.

Cor. Mine own desert.

Sec. Cit. Your own desert!

Cor. Ay, but not mine own desire.

First Cit. How not your own desire?

Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

First Cit. You must think, if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you.

Cor. Well then, I pray, your price o' the consulship?

First Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly.

Cor. Kindly! Sir, I pray, let me ha't: I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private.—Your good voice, sir; what say you?

Sec. Cit. You shall ha 't, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir. There's in all two worthy voices begged. I have your alms: adieu.

First Cit. But this is something odd.

Sec. Cit. An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis no matter.

[Exeunt the two Citizens.

Re-enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

Third Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma?

Third Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not indeed loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitly; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

Fourth Cit. We hope to find you our friend; and therefore give you our voices heartily.

Third Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! [Exeunt.

Cor. Most sweet voices!
Better it is to die, better to starve,
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve. [stand here,
Why in this woolvish toge should I
To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear,
Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to 't: [we do 't,
What custom wills, in all things should
The dust on antique time would lie unswept,
And mountainous error be too highly heap'd [fool it so,
For truth to over-peer. Rather than
Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus. I am half through:
The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Re-enter three other Citizens.

Here come more voices. [fought;
Your voices: for your voices I have
Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear [thrice six
Of wounds two dozen odd; battles
I have seen, and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more: your voices:
Indeed, I would be consul.

Fifth Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

Sixth Cit. Therefore let him be consul: the gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, amen. God save thee, noble consul. [Exeunt Citizens.

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people's voice: remains [you
That, in the official marks invested,
Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharged: [mon'd
The people do admit you, and are sum-
To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well. [Exeunt CORIOLANUS and [MENENIUS.
He has it now; and, by his looks, methinks
'Tis warm at 's heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

First Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

Sec. Cit. Amen, sir: to my poor unworthy notice,
He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

Third Cit. Certainly
He flouted us downright.

First Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech: he did not mock us.

Sec. Cit. Not one among us, save yourself, but says
He used us scornfully: he should have show'd us [for's country.
His marks of merit, wounds received

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

All. No; no man saw 'em.

Third Cit. He said he had wounds which he could show in private;
And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
'I would be consul,' says he: 'aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore.' When we granted that,
Here was 'I thank you for your voices, thank you;
Your most sweet voices: now you have left your voices,
I have no further with you.' Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either were you ignorant to see 't,
Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him,
As you were lesson'd, when he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy; ever spake against
Your liberties and the charters that you bear
I' the body of the weal: and now, arriving
A place of potency and sway o' the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might
Be curses to yourselves? You should have said,
That as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said.
As you were fore-advised, had touch'd his spirit
And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd
Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught: so, putting him to rage,
You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive
He did solicit you in free contempt
When he did need your loves; and do you think
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? or had you tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you
Ere now denied the asker? and now again
On him that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your sued-for tongues?

Third Cit. He's not confirm'd; we may deny him yet.

Sec. Cit. And will deny him:
I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

First Cit. I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly; and tell those friends, them take
They have chose a consul that will from
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs that are as often beat for barking
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election: enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed; your loves,
How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd,
No impediment between, but that you must
Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him
More after our commandment than as guided
By your own true affections; and that your minds,
Pre-occupied with what you rather must do
Than what you should, made you against the grain
To voice him consul: lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures to you,

How youngly he began to serve his country,
How long continued; and what stock he springs of,
The noble house o' the Marcians; from whence came
That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king;
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
[1] And [Censorinus] nobly named so,
Twice being [by the people chosen] censor,
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances; but you have not
Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say, you ne'er had done it—
Harp on that still—but by our putting on:
And presently, when you have drawn your number,
Repair to the Capitol.

All. We will so; almost all
Repent in their election.

[Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than stay past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol, come;
We will be there before the stream o' the people;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Rome. A Street.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius, Titus Lartius, Senators, and Patricians.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was which caused
Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volsces stand but as at first;
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road
Upon 's again.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?

Lart. On safeguard he came to me; and did curse
Against the Volsces, for they had so vilely
Yielded the town: he is retired to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? what?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword;
That of all things upon the earth he hated
Your person most; that he would pawn his fortunes
To hopeless restitution, so he might
Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Behold, these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o' the common mouth: I do despise them;
For they do prank them in authority,
Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no further.

Cor. Ha! what is that?

Bru. It will be dangerous to go on: no further.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles and the commons?

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices?

First Sen. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.

Bru. The people are incensed against him.

Sic. Stop,
Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd?
Must these have voices, that can yield them now,

[1] The words in brackets supply a hiatus in the original.

And straight disclaim their tongues? What are your offices?
You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?
Have you not set them on?
Men. Be calm, be calm.
Cor. It is a purposed thing, and grows by plot,
To curb the will of the nobility:
Suffer it, and live with such as cannot rule,
Nor ever will be ruled.
Bru. Call't not a plot:
The people cry you mock'd them; and of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you repined; [call'd them
Scandal'd the suppliants for the people,
Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.
Cor. Why, this was known before.
Bru. Not to them all.
Cor. You have inform'd them sithence?
Bru. How! I inform them!
Cor. You are like to do such business.
Bru. Not unlike,
Each way, to better yours.
Cor. Why then should I be consul? By yon clouds, [me
Let me deserve so ill as you, and make
Your fellow tribune.
Sic. You show too much of that
For which the people stir: if you will pass [inquire your way,
To where you are bound, you must
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;
Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.
Men. Let's be calm.
Com. The people are abused; set on. This paltering
Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus
Deserved this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
I' the plain way of his merit.
Cor. Tell me of corn!
This was my speech, and I will speak 't again—
Men. Not that, not now.
First Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.
Cor. Now, as I live, I will. My nobler friends,
I crave their pardons: [let them
For the mutable, rank-scented many,
Regard me as I do not flatter, and
Therein behold themselves; I say again, [our senate
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst
The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd, and scatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honour'd number; [but that
Who lack not virtue, no, nor power,
Which they have given to beggars.
Men. Well, no more.
First Sen. No more words, we beseech you.
Cor. How! no more!
As for my country I have shed my blood, [lungs
Not fearing outward force, so shall my
Coin words till their decay against those measles, [sought
Which we disdain should tetter us, yet
The very way to catch them.
Bru. You speak o' the people,
As if you were a god to punish, not
A man of their infirmity.
Sic. 'Twere well
We let the people know 't.
Men. What, what? his choler?
Cor. Choler!
Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind!
Sic. It is a mind
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.
Cor. Shall remain!
Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you
His absolute 'shall'?
Com. 'Twas from the canon.
Cor. 'Shall'!
O good, but most unwise patricians! why, [you thus
You grave but reckless senators, have Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory 'shall,' being but [wants not spirit
The horn and noise o' the monster's,
To say he'll turn your current in a ditch, [have power,
And make your channel his? If he
Then vail your ignorance; if none, awake [learn'd,
Your dangerous lenity. If you are
Be not as common fools; if you are not, [are plebeians,
Let them have cushions by you. You

If they be senators: and they are no less,
When, both your voices blended, the [great'st taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate; [' shall,'
And such a one as he, who puts his ' shall,' his
His popular ' shall,' against a graver bench [Jove himself,
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By It makes the consuls base! and my soul aches
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well, on to the market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth ['twas used
The corn o' the storehouse gratis, as Sometime in Greece,—

Men. Well, well, no more of that.

Cor. Though there the people had more absolute power,
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why, shall the people give One that speaks thus their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know the corn [assured
Was not our recompense, resting well They ne'er did service for 't: being press'd to the war,
Even when the navel of the state was touch'd, [kind of service
They would not thread the gates. This Did not deserve corn gratis. Being i' the war, [they show'd
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein Most valour, spoke not for them: the accusation [the senate,
Which they have often made against All cause unborn, could never be the motive [then?
Of our so frank donation. Well, what How shall this bisson multitude digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express [did request it;
What 's like to be their words: ' We We are the greater poll, and in true fear [debase
They gave us our demands.' Thus we The nature of our seats, and make the rabble [break ope
Call our cares fears; which will in time
The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.

Men. Come, enough.

Bru. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human, [worship,
Seal what I end withal! This double
Where one part does disdain with cause, the other [title, wisdom,
Insult without all reason; where gentry,
Cannot conclude but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows,
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech you,—
You that will be less fearful than discreet;
That love the fundamental part of state
More than you doubt the change on 't; that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body with a dangerous physic [once pluck out
That's sure of death without it,—at The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick [dishonour
The sweet which is their poison. Your Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state [it;
Of that integrity which should become
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For the ill which doth control 't.

Bru. Has said enough.

Sic. Has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do. [thee!

Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm
What should the people do with these bald tribunes? [fails
On whom depending, their obedience To the greater bench: in a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.

Bru. Manifest treason!

Sic. This a consul? no.

Bru. The ædiles, ho! Let him be apprehended.

Sic. Go, call the people: [Exit BRUTUS] in whose name myself
Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal: obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.
Cor. Hence, old goat!
Senators, etc. We'll surety him.
Com. Aged sir, hands off.
Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy garments.
Sic. Help, ye citizens!

Re-enter BRUTUS, with the Ædiles, and a Rabble of Citizens.

Men. On both sides more respect.
Sic. Here's he that would take from you all your power.
Bru. Seize him, ædiles!
Citizens. Down with him! down with him! [weapons!
Senators, etc. Weapons, weapons, [They all bustle about CORIOLANUS, crying, 'Tribunes!'—'Patricians!'—'Citizens!'—'What, ho!'—'Sicinius!'—'Brutus!'—'Coriolanus!'—'Citizens!'—'Peace! Peace! Peace!'—'Stay!'—'Hold!'—'Peace!'
Men. What is about to be? I am out of breath;
Confusion 's near. I cannot speak. You, tribunes
To the people!—Coriolanus, patience!—
Speak, good Sicinius.
Sic. Hear me, people; peace!
Citizens. Let's hear our tribune: peace!—Speak, speak, speak.
Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties: [Marcius,
Marcius would have all from you;
Whom late you have named for consul.
Men. Fie, fie, fie!
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.
First Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.
Sic. What is the city but the people?
Citizens. True,
The people are the city.
Bru. By the consent of all, we were establish'd
The people's magistrates.
Citizens. You so remain.
Men. And so are like to do. [flat;
Com. That is the way to lay the city
To bring the roof to the foundation,
And bury all which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin.
Sic. This deserves death.
Bru. Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it. We do here pronounce, [power
Upon the part o' the people, in whose
We were elected theirs, Marcius is worthy
Of present death.
Sic. Therefore lay hold of him;
Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence
Into destruction cast him.
Bru. Ædiles, seize him!
Citizens. Yield, Marcius, yield!
Men. Hear me one word;
Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.
Æd. Peace, peace!
Men. [To BRUTUS] Be that you seem, truly your country's friend, [would
And temperately proceed to what you
Thus violently redress.
Bru. Sir, those cold ways,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous [hands upon him,
Where the disease is violent.—Lay
And bear him to the rock.
Cor. No, I'll die here.
[Drawing his sword.
There's some among you have beheld me fighting; [have seen me,
Come, try upon yourselves what you
Men. Down with that sword! Tribunes, withdraw awhile.
Bru. Lay hands upon him.
Men. Help Marcius, help,
You that be noble; help him, young and old! [with him!
Citizens. Down with him, down
[In this mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People, are all beat in.
Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone, away!
All will be naught else.
Sec. Sen. Get you gone.
Cor. Stand fast;
We have as many friends as enemies.
Men. Shall it be put to that?
First Sen. The gods forbid!
I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house;
Leave us to cure this cause.

Men. For 'tis a sore upon us
You cannot tent yourself: be gone, beseech you.
Com. Come, sir, along with us.
Cor. I would they were barbarians—as they are,
Though in Rome litter'd—not Romans—as they are not,
Though calved i' the porch o' the Capitol,—
Men. Be gone:
Put not your worthy rage into your tongue:
One time will owe another.
Cor. On fair ground
I could beat forty of them.
Men. I could myself
Take up a brace o' the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.
Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And manhood is call'd foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabric. Will you hence
Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear
What they are used to bear.
Men. Pray you, be gone:
I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little: this must be patch'd
With cloth of any colour.
Com. Nay, come away.
[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, and Others.
First Patrician. This man has marr'd his fortune.
Men. His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for 's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death.
[A noise within.
Here's goodly work!
Sec. Pat. I would they were a-bed!
Men. I would they were in Tiber! What, the vengeance!
Could he not speak 'em fair?

Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the Rabble.

Sic. Where is this viper
That would depopulate the city, and
Be every man himself?
Men. You worthy tribunes,—
Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock
With rigorous hands: he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial
Than the severity of the public power,
Which he so sets at nought.
First Cit. He shall well know
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.
Citizens. He shall, sure on 't.
Men. Sir, sir,—
Sic. Peace! should but hunt
Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but
With modest warrant.
Sic. Sir, how comes 't that you
Have holp to make this rescue?
Men. Hear me speak:
As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults,—
Sic. Consul! what consul?
Men. The Consul Coriolanus.
Bru. He a consul!
Citizens. No, no, no, no, no.
Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people,
I may be heard, I'd crave a word or two;
The which shall turn you to no further harm
Than so much loss of time.
Sic. Speak briefly then;
For we are peremptory to dispatch
This viperous traitor: to eject him hence
Were but one danger, and to keep him here
Our certain death; therefore it is decreed
He dies to-night.
Men. Now the good gods forbid
That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
Towards her deserved children is enroll'd
In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam
Should now eat up her own!
Sic. He's a disease that must be cut away.
Men. O, he's a limb that has but a disease;
Mortal, to cut it off; to cure it, easy.
What has he done to Rome that's worthy death?
Killing our enemies? The blood he hath lost,—
Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath,
By many an ounce,—he dropp'd it for his country;

And what is left, to lose it by his country,
Were to us all, that do 't and suffer it,
A brand to the end o' the world.
Sic. This is clean kam.
Bru. Merely awry: when he did love his country,
It honour'd him.
Men. The service of the foot
Being once gangrened, is not then respected
For what before it was.
Bru. We'll hear no more.
Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence; [nature,
Lest his infection, being of catching
Spread further.
Men. One word more, one word.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find [too late,
The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will,
Tie leaden pounds to 's heels. Proceed by process; [out,
Lest parties, as he is beloved, break
And sack great Rome with Romans.
Bru. If it were so,—
Sic. What do ye talk?
Have we not had a taste of his obedience? [Come.
Our ædiles smote? ourselves resisted?
Men. Consider this: he has been bred i' the wars [school'd
Since he could draw a sword, and is ill
In bolted language; meal and bran together [me leave,
He throws without distinction. Give
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him [form,
Where he shall answer, by a lawful
In peace, to his utmost peril.
First Sen. Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove too bloody; and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.
Sic. Noble Menenius,
Be you then as the people's officer.
Masters, lay down your weapons.
Bru. Go not home.
Sic. Meet on the market-place. We'll attend you there:
Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
In our first way.
Men. I'll bring him to you.
[To the Senators] Let me desire your company: he must come,
Or what is worst will follow.
First Sen. Pray you, let's to him.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in CORIOLANUS' House.

Enter CORIOLANUS, and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me [heels;
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses'
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch [still Below the beam of sight; yet will I
Be thus to them.
First Pat. You do the nobler.
Cor. I muse my mother [wont
Does not approve me further, who was
To call them woollen vassals, things created [bare heads
To buy and sell with groats, to show
In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder, [up
When one but of my ordinance stood
To speak of peace or war.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

I talk of you:
Why did you wish me milder? would you have me
False to my nature? Rather say I play
The man I am.
Vol. O, sir, sir, sir,
I would have had you put your power well on,
Before you had worn it out.
Cor. Let go.
Vol. You might have been enough the man you are, [been
With striving less to be so: lesser had
The thwartings of your dispositions, if
You had not show'd them how you were disposed
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.
Cor. Let them hang.
Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter MENENIUS, and Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough, something too rough;
You must return and mend it.
First Sen. There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray, be counsell'd:
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.
Men. Well said, noble woman!
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but that [physic
The violent fit o' the time craves it as
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.
Cor. What must I do?
Men. Return to the tribunes.
Cor. Well, what then? what then?
Men. Repent what you have spoke.
Cor. For them! I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I then do't to them?
Vol. You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble, [heard you say,
But when extremities speak. I have
Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends, [that, and tell me,
I' the war do grow together: grant
In peace what each of them by the other lose,
That they combine not there.
Cor. Tush, tush!
Men. A good demand.
Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem [your best ends,
The same you are not,—which, for
You adopt your policy,—how is it less or worse, [peace
That it shall hold companionship in
With honour, as in war, since that to both
It stands in like request?
Cor. Why force you this?
Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak [struction,
To the people; not by your own in-
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you, [in
But with such words that are but roted
Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables
Of no allowance to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all
Than to take in a town with gentle words, [tune, and Which else would put you to your for-
The hazard of much blood.
I would dissemble with my nature, where
My fortunes and my friends at stake required
I should do so in honour. I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, these nobles; [louts
And you will rather show our general
How you can frown than spend a fawn upon 'em, [safeguard
For the inheritance of their loves and
Of what that want might ruin.
Men. Noble lady!—
Come, go with us; speak fair: you may salve so, [loss
Not what is dangerous present, but the
Of what is past.
Vol. I prithee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand; [be with them,—
And thus far having stretch'd it,—here
Thy knee bussing the stones,—for in such business [ignorant
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the
More learned than the ears,—waving thy head, [heart,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout
Now humble as the ripest mulberry
That will not hold the handling: or say to them, [broils
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in
Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess, [claim,
Were fit for thee to use, as they to
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame [far
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so
As thou hast power and person.
Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours; [free
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as
As words to little purpose.
Vol. Prithee now,
Go, and be ruled: although I know thou hadst rather
Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf
Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. I have been i' the market-place; and, sir, 'tis fit
You make strong party, or defend yourself [anger.
By calmness or by absence; all 's in
Men. Only fair speech.
Com. I think 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will.
Prithee now, say you will, and go about it.
Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd sconce? must I,
With my base tongue, give to my noble heart [do't:
A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will
Yet, were there but this single plot to lose, [should grind it,
This mould of Marcius, they to dust
And throw't against the wind. To the market-place!
You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge to the life.
Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.
Vol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.
Cor. Well, I must do't:
Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! my throat of war be turn'd, [pipe
Which quired with my drum, into a
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! the smiles of knaves [tears take up
Tent in my cheeks, and schoolboys'
The glasses of my sight! a beggar's tongue [my arm'd knees,
Make motion through my lips; and
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his [do't;
That hath received an alms!—I will not
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth, [mind
And by my body's action teach my
A most inherent baseness.
Vol. At thy choice, then:
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let [fear
Thy mother rather feel thy pride than
Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death [list.
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me;
But owe thy pride thyself.
Cor. Pray, be content:
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home beloved [am going:
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul; [do
Or never trust to what my tongue can
I' the way of flattery further.
Vol. Do your will.
[Exit.
Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you: arm yourself [pared
To answer mildly; for they are pre-
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.
Cor. The word is 'mildly.' Pray you, let us go:
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.
Men. Ay, but mildly.
Cor. Well, mildly be it then. Mildly!
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects
Tyrannical power: if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people;
And that the spoil got on the Antiates
Was ne'er distributed.

Enter an Ædile.

What, will he come,?
Æd. He 's coming.
Bru. How accompanied?
Æd. With old Menenius and those senators
That always favour'd him.
Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procured,
Set down by the poll?
Æd. I have; 'tis ready.
Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?
Æd. I have.
Sic. Assemble presently the people hither; [be so
And when they hear me say, 'It shall
I' the right and strength o' the commons,' be it either [let them,
For death, for fine, or banishment, then
If I say fine, cry 'Fine;' if death, cry 'Death;'
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i' the truth o' the cause.
Æd. I shall inform them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry, [fused
Let them not cease, but with a din con-
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.
Æd. Very well.
Sic. Make them be strong and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give 't them.
Bru. Go about it. [Exit Ædile.
Put him to choler straight: he hath been used
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction; being once chafed, he cannot [he speaks
Be rein'd again to temperance; then
What's in his heart; and that is there which looks
With us to break his neck.
Sic. Well, here he comes.

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knave by the volume. The honour'd gods [justice
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us! [shows of peace,
Throng our large temples with the
And not our streets with war!
First Sen. Amen, amen.
Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.
Æd. List to your tribunes; audience: peace, I say!
Cor. First, hear me speak.
Both Tri. Well, say. Peace, ho!
Cor. Shall I be charged no further than this present?
Must all determine here?
Sic. I do demand,
If you submit you to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be proved upon you?
Cor. I am content.
Men. Lo, citizens, he says he is content: [sider;
The warlike service he has done, con-
Think on the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.
Cor. Scratches with briers,
Scars to move laughter only.
Men. Consider further,
That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier: do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds,
But, as I say, such as become a soldier
Rather than envy you.
Com. Well, well, no more.
Cor. What is the matter,
That being pass'd for consul with full voice,
I am so dishonour'd that the very hour
You take it off again?
Sic. Answer to us.
Cor. Say, then: 'tis true, I ought so.
Sic. We charge you, that you have contrived to take [wind
From Rome all season'd office, and to Yourself into a power tyrannical;
For which you are a traitor to the people.
Cor. How! traitor!
Men. Nay, temperately; your promise. [in the people!
Cor. The fires i' the lowest hell fold-
Call me their traitor!—Thou injurious tribune! [deaths,
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand
In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in [would say
Thy lying tongue both numbers, I
'Thou liest' unto thee with a voice as free
As I do pray the gods.
Sic. Mark you this, people?
Citizens. To the rock, to the rock with him!
Sic. Peace!
We need not put new matter to his charge: [him speak,
What you have seen him do and heard
Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying [even this,
Those whose great power must try him:
So criminal and in such capital kind,
Deserves the extremest death.
Bru. But since he hath Served well for Rome,—
Cor. What do you prate of service?
Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Cor. You!
Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother?
Com. Know, I pray you,—
Cor. I'll know no further:
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, flaying; pent to linger
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their mercy at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my courage for what they can give,
To have 't with saying 'Good-morrow.'
Sic. For that he has,
As much as in him lies, from time to time
Envied against the people, seeking means
To pluck away their power, as now at last
Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
That do distribute it; in the name o' the people,
And in the power of us the tribunes, we,
Even from this instant, banish him our city,
In peril of precipitation
From off the rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates: i' the people's name,
I say it shall be so.
Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so; let him away:
He's banish'd, and it shall be so.
Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common friends,—
Sic. He's sentenced; no more hearing.
Com. Let me speak:
I have been consul, and can show for Rome
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
My country's good with a respect more tender,
More holy and profound, than mine own life,
My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase
And treasure of my loins; then if I would Speak that—
Sic. We know your drift:—speak what? but he is banish'd,
Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,
As enemy to the people and his country:
It shall be so.
Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so.
Cor. You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate
As reek o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize
As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air, I banish you;
And here remain with your uncertainty!
Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!
Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,
Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders; till at length
Your ignorance, which finds not till it feels,
Making not reservation of yourselves,
Still your own foes, deliver you as most
Abated captives to some nation
That won you without blows! Despising,
For you, the city, thus I turn my back:
There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, MENENIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

Æd. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!
Citizens. Our enemy's banish'd! he is gone! Hoo! hoo!

[They all shout, and throw up their caps.

Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and follow him,
As he hath follow'd you, with all despite;
Give him deserved vexation. Let a guard
Attend us through the city.
Citizens. Come, come; let's see him out at gates; come.
The gods preserve our noble tribunes! Come.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come, leave your tears: a brief farewell: the beast
With many heads butts me away. Nay, mother,
Where is your ancient courage? you were used
To say extremity was the trier of spirits;

That common chances common men could bear; [alike
That when the sea was calm all boats Show'dmastership in floating: Fortune's blows, [wounded, craves
When most struck home, being gentle A noble cunning: you were used to load me [cible
With precepts that would make invin-The heart that conn'd them.
Vir. O heavens! O heavens!
Cor. Nay, I prithee, woman,—
Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,
And occupations perish!
Cor. What, what, what! I shall be loved when I am lack'd. Nay, mother, [wont to say,
Resume that spirit, when you were If you had been the wife of Hercules, Six of his labours you'd have done, and saved [inius,
Your husband so much sweat.—Com-Droop not; adieu.—Farewell, my wife! my mother!
I'll do well yet.—Thou old and true Menenius, [man's,
Thy tears are salter than a younger And venomous to thine eyes.—My sometime general,
I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld [sad women
Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these 'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes, As 'tis to laugh at 'em.—My mother, you wot well [and
My hazards still have been your solace: Believe 't not lightly—though I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen—your son
Will or exceed the common or be caught With cautelous baits and practice.
Vol. My first son,
Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius [course,
With thee awhile: determine on some More than a wild exposture to each chance
That starts i' the way before thee.
Cor. O the gods!
Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee [hear of us,
Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst And we of thee: so, if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send
O'er the vast world to seek a single man, And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' the absence of the needer.
Cor. Fare ye well:
Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full [one
Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with That's yet unbruised: bring me but out at gate. [mother, and Come, my sweet wife, my dearest My friends of noble touch, when I am forth, [you, come.
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray While I remain above the ground, you shall [aught
Hear from me still; and never of me But what is like me formerly.
Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep.
If I could shake off but one seven years From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.
Cor. Give me thy hand:
Come. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and an Ædile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further.
The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided
In his behalf.
Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done Than when it was a-doing.
Sic. Bid them home:
Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.
Bru. Dismiss them home.
[Exit Ædile.
Here comes his mother.
Sic. Let's not meet her.
Bru. Why?
Sic. They say she's mad.
Bru. They have ta'en note of us: keep on your way.

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS.

Vol. O, ye're well met: the hoarded plague o' the gods

Requite your love!

Men. Peace, peace; be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—
Nay, and you shall hear some. [To BRUTUS] Will you be gone?

Vir. [To SICINIUS.] You shall stay too: I would I had the power
To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame? Note but this fool. [foxship
Was not a man my father? Hadst thou
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!

Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise words;
And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee what;—yet go:—
Nay, but thou shalt stay too: I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then!
He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards and all.
Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continued to his country
As he began, and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had.

Vol. 'I would he had!' 'Twas you incensed the rabble:
Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth
As I can of those mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:
You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this:
As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome, so far my son,— [see,—
This lady's husband here, this, do you
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be baited
With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with you. [Exeunt Tribunes.
I would the gods had nothing else to do
But to confirm my curses! Could I meet 'em [heart
But once a-day, it would unclog my
Of what lies heavy to 't.

Men. You have told them home;
And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself, [Come, let's go:
And so shall starve with feeding. Leave this faint puling and lament as I do, [come,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come,

Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volsce, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vols. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em: know you me yet?

Vols. Nicanor? no.

Rom. The same, sir.

Vols. You had more beard when I last saw you; but your favour is well approved by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there: you have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrections; the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vols. Hath been! is it ended then? Our state thinks not so: they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vols. Coriolanus banished!

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vols. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vols. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vols. A most royal one; the centurions and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vols. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Antium. Before AUFIDIUS' House.

Enter CORIOLANUS, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium. City,
'Tis I that made thy widows: many an heir
Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars
Have I heard groan and drop: then know me not;
Lest that thy wives with spits, and boys with stones,
In puny battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will, Where great Aufidius lies: is he in Antium? [the state

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, beseech you?

Cit. This, here before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir: farewell.

[Exit Citizen.

O world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn, [one heart,
Whose double bosoms seem to wear
Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise, [in love
Are still together, who twin, as 'twere,
Unseparable, shall within this hour,
On a dissension of a doit, break out
To bitterest enmity: so, fellest foes,
Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep [chance,
To take the one the other, by some
Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends [me:
And interjoin their issues. So with
My birthplace hate I, and my love's upon [slay me,
This enemy town. I'll enter: if he
He does fair justice; if he give me way,
I'll do his country service.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—The Same. A Hall in AUFIDIUS' House.

Music within. Enter a Servant.

First Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here!
I think our fellows are asleep.

[Exit.

Enter another Servant.

Sec. Serv. Where's Cotus? my master calls for him. Cotus!

[Exit.

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house: the feast smells well; but I
Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the First Servant.

First Serv. What would you have, friend? whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray, go to the door.

[Exit.

Cor. I have deserved no better entertainment,
In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter Second Servant.

Sec. Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

Sec. Serv. 'Away!' get you away.

Cor. Now thou'rt troublesome.

Sec. Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon. [Exit.

Enter a Third Servant. Re-enter the First, meeting him.

Third Serv. What fellow's this?

First Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house: prithee, call my master to him.

Third Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

Third Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

Third Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

Third Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you; pray you, avoid: come.

Cor. Follow your function; go, and batten on cold bits.

[Pushes him away.

Third Serv. What, will you not? Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

First Serv. And I shall. [Exit.

Third Serv. Where dwellest thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

Third Serv. Under the canopy!

Cor. Ay.

Third Serv. Where's that?

Cor. I' the city of kites and crows.

Third Serv. I' the city of kites and crows! What an ass it is! Then thou dwellest with daws too?

Cor. No, I serve not thy master.

Third Serv. How, sir! do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honester service than to meddle with thy mistress:
Thou pratest, and pratest; serve with thy trencher, hence!

[Beats him away. The Third Servant retires.

Enter AUFIDIUS with the First Servant.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

First Serv. Here, sir: I'd have beaten like him a dog, but for disturbing the lords within. [Retires.

Auf. Whence comest thou? what wouldest thou? thy name?
Why speak'st not? speak, man: what's thy name?

Cor. [Unmuffling.] If, Tullus,
Not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity
Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name?

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?
Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face [tackle's torn,
Bears a command in't; though thy
Thou show'st a noble vessel: what's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown:—know'st thou me yet?

Auf. I know thee not:—thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volsces, [witness may
Great hurt and mischief; thereto
My surname, Coriolanus: the painful service, [blood
The extreme dangers, and the drops of
Shed for my thankless country, are requited [memory,
But with that surname; a good
And witness of the malice and displeasure [that name remains:
Which thou shouldst bear me: only
The cruelty and envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest; [to be
And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves
Whoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity [out of hope—
Hath brought me to thy hearth: not
Mistake me not—to save my life; for if [world
I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the
I would have 'voided thee; but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast [revenge
A heart of wreak in thee, that will

Thine own particular wrongs and stop those maims
Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,
And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee; for I will fight
Against my canker'd country with the spleen
Of all the under fiends. But if so be
Thou darest not this, and that to prove more fortunes
Thou 'rt tired, then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice; [a fool;
Which not to cut would show thee but
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate, [country's breast,
Drawn tuns of blood out of thy
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Marcius, Marcius!
Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart
A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
Should from yon cloud speak divine things, and say [than thee,
'Tis true' I'd not believe them more
All noble Marcius. O, let me twine
Mine arms about that body, where against [broke,
My grained ash an hundred times hath
And scarr'd the moon with splinters: here I clip
The anvil of my sword, and do contest
As hotly and as nobly with thy love
As ever in ambitious strength I did
Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I loved the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here, [rapt heart
Thou noble thing! more dances my
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw [Mars! I tell thee,
Bestride my threshold. Why, thou
We have a power on foot; and I had purpose [brawn,
Once more to hew thy target from thy
Or lose mine arm for 't: thou hast beat me out [since
Twelve several times, and I have nightly
Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat, [Worthy Marcius,
And waked half dead with nothing.
Had we no quarrel else to Rome but that [muster all
Thou art thence banish'd, we would
From twelve to seventy, and pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'er-beat. O, come, go in, [hands;
And take our friendly senators by the
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me, [ies,
Who am prepared against your territor-
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have [take
The leading of thine own revenges,
The one half of my commission; and set down,— [thou know'st
As best thou art experienced, since
Thy country's strength and weakness, —thine own ways; [Rome,
Whether to knock against the gates of
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in: [that shall Let me commend thee first to those
Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy;
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand: most welcome!

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

The two Servants come forward.

First Serv. Here's a strange alteration!

Third Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of him.

First. Serv. What an arm he has! he turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

Third Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought, —I cannot tell how to term it.

First Serv. He had so; looking as it were,—would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

Third Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn:

he is simply the rarest man i' the world.

First Serv. I think he is: but a greater soldier than he, you wot one.

Third Serv. Who? my master?

First Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

First Serv. Worth six on him.

Third Serv. Nay, not so neither: but I take him to be the greater soldier.

Third Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.

First Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter Second Servant.

Sec. Serv. O slaves, I can tell you news; news, you rascals!

First and Third Serv. What, what, what? let's partake.

Sec. Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lieve be a condemned man.

First and Third Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?

Sec. Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general,—Caius Marcius.

First Serv. Why do you say 'thwack our general'?

Sec. Serv. I do not say 'thwack our general'; but he was always good enough for him.

Third Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends: he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

First Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Corioli he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado.

Third Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled and eaten him too.

First Serv. But, more of thy news?

Sec. Serv. Why, he is so made on here within as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end o' the table; no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with 's hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday; for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowl the porter of Rome gates by the ears: he will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled.

Third Serv. And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine.

Sec. Serv. Do't! he will do't; for, look you, sir, he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir, as it were, durst not, look you, sir, show themselves, as we term it, his friends whilst he's in directitude.

First Serv. Directitude! what's that?

Sec. Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

First Serv. But when goes this forward?

Sec. Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

Third Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

First Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; mulled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men.

Third Serv. 'Tis so: and as war, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

First Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

Sec. Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars, for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in! [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him; [peace
His remedies are tame i' the present

And quietness o' the people, which before
Were in wild hurry. Here do we make [his friends
Blush that the world goes well; who rather had, [behold
Though they themselves did suffer by't,
Dissentious numbers pestering streets than see [and going
Our tradesmen singing in their shops
About their functions friendly.

Bru. We stood to 't in good time.

Enter MENENIUS.

Is this Menenius?

Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O, he is grown most kind
Of late. Hail, sir!

Men. Hail to you both!

Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd But with his friends: the commonwealth doth stand;
And so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if
He could have temporized.

Sic. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and his wife
Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. Good den, our neighbours.

Bru. Good den to you all, good den to you all.

First Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees,
Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live, and thrive!

Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd Coriolanus
Had loved you as we did.

Citizens. Now the gods keep you!

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell. [Exeunt Citizens.

Sic. This is a happier and more comely time [streets,
Than when these fellows ran about the Crying confusion.

Bru. Caius Marcius was
A worthy officer i' the war; but insolent, [all thinking,
O'ercome with pride, ambitious past
Self-loving,—

Sic. And affecting one sole throne,
Without assistance.

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,
If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome
Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Ædile.

Æd. Worthy tribunes,
There is a slave, whom we have put in prison, [powers
Reports, the Volsces with two several
Are enter'd in the Roman territories,
And with the deepest malice of the war
Destroy what lies before 'em.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius,
Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment, [world;
Thrusts forth his horns again into the
Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for Rome,
And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you
Of Marcius? [It cannot be

Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd.
The Volsces dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be!
We have record that very well it can;
And three examples of the like have been [fellow,
Within my age. But reason with the
Before you punish him, where he heard this; [formation,
Lest you shall chance to whip your in-
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me:
I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going [come
All to the senate-house: some news is
That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave;
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his raising;
Nothing but his report.

Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths— [Marcius,
How probable I do not know—that

Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome; [between
And vows revenge as spacious as
The young'st and oldest thing.
Sic. This is most likely!
Bru. Raised only, that the weaker sort may wish
Good Marcius home again.
Sic. The very trick on 't.
Men. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more atone
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. You are sent for to the senate:
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius
Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories; and have already
O 'erborne their way, consumed with fire, and took
What lay before them.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. O, you have made good work!
Men. What news? what news?
Com. You have holp to ravish your own daughters, and
To melt the city leads upon your pates;
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses,—
Men. What's the news? what's the news? [cement, and
Com. Your temples burned in their
Your franchises, whereon you stood, confined
Into an auger's bore.
Men. Pray now, your news?—
You have made fair work, I fear me.—
Pray, your news?—
If Marcius should be join'd with Volscians,—
Com. If!
He is their god: he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than Nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him, [dence
Against us brats, with no less confi-
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.
Men. You have made good work,
You and your apron-men; you that stood so much
Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic-eaters!
Com. He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.
Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work!
Bru. But is this true, sir?
Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and who resist
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame him? [him.
Your enemies and his find something in
Men. We are all undone, unless
The noble man have mercy.
Com. Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do 't for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him as the wolf
Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they Should say 'Be good to Rome,' they charged him even [his hate,
As those should do that had deserved
And therein show'd like enemies.
Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand [face
That should consume it, I have not the
To say 'Beseech you, cease.' You have made fair hands, [fair!
You and your crafts! you have crafted
Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.
Both Tri. Say not, we brought it.
Men. How! was it we? we loved him; but, like beasts
And cowardly nobles, gave way to your clusters,
Who did hoot him out o' the city.
Com. But I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius, [points
The second name of men, obeys his
As if he were his officer: desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the clusters.
And is Aufidius with him? You are they [you cast
That made the air unwholesome, when
Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at

Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head
Which will not prove a whip: as many coxcombs
As you threw caps up will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserved it.

Citizens. Faith, we hear fearful news.

First Cit. For mine own part,
When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity.

Sec. Cit. And so did I.

Third Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: that we did, we did for the best; and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. Ye're goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made
Good work, you and your cry! Shall's to the Capitol?

Com. O, ay; what else?

[Exeunt COMINIUS and MENENIUS.

Sic. Go, masters, get you home; be not dismay'd: these are a side that would be glad to have
This true which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

First Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i' the wrong when we banished him.

Sec. Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home.

[Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol: would half my wealth
Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray, let us go.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Camp, at a small distance from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS and his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but
Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table and their thanks at end;
And you are darken'd in this action, sir,
Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now;
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier,
Even to my person, than I thought he would
When first I did embrace him: yet his nature
In that's no changeling; and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet I wish, sir,—
I mean for your particular,—you had not
Join'd in commission with him; but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure, when he shall come to his account, he knows not
What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state,
Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon as draw his sword; yet he hath left undone
That which shall break his neck or hazard mine,
Whene'er we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down;
And the nobility of Rome are his:
The senators and patricians love him too:
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty
To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was
A noble servant to them; but he could not
Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fail in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving

From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace
Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controll'd the war; but one of these—
As he hath spices of them all, not all,
For I dare so far free him—made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banished: but he has
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in the interpretation of the time;
And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
To extol what it hath done.
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail.
Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine,
Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and Others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath said
Which was sometime his general; who loved him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him;
A mile before his tent fall down, and knee
The way into his mercy: nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.
Com. He would not seem to know me.
Men. Do you hear?
Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name:
I urged our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to: forbad all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forged himself a name i' the fire
Of burning Rome.
Men. Why, so: you have made good work
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap,—a noble memory!
Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon
When it was less expected: he replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd.
Men. Very well:
Could he say less?
Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
For's private friends: his answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome musty chaff: he said 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
And still to nose the offence.
Men. For one poor grain or two!
I am one of those; his mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too, we are the grains:
You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt
Above the moon: we must be burnt for you.
Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid
In this so never-needed help, yet do not
Upbraid 's with our distress. But, sure, if you
Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,
More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.
Men. No; I'll not meddle.
Sic. Pray you, go to him.
Men. What should I do?
Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome, towards Marcius.
Men. Well, and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard; what then?
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? say 't be so?
Sic. Yet your good will
Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure
As you intended well.
Men. I'll undertake't:
I think he'll hear me. Yet, to bite his lip
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me
He was not taken well; he had not dined:
The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We pout upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd

These pipes and these conveyances of our blood [suppler souls
With wine and feeding, we have
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore I'll watch him
Till he be dieted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.

Bru. You know the very road into his kindness,
And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him,
Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge
Of my success. [Exit.

Com. He'll never hear him.

Sic. Not?

Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye [injury
Red as 'twould burn Rome; and his
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'Twas very faintly he said 'Rise;' dismiss'd me [he would do
Thus, with his speechless hand: what
He sent in writing after me,—what he would not; [ditions:
Bound with an oath to yield to his con-
So that all hope is vain,
Unless his noble mother, and his wife;
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him
For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—An advanced Post of the Volscian Camp before Rome. The Guards at their Stations.

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

First Guard. Stay: whence are you?

Sec. Guard. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well: but, by your leave,
I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

First Guard. From whence?

Men. From Rome.

First Guard. You may not pass, you must return: our general
Will no more hear from thence.

Sec. Guard. You'll see your Rome embraced with fire, before
You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome, [blanks,
And of his friends there, it is lots to
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.

First Guard. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name
Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read
His fame unparallel'd haply amplified;
For I have ever verified my friends,
Of whom he's chief, with all the size that verity [sometimes,
Would without lapsing suffer: nay,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground,
I have tumbled past the throw; and in his praise [fore, fellow,
Have almost stamp'd the leasing: there-
I must have leave to pass.

First Guard. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here; no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore go back.

Men. Prithee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

Sec. Guard. Howsoever you have been his liar, as you say you have, I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore go back.

Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

First Guard. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am, as thy general is.

First Guard. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemned; our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

Sec. Guard. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general.

First Guard. My general cares not for you. Back, I say: go, lest I let forth your half-pint of blood;—back,—that's the utmost of your having:—back.

Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you: you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou standest not i' the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship and crueller in suffering; behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee. [To CORIOLANUS] The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs; and conjure thee to pardon Rome and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here,—this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs
Are servanted to others: though I owe
My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar,
Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison rather Than pity note how much. Therefore be gone. [stronger than Mine ears against your suits are
Your gates against my force. Yet, for I loved thee,
Take this along; I writ it for thy sake,
And would have sent it. [Gives a Letter.] Another word, Menenius, [Aufidius,
I will not hear thee speak.—This man,
Was my beloved in Rome: yet thou behold'st—

Auf. You keep a constant temper. [Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

First Guard. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

Sec. Guard. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power: you know the way home again.

First Guard. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back?

Sec. Guard. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for the world nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, ye're so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away! [Exit.

First Guard. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

Sec. Guard. The worthy fellow is our general: he's the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Tent of CORIOLANUS.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and Others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow [this action,
Set down our host. My partner in
You must report to the Volscian lords how plainly
I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends
You have respected; stopp'd your ears against [mitted
The general suit of Rome; never ad-
A private whisper, no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man,
Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome, [father;
Loved me above the measure of a
Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge [I have,
Was to send him; for whose old love

Though I show'd sourly to him, once more offer'd [fuse,
The first conditions, which they did re-
And cannot now accept, to grace him only [very little
That thought he could do more. A
I have yielded to; fresh embassies, and suits, [hereafter
Nor from the state, nor private friends,
Will I lend ear to. [Shout within.] Ha! what shout is this?
Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUMNIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd mould [her hand
Wherein this trunk was framed, and in
The grandchild to her blood. But out, affection!
All bond and privilege of nature, break!
Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.
What is that curtsy worth? or those doves' eyes,
Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not [mother bows;
Of stronger earth than others. My
As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod: and my young boy
Hath an aspect of intercession which Great Nature cries 'Deny not.'—Let the Volsces [never Plough Rome, and harrow Italy: I'll
Be such a gosling to obey instinct; but stand,
As if a man were author of himself
And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus changed,
Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now,
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny; but do not say
For that 'Forgive our Romans.'—O, a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!
Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss [lip
I carried from thee, dear; and my true
Hath virgin'd it e'er since.—You gods! I prate, [world
And the most noble mother of the Leave unsaluted: sink, my knee, i' the earth; [Kneels.
Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up blest!
Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee; and unproperly
Show duty, as mistaken all this while
Between the child and parent. [Kneels.

Cor. What is this?
Your knees to me? to your corrected son? [beach
Then let the pebbles on the hungry
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds [fiery sun,
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the Murdering impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I holp to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle
That's curdied by the frost from purest snow [Valeria!
And hangs on Dian's temple: dear

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform [thou mayst prove Thy thoughts with nobleness; that
To shame unvulnerable, and stick i' the wars [flaw,
Like a great sea-mark, standing every
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy!

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace:
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before;
The things I have forsworn to grant may never [me
Be held by you denials. Do not bid
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not
Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not

To allay my rages and revenges with
Your colder reasons.
Vol. O, no more, no more!
You have said you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness: therefore hear us.
Cor. Aufidius, and you Volsces, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private.—Your request?
Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment
And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself
How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,
Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and sorrow;
Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
His country's bowels out. And to poor we
Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we,
Alas, how can we for our country pray,
Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory,
Whereto we are bound? Alack, or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse; or else the person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had
Our wish, which side should win; for either thou
Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
And bear the palm for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on Fortune till
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade thee
Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country than to tread—
Trust to't, thou shalt not—on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.
Vir. Ay, and mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
Living to time.
Boy. 'A shall not tread on me;
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.
Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.
Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy the Volsces whom you serve, you might condemn us,
As poisonous of your honour: no; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volsces
May say 'This mercy we have show'd;' the Romans,
'This we received;' and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry 'Be blest for making up this peace!' Thou know'st, great son,
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name,
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses;
Whose chronicle thus writ: "The man was noble,
But with his last attempt he wiped it out;
Destroy'd his country, and his name remains
To the ensuing age abhorr'd." Speak to me, son:
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?
Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs?—Daughter, speak you:
He cares not for your weeping.—Speak thou, boy:

Perhaps thy childishness will move him more
Than can our reasons.—There's no man in the world
More bound to 's mother; yet here he lets me prate
Like one i' the stocks. Thou hast never in thy life
Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
When she, poor hen, fond of no second brood, has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
Loaden with honour. Say my request's unjust,
And spurn me back: but if it be not so, thou are not honest, and the gods will plague thee,
That thou restrain'st from me the duty which
To a mother's part belongs.—He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.
To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride
Than pity to our prayers. Down: an end;
This is the last: so we will home to Rome,
And die among our neighbours.—Nay, behold us:
This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength
Than thou hast to deny 't.—Come, let us go:
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child
Like him by chance. Yet give us our dispatch:
I am hush'd until our city be a-fire,
And then I'll speak a little.

Cor. [After holding her by the hand, silent.] O mother, mother!
What have you done? Behold, the heavens do ope,
The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome;
But, for your son,—believe it, O, believe it,—most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But let it come.
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidius,
Were you in my stead, would you have heard
A mother less? or granted less, Aufidius?

Auf. I was moved withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn you were:
And, sir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,
What peace you'll make, advise me: for my part,
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you,
Stand to me in this cause. O mother! wife!

Auf. [Aside.] I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour
At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a former fortune.

[The Ladies make signs to CORIOLANUS.

Cor. [To VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, etc.] Ay, by and by;—
But we will drink together; and you shall bear
A better witness back than words, which, On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

Men. See you yond coign o' the Capitol; yond corner-stone?

Sic. Why, what of that?

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say there is no hope in 't: our throats are sentenced, and stay upon execution.

Sic. Is 't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is differency between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me: and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading: he is able to pierce a corslet with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is 'long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house: [tribune,
The plebeians have got your fellow-
And hale him up and down; all swearing, if [home,
The Roman ladies bring not comfort
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?

Sec. Mess. Good news, good news; the ladies have prevail'd,
The Volscians are dislodged, and Marcius gone: [Rome,
A merrier day did never yet greet
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend,
Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain? [the sun is fire:

Sec. Mess. As certain as I know
Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it?
Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide, [Why, hark you!
As the recomforted through the gates.
[Trumpets; Hautboys; Drums beat; all together.
The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes, [Romans,
Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting
Make the sun dance. Hark you!
[A shout within.

Men. This is good news:
I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full; of tribunes, such as you,
A sea and land full. You have pray'd well to-day: [throats
This morning for ten thousand of your
I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!
[Music still, with shouts.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,
Accept my thankfulness.

Sec. Mess. Sir, we have all
Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city?

Sec. Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them,
And help the joy. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter two Senators with VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, VALERIA, etc., passing over the Stage, followed by Patricians and Others.

First Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome! [gods,
Call all your tribes together, praise the
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:
Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius, [mother;
Repeal him with the welcome of his
Cry 'Welcome, ladies, welcome!'

All. Welcome, ladies!
Welcome!
[A Flourish with Drums and Trumpets. Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Antium. A Public Place.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords o' the city I am here: [it,
Deliver them this paper: having read
Bid them repair to the market-place, where I, [ears,
Even in theirs and in the commons'
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse
The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping

To purge himself with words: dispatch.
[Exeunt Attendants.

Enter three or four Conspirators of AUFIDIUS' Faction.

Most welcome! [general?
First Con. How is it with our
Auf. Even so
As with a man by his own alms empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.
Sec. Con. Most noble sir,
If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.
Auf. Sir, I cannot tell:
We must proceed as we do find the people. [uncertain whilst Third Con. The people will remain
'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either
Makes the survivor heir of all.
Auf. I know it;
And my pretext to strike at him admits
A good construction. I raised him, and I pawn'd
Mine honour for his truth: who being so heighten'd, [of flattery,
He water'd his new plants with dews
Seducing so my friends; and, to this end, [before
He bow'd his nature, never known
But to be rough, unswayable, and free.
Third Con. Sir, his stoutness
When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping,—
Auf. That I would have spoke of: [hearth;
Being banish'd for 't, he came unto my
Presented to my knife his throat; I took him; [him way
Made him joint-servant with me; gave
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose [plish,
Out of my files, his projects to accom-
My best and freshest men; served his designments [fame
In mine own person; holp to reap the
Which he did end all his; and took some pride [last
To do myself this wrong: till at the
I seem'd his follower, not partner, and
He waged me with his countenance, as if
I had been mercenary.
First Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marvell'd at it, and in the last, [we look'd
When he had carried Rome, and that
For no less spoil than glory,—
Auf. There was it:
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him.
At a few drops of women's rheum, which are [labour
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and
Of our great action: therefore shall he die, [hark!
And I'll renew me in his fall. But [Drums and Trumpets sound, with great shouts of the People.
First Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.
Sec. Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear
With giving him glory.
Third Con. Therefore, at your vantage, [people
Ere he express himself, or move the
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along, [shall bury
After your way his tale pronounced
His reasons with his body.
Auf. Say no more:
Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.
Auf. I have not deserved it.
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perused
What I have written to you?
Lords. We have.
First Lord. And grieve to hear it.
What faults he made before the last, I think [to end
Might have found easy fines: but there
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge, making a treaty where [excuse.
There was a yielding,—this admits no
Auf. He approaches: you shall hear him.

Enter CORIOLANUS, with Drums and Colours; a Crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know
That prosperously I have attempted and
With bloody passage led your wars even to
The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home
Do more than counterpoise a full third part
The charges of the action. We have made peace,
With no less honour to the Antiates
Than shame to the Romans; and we here deliver,
Subscribed by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o' the senate, what
We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the high'st degree
He hath abused your powers.

Cor. Traitor! How now!

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius!

Cor. Marcius!

Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius: dost thou think
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name
Coriolanus, in Corioli?—
You lords and heads o' the state, perfidiously
He has betrayed your business, and given up,
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome,—
I say 'your city,'—to his wife and mother;
Breaking his oath and resolution like
A twist of rotten silk; never admitting
Counsel o' the war; but at his nurse's tears
He whined and roar'd away your victory;
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?

Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears!

Cor. Ha!

Auf. No more.

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. 'Boy!' O slave!
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forced to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords,
Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion—
Who wears my stripes impress'd on him; that must bear
My beating to his grave—shall join to thrust
The lie unto him.

First Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.

Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volsces; men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me. 'Boy!' False hound!
If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli:
Alone I did it.—'Boy!'

Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,
'Fore your own eyes and ears?

All Consp. Let him die for 't.

All the People. [Speaking confusedly.] 'Tear him to pieces.'—'Do it presently.'—'He killed my son.'—'My daughter.'—'He killed my cousin Marcus.'—'He killed my father.'

Sec. Lord. Peace, ho! no outrage: peace!
The man is noble, and his fame folds-in
This orb o' the earth. His last offences to us
Shall have judicious hearing. Stand, Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!

Consp. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!

[The Conspirators draw, and kill CORIOLANUS: AUFIDIUS stands on his body.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold!

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

First Lord. O Tullus,—

Sec. Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

Third Lord. Tread not upon him. Masters all, be quiet;
Put up your swords.

Auf. My lords, when you shall know—as in this rage
Provoked by him, you cannot—the great danger

Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice
That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours
To call me to your senate, I'll deliver
Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heaviest censure.

First Lord. Bear from hence his body; [garded
And mourn you for him; let him be re-
As the most noble corse that ever herald
Did follow to his urn.

Sec. Lord. His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.
Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up: [be one.
Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers; I'll Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully, [city he Trail your steel pikes. Though in this
Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.
Assist.

[Exeunt, bearing the body of CORIOLANUS.
A dead March sounded.

SCENE, Rome, and the Country near it.

ACT I

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol. The Tomb of the Andronici appearing.

Flourish. Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft. And then enter below, SATURNINUS and his Followers, from one side, and BASSIANUS and his Followers from the other side, with Drum and Colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right, [arms;
Defend the justice of my cause with
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords: [last
I am his first-born son, that was the
That ware the imperial diadem of Rome; [me,
Then let my father's honours live in
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,
If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the Crown.

Marc. Princes, that strive by faction and by friends
Ambitiously for rule and empery,
Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand
A special party, have, by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome:
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accited home
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths;
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yoked a nation strong, train'd up in arms. [took
Ten years are spent since first he under-

This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms [return'd
Our enemies' pride: five times he hath
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field; [spoils,
And now at last, laden with honour's
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat,—by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,— [strength;
That you withdraw you and abate your

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,
And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all, [ment,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich orna-
That I will here dismiss my loving friends; [favour
And to my fortunes and the people's
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right, [all;
I thank you all, and here dismiss you
And to the love and favour of my country [cause.
Commit myself, my person, and the [Exeunt the Followers of SATURNINUS.

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me
As I am confident and kind to thee.
Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

[Flourish. SATURNINUS and BASSIANUS, with MARCUS and Others, go up into the Capitol.

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way: the good Andronicus,
Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd [sword,
From where he circumscribed with his
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Drums and Trumpets sounded. Enter MARTIUS and MUTIUS; after them, two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then LUCIUS and QUINTUS. After them, TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA, with ALARBUS, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and People following. The Bearers set down the coffin, and TITUS speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!
Lo, as the bark that hath discharged her fraught
Returns with precious lading to the bay
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage, [boughs,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel
To re-salute his country with his tears,
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rights that we intend! [sons,
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant
Half of the number that King Priam had, [dead!
Behold the poor remains, alive and
These that survive let Rome reward with love; [home,
These that I bring unto their latest
With burial amongst their ancestors:
Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword. [own,
Titus, unkind, and careless of thine
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The Tomb is opened.

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont, [country's wars!
And sleep in peace, slain in your
O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons of mine hast thou in store, [more!
That thou wilt never render to me

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths, [pile
That we may hew his limbs, and on a

'Ad manes fratrum' sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeased,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son:
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me!
Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return,
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O, if to fight for king and commonweal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood.
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge:
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld
Alive and dead; and for their brethren slain
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:
To this your son is mark'd; and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consumed.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with ALARBUS.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threatening look.
Then, madam, stand resolved; but hope withal,
The selfsame gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the Queen of Goths,
When Goths were Goths and Tamora was queen,
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.
Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their sons.

[Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the Tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges; here are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long;
My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears
I render, for my brethren's obsequies;
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome:
O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud!

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserved
The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and Others.

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother, [Rome!
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of
Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.
Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars, [fame!
You that survive, and you that sleep in Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your swords:
But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspired to Solon's happiness,
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, [their trust,
Send thee by me, their tribune and
This palliament of white and spotless hue; [pire,
And name thee in election for the em-
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons:
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome. [fits
Tit. A better head her glorious body
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness: [trouble you?
What should I don this robe, and
Be chosen with proclamations to-day,
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life, [all?
And set abroad new business for you
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years, [fully,
And led my country's strength successAnd buried one-and-twenty valiant sons, [arms,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in
In right and service of their noble country:
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. [ask the empery.
Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and
Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?
Tit. Patience, Prince Saturnine.
Sat. Romans, do me right;
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor.
Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!
Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good [thee!
That noble-minded Titus means to
Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee
The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves. [thee,
Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter
But honour thee, and will do till I die:
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends, [men
I will most thankful be; and thanks to
Of noble minds is honourable meed.
Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes here,
I ask your voices and your suffrages:
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus? [Andronicus,
Tribunes. To gratify the good
And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.
Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this suit I make,
That you create your emperor's eldest son, [hope,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I
Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonweal:
Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say 'Long live our emperor!' [every sort,
Marc. With voices and applause of Patricians and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor,
And say 'Long live our Emperor Saturnine!'
[A long Flourish.
Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:
And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my emperess,
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse:
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?
Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this match [grace:
I hold me highly honour'd of your

And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord:
Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.
Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts
Rome shall record; and when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.
Tit. [To TAMORA.] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;
To him that, for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly and your followers.
Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew.
Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:
Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,
Thou comest not to be made a scorn in Rome:
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts you
Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.
Lavinia, you are not displeased with this?
Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.
Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go:
Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum.

[Flourish. SATURNINUS courts TAMORA in dumb show.

Bas. [Seizing LAVINIA.] Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine.
Tit. How, sir! are you in earnest then, my lord?
Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolved withal
To do myself this reason and this right.
Marc. 'Suum cuique' is our Roman justice:
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.
Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.
Tit. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the emperor's guard?
Treason, my lord! Lavinia is surprised!
Sat. Surprised! by whom?
Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

[Exeunt MARCUS and BASSIANUS, with LAVINIA.

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,
And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.
Mut. My lord, you pass not here.
Tit. What, villain boy!
Barr'st me my way in Rome?

[Stabs MUTIUS.

Mut. Help, Lucius, help!

[Dies.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust; and, more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.
Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine;
My sons would never so dishonour me:
Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.
Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife,
That is another's lawful promised love.

[Exit.

Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:
I'll trust by leisure him that mocks me once;
Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.
Was there none else in Rome to make a stale
But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus,
Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,
That said'st, I begg'd the empire at thy hands.
Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these?
Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece
To him that flourish'd for her with his sword:

A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy ;
One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.
Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart.
Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Goths,
That like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her nymphs [Rome,
Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of
If thou be pleased with this my sudden choice, [bride,
Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my
And will create thee Emperess of Rome.
Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice ? [gods,
And here I swear by all the Roman
Sith priest and holy water are so near,
And tapers burn so bright and every thing
In readiness for Hymenæus stand,
I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till from forth this place
I lead espoused my bride along with me.
Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,
If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths,
She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.
Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon. Lords, accompany [bride,
Your noble emperor and his lovely
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine, [quered :
Whose wisdom hath her fortune con-
There shall we consummate our spousal rites.
[Exeunt all but TITUS.
Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride. [alone,
Titus, when wert thou wont to walk
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs ?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Marc. O Titus, see, O, see what thou hast done !
In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.
Tit. No, foolish tribune, no ; no son of mine, [deed
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the
That hath dishonour'd all our family ;
Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons !
Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes ;
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.
Tit. Traitors, away ! he rests not in this tomb. [hath stood,
This monument five hundred years
Which I have sumptuously re-edified :
Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors [brawls :
Repose in fame ; none basely slain in
Bury him where you can ; he comes not here. [you :
Marc. My lord, this is impiety in
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him ;
He must be buried with his brethren.
Quin. } And shall, or him we will

Tit. ' And shall ! ' what villain was it spake that word ?
Quin. He that would vouch 't in any place but here.
Tit. What, would you bury him in my despite ?
Marc. No, noble Titus ; but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius and to bury him.
Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,
And with these boys mine honour thou hast wounded :
My foes I do repute you every one ;
So trouble me no more, but get you gone. [withdraw.
Mart. He is not with himself ; let us
Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.
[MARCUS and the Sons of TITUS kneel.
Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,—
Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak,—
Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.
Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—
Luc. Dear Father, soul and substance of us all,—
Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.
Thou art a Roman ; be not barbarous :
The Greeks, upon advice, did bury Ajax

That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son
Did graciously plead for his funerals:
Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.
Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise:
The dismall'st day is this that e'er I saw,
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.
[MUTIUS is put into the Tomb.
Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,
Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb!
All. [Kneeling.] No man shed tears for noble Mutius; [cause.
He lives in fame that died in virtue's
Marc. My lord, to step out of these dreary dumps, [Goths
How comes it that the subtle Queen of
Is of a sudden thus advanced in Rome?
Tit. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is: [can tell:
Whether by device or no, the heavens
Is she not then beholden to the man
That brought her for this high good turn so far? [munerate.
Marc. Yes, and will nobly him re-

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize: [bride!
God give you joy, sir, of your gallant
Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no more, [leave.
Nor wish no less; and so I take my
Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law, or we have power,

Only thus much I give your grace to
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd;
That, in the rescue of Lavinia,
With his own hand did slay his youngest son, [wrath
In zeal to you and highly moved to
To be controll'd in that he frankly gave:
Receive him then to favour, Saturnine;
That hath express'd himself in all his deeds [Rome.
A father and a friend to thee and

Were gracious in those princely eyes
Then hear me speak indifferently for all;
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past. [openly,
Sat. What, madam! be dishonour'd
And basely put it up without revenge?
Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome forfend
I should be author to dishonour you!
But on mine honour dare I undertake
For good Lord Titus' innocence in all;
Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his griefs: [him;
Then, at my suit, look graciously on

Lest, then, the people, and patricians
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant you for ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin, [alone:
Yield at entreats; and then let me
I'll find a day to massacre them all,
And raze their faction and their family,
The cruel father and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life;
And make them know what 'tis to let a queen

Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace [in vain.
[Aloud] Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus,—
Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.
Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail'd.
Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord; [life in me.
These words, these looks, infuse new
Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus.—

For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable. [nia;—
And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavi-

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top, [aloft,
Safe out of Fortune's shot; and sits
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning's flash, [ing reach.
Advanced above pale envy's threaten-
As when the golden sun salutes the morn, [beams,
And, having gilt the ocean with his
Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.
Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown. [thoughts,
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress, [triumph long
And mount her pitch; whom thou in
Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains, [eyes
And faster bound to Aaron's charming
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.
Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts! [gold,
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and
To wait upon this new-made emperess.
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen, [nymph,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this
This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine, [weal's.
And see his shipwreck and his common-
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge,
And manners, to intrude where I am graced, [affected be.
And may, for aught thou know'st,
Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all, [braves.
And so in this, to bear me down with

'Tis not the difference of a year or two
Makes me less gracious, thee more fortunate :
I am as able and as fit as thou
To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace ; [approve,
And that my sword upon thee shall
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.
Aar. [Aside.] Clubs, clubs ! these lovers will not keep the peace.
Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvised,
Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends ?
Go to ; have your lath glued within your sheath
Till you know better how to handle it.
Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have, [I dare.
Full well shalt thou perceive how much
Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave ? [They draw.
Aar. [Advancing.] Why, how now, lords ! [draw,
So near the emperor's palace dare you
And maintain such a quarrel openly ?
Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge :
I would not for a million of gold
The cause were known to them it most concerns ; [more
Nor would your noble mother for much
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.
For shame, put up.
Dem. Not I, till I have sheathed
My rapier in his bosom, and withal
Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat [here.
That he hath breathed in my dishonour
Chi. For that I am prepared and full resolved. [with thy tongue,
Foul-spoken coward ! that thunder'st
And with thy weapon nothing darest perform.
Aar. Away, I say ! [adore,
Now, by the gods that warlike Goths
This petty brabble will undo us all.
Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
It is to jet upon a prince's right ?
What, is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd [venge ?
Without controlment, justice, or re-
Young lords, beware ! an should the empress know
This discord's ground, the music would not please. [the world :
Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all
I love Lavinia more than all the world.
Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice :
Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.
Aar. Why, are ye mad ? or know ye not, in Rome
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brook competitors in love ?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.
Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose to achieve her whom I love.
Aar. To achieve her ! how ?
Dem. Why makest thou it so strange ?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd ;
She is a woman, therefore may be won ;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be loved.
What, man ! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of ; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know :
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother, [badge.
Better than he have worn Vulcan's
Aar. [Aside.] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.
Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it
With words, fair looks, and liberality ?
What, hast thou not full often struck a doe, [nose ?
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's
Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.
Chi. Ay, so the turn were served.
Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.
Aar. Would you had hit it too !
Then should not we be tired with this ado. [such fools
Why, hark ye, hark ye ! and are you
To square for this ? would it offend you, then,
That both should speed ?
Chi. I' faith, not me.
Dem. Nor me, so I were one.
Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar :
'Tis policy and stratagem must do

That you affect; and so must you resolve,
That what you cannot as you would achieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may.
Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.
A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.
My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:
The forest walks are wide and spacious;
And many unfrequented plots there are
Fitted by kind for rape and villany:
Single you thither then this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit
To villany and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
And she shall file our engines with advice,
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of Fame,
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears:
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull;
There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns;
There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's eye,
And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream
To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
Per Styga, per manes vehor.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Forest near Rome. Horns and cry of hounds heard.

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with Hunters, etc., MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,
The fields are fragrant and the woods are green:
Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the prince, and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To tend the emperor's person carefully:
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspired.

[A cry of hounds, and Horns winded in a peal.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and Attendants.

Many good-morrows to your majesty;
Madam, to you as many and as good:
I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lord;
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say, no;
I have been abroad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on, then; horse and chariots let us have,
And to our sport. [To TAMORA] Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting.

Marc. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A lonely Part of the Forest.

Enter AARON, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He that had wit would think that I had none,
To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,

Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest [Hides the gold.
That have their alms out of the empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad, [boast?
When every thing doth make a gleeful
The birds chant melody on every bush;
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun; [ing wind
The green leaves quiver with the cool-
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground: [sit,
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tuned horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down and mark their yelling noise; [posed
And, after conflict such as was sup-
The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd, [surprised,
When with a happy storm they were
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds
Be unto us as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine:
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence and my cloudy melancholy,
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls
Even as an adder when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution?
No, madam, these are no venereal signs: [hand,
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,
This is the day of doom for Bassianus:
His Philomel must lose her tongue today,
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood. [pray thee,
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll. [espied;
Now question me no more; we are
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty, [struction.
Which dreads not yet their lives' de-

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great empress; Bassianus comes: [thy sons
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be. [Exit.

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal emperess, [troop?
Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming
Or is it Dian, habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy groves
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps! [had,
Had I the power that some say Dian
Thy temples should be planted presently [hounds
With horns, as was Actæon's; and the
Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle emperess, [horning;
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in
And to be doubted that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments:
Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day! [stag.
'Tis pity they should take him for a

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimmerian [hue,
Doth make your honour of his body's
Spotted, detested, and abominable.
Why are you sequester'd from all your train, [ly steed,
Dismounted from your snow-white good-
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot, [Moor,
Accompanied but with a barbarous
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness.—I pray you, let us hence,
And let her joy her raven-colour'd love;
This valley fits the purpose passing well.
Bas. The king my brother shall have note of this.
Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long:
Good king, to be so mightily abused!
Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!
Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?
Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?
These two have ticed me hither to this place:
A barren detested vale, you see, it is;
The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'ercome with moss and baleful mistletoe:
Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven:
And when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night,
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,
Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body hearing it
Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me they would bind me here
Unto the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death:
And then they called me foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ear did hear to such effect:
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed.
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.
Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son. [Stabs BASSIANUS.
Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.
[Also stabs BASSIANUS, who dies.
Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous Tamora,
For no name fits thy nature but thy own!
Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know, my boys,
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.
Dem. Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her;
First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw:
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope braves your mightiness:
And shall she carry this unto her grave?
Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.
Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.
Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.
Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.
Lav. O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face,—
Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her!
Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.
Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory
To see her tears; but be your heart to them
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.
Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?
O, do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee;
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble;
Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:
[To CHIRON] Do thou entreat her show a woman pity.
Chi. What! wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?
Lav. 'Tis true; the raven doth not hatch a lark:
Yet have I heard,—O, could I find it now!—

The lion, moved with pity, did endure
To have his princely paws pared all away:
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:
O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful!

Tam. I know not what it means: away with her!

Lav. O, let me teach thee! for my father's sake,
That gave thee life, when well he might have slain thee,
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,
Even for his sake am I pitiless.
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain,
To save your brother from the sacrifice;
But fierce Andronicus would not relent:
Therefore, away with her, and use her as you will;
The worse to her, the better loved of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place!
For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long;
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'st thou, then? fond woman, let me go.

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing more
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell:
O, keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
Where never man's eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:
No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.

Dem. Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

Lav. No grace? no womanhood? Ah, beastly creature!
The blot and enemy to our general name!
Confusion fall—

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. —Bring thou her husband:
This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[DEMETRIUS throws the body of BASSIANUS into the pit; then exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, dragging off LAVINIA.

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see that you make her sure.
Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronici be made away.
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull deflower. [Exit.

Re-enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before:
Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.

Mart. And mine, I promise you; were't not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile. [Falls into the pit.

Quin. What, art thou fall'n? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is covered with rude-growing briers,
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood as fresh as morning dew distill'd on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me.
Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. O brother, with the dismall'st object hurt that ever eye with sight made heart lament!

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find them here,
That he thereby may give a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother. [Exit.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out from this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?

Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear;
A chilling sweet o'erruns my trembling joints:
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold

The thing whereat it trembles by surmise:
O, tell me how it is; for ne'er till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.
Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.
Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?
Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of this pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus
When he by night lay bathed in maiden blood.
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand—
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath—
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.
Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.
Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.
Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below:
Thou canst not come to me: I come to thee. [Falls in.

Enter SATURNINUS with AARON.

Sat. Along with me: I'll see what hole is here,
And what he is that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?
Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.
Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost but jest:
He and his lady both are at the lodge
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'Tis not an hour since I left him there.
Mart. We know not where you left him all alive; but, out, alas! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord the king?
Sat. Here, Tamora; though grieved with killing grief.
Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus? [search my wound:
Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound:
Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.
Tam. [Giving a letter.] Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,
The complot of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.
Sat. [Reads.]

'An if we miss to meet him handsomely,—
Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him:
Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward
Among the nettles at the elder-tree
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.'

O Tamora! was ever heard the like?
This is the pit, and this the elder-tree.
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out here.
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.
Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.
Sat. [To TITUS.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,
Have here bereft my brother of his life.
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison:
There let them bide until we have devised
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.
Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!
How easily murder is discovered!
Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accursed, if the fault be proved in them,—
Sat. If it be proved! you see it is apparent.

Who found this letter ? Tamora, was it you ? [up.
Tam. Andronicus himself did take it
Tit. I did, my lord : yet let me be their bail ; [vow
For, by my father's reverend tomb, I
They shall be ready at your highness' will [lives.
To answer their suspicion with their
Sat. Thou shalt not bail them : see thou follow me.
Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers : [is plain ;
Let them not speak a word ; the guilt
For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.
Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king : [enough.
Fear not thy sons ; they shall do well
Tit. Come, Lucius, come ; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravished ; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,
Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.
Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so, [scribe.
An if thy stumps will let thee play the
Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrowl.
Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.
Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash ; [walks.
And so let's leave her to her silent
Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.
Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.
[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Horns winded within. Enter MARCUS, from hunting.

Marc. Who's this ? my niece, that flies away so fast !
Cousin, a word ; where is your husband ?
If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me ! [down,
If I do wake, some planet strike me
That I may slumber in eternal sleep !
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands [body bare

Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind : [thee ;

For such a sight will blind a father's

Do not draw back, for we will mourn
O, could our mourning ease thy misery ! [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the place of execution; TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers ! noble tribunes, stay ! [spent
For pity of mine age, whose youth was
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept ; [rel shed ;
For all my blood in Rome's great quar-
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd ; [you see
And for these bitter tears, which now
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks ;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.
For two-and-twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed.
[Lieth down ; the Senators, etc., pass by him, and Exeunt.
For these, good tribunes, in the dust I write [sad tears.
My heart's deep languor and my soul's
Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite ;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush. [rain,
O earth, I will befriend thee more with

In winter with warm tears I'll melt the
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face, [blood.
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons'

Enter LUCIUS, with his sword drawn.

O reverend tribunes ! gentle, aged men !
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death ;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain : [by ;
The tribunes hear you not ; no man is
And you recount your sorrows to a stone. [let me plead.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers
Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you,— [hears you speak.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man : if they did hear, [did mark,
They would not mark me ; or if they
They would not pity me ; yet plead I must,
All bootless unto them. [stones ;
Therefore I tell my sorrows to the

Yet in some sort they're better than
For that they will not intercept my tale : [feet
When I do weep, they humbly at my
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me ; [weeds,
And, were they but attired in grave
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones ;
A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Rises.
But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn ?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death : [nounced
For which attempt the judges have pro-
My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man ! they have befriended thee. [ceive
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not per-
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers ?
Tigers must prey ; and Rome affords no prey [then,
But me and mine : how happy art thou
From these devourers to be banished !
But who comes with our brother Marcus here ?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep ;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break :
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me ? let me see it then.

Marc. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.
Luc. Ah me, this object kills me!
Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her.
Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
What fool hath added water to the sea,
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
My grief was at the height before thou camest;
And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds.
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
For they have fought for Rome, and all my use:
In bootless prayer have they been held in vain;
And they have nursed this woe, in feeding life;
Now all the service I require of them
Is, that the one will help to cut the other.
'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands;
For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.
Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?
Marc. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts,
That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear! done this deed?
Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?
Marc. O, thus I found her, straying in the park,
Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer
That hath received some unrecuring wound.
Tit. It was my deer; and he that wounded her
Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a rock
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea;
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man;
And here my brother, weeping at my woes:
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
It would have madded me: what shall I do
Now I behold thy lively body so?
Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears;
Nor tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
Thy husband he is dead; and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
Look, Marcus! ah, son Lucius, look on her!
When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.
Marc. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband;
Perchance because she knows them innocent.
Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,
Because the law have ta'en revenge on them.—
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.—
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease:
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,
Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd, as meadows, yet not dry,
With miry slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows
Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,
Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come.
Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at your grief,
See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.
Marc. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry thine eyes.
Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,

For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs: [she say
Had she a tongue to speak, now would
That to her brother which I said to thee: [bewet,
His napkin, with his true tears all
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O, what a sympathy of woe is this,
As far from help as Limbo is from bliss!

Enter AARON.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor [love thy sons,
Sends thee this word,—that, if thou
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king: he for the same [alive;
Will send thee hither both thy sons
And that shall be the ransom for their fault. [Aaron!

Tit. O gracious emperor! O gentle
Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise? [emperor
With all my heart, I'll send the
My hand: [off?
Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it

Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine,
That hath thrown down so many enemies, [the turn:
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve
My youth can better spare my blood than you:
And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
O, none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle; let it serve [death;
To ransom my two nephews from their
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along, [come.
For fear they die before their pardon

Marc. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go!

Tit. Sirs, strive no more; such wither'd herbs as these
Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine. [thought thy son,

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be
Let me redeem my brothers both from death. [mother's care,

Marc. And, for our father's sake, and
Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Marc. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both: [mine.
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee

Aar. [Aside.] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.

[He cuts off TITUS' hand.

Re-enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Now stay your strife: what shall be is dispatch'd.
Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him it was a hand that warded him [it;
From thousand dangers; bid him bury
More hath it merited; that let it have.
As for my sons, say I account of them

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter AARON, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, at one door; and at another door, young LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver us.
Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.
Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus.
[Aside] And pray the Roman gods confound you both!
Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: what's the news?
Boy. [Aside.] That you are both decipher'd, that's the news,
For villains mark'd with rape. [Aloud] May it please you;
My grandsire, well-advised, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury
To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say;
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that, whenever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well:
And so I leave you both: [Aside] like bloody villains.

Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.
Tit. Ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou done? [rus' horns.
See, see, thou hast shot off one of Tau-
Marc. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot,
The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock [in the court;
That down fell both the Ram's horns
And who should find them but the empress' villain?
She laugh'd, and told the Moor he should not choose
But give them to his master for a present.
Tit. Why, there it goes: God give his lordship joy!

Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons in it.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come. [letters?
Sirrah, what tidings? have you any
Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clo. O, the gibbet-maker! he says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven! alas, sir, I never came there: God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the emperial's men.

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither: make no more ado,
But give your pigeons to the emperor:
By me thou shalt have justice at his hands. [for thy charges.
Hold, hold; meanwhile here's money
Give me pen and ink. Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? come, let me see it.
Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration;
For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant:
And when thou hast given it to the emperor, [says.
Knock at my door, and tell me what he

Clo. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, Lords, and Others; SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand that TITUS shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these! was ever seen
An Emperor of Rome thus overborne,
Troubled, confronted thus, and for the extent
Of egal justice used in such contempt?
My lords, you know, as do the mightful gods,
However these disturbers of our peace
Buzz in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd [sons
But even with law against the wilful
Of old Andronicus. And what an if
His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wreaks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress: [cury;
See, here's to Jove, and this to Mer-
This to Apollo; this to the god of war:
Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome! [senate,
What's this but libelling against the
And blazoning our injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice were.
But if I live, his feigned ecstasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know that justice lives [sleep,
In Saturninus' health; whom, if she
He'll so awake, as she in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives. [Saturnine,

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts, [age,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus'

The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, [scarr'd his heart;
Whose loss hath pierced him deep and
And rather comfort his distressed plight
Than prosecute the meanest or the best
For these contempts. [Aside] Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloze with all:
But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick, [wise,
Thy life-blood out: if Aaron now be
Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with us?

Clo. Yea, forsooth, an your mistership be emperial.

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.

Clo. 'Tis he. God and Saint Stephen give you good den: I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

[SATURNINUS reads the letter.

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.

Clo. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hanged.

Clo. Hanged! by'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end.

[Exit, guarded.

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs!
Shall I endure this monstrous villany?
I know from whence this same device proceeds: [sons,
May this be borne? As if his traitorous

Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;
Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege:
For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughter-man;
Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

What news with thee, Æmilius?

Æmil. Arm, arm, my lord! Rome never had more cause.
The Goths have gather'd head, and with a power
Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,
They hither march amain, under conduct
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths? [head

And they have wish'd that Lucius were

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Plains near Rome.

Enter LUCIUS and an Army of Goths, with Drum and Colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends, [Rome,
I have received letters from great

And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness, [wrongs;
Imperious, and impatient of your

Sec. Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd
To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall.
I made unto the noise; when soon I heard [discourse:
The crying babe controll'd with this
'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam! [thou art,
Did not thy hue bewray whose brat
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look, [emperor:
Villain, thou mightst have been an

Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's Surprised him suddenly, and brought

To use as you think needful of the man.

A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder.
[A ladder brought, which AARON is made to ascend.
Aar. Lucius, save the child,
And bear it from me to the emperess.
If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear:
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,

I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you all!'
Luc. Say on: and if it please me which thou speak'st,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.
Aar. An if it please thee! why, assure thee, Lucius, [speak;
'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,

'Twas her two sons that murder'd
They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,
And cut her hands, and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.
Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?
Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd; and 'twas
Trim sport for them that had the doing of it. [like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them: [mother,

To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue!

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

Third Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome
Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Welcome, Æmilius: what's the news from Rome? [of the Goths,

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes
The Roman emperor greets you all by me; [arms,
And, for he understands you are in
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages,
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

First Goth. What says our general?

Luc. Æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come. March away.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. Before TITUS' House.

Enter TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,
I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps, [venge;
To ruminate strange plots of dire re-
Tell him Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies.
[They knock.

Enter TITUS, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation? [door,
Is it your trick to make me ope the
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect?
You are deceived: for what I mean to do [down;
See here in bloody lines I have set
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee. [grace my talk,

Tit. No, not a word; how can I
Wanting a hand to give it action?
Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me.

Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines;
Witness these trenches made by grief and care;
Witness the tiring day and heavy night;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora:
Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou, sad man, I am not Tamora;
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:
I am Revenge; sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind, [foes.
By working wreakful vengeance on thy
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light;
Confer with me of murder and of death:
There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,

No vast obscurity or misty vale,
Where bloody murder or detested rape
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out,
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me,
To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands;
Now give some surance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels;
And then I'll come and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globe.
Provide thee proper palfreys, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And when thy car is loaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel
Trot, like a servile footman, all day long,
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east
Until his very downfall in the sea:
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers and come with me.

Tit. Are these thy ministers? what are they call'd?

Tam. Rapine and Murder; therefore called so,
'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the empress' sons they are,
And you the empress! but we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee;
And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,
I will embrace thee in it by and by.

[Exit above.

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy:
Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius his son;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter TITUS below.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:
Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house:
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too:
How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor:
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
For well I wot the empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor;
And, would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil:
But welcome, as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be revenged on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong,
And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome;
And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer.—
Go thou with him; and when it is his hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him; he's a ravisher.—
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court
There is a queen, attended by a Moor;
Well mayst thou know her by thy own proportion,
For up and down she doth resemble thee:
I pray thee, do on them some violent death;
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.

But would it please thee, good Andronicus, [son,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths, [house:
And bid him come and banquet at thy

And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel, [heart.
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me;
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to her sons.] What say you, boys? will you abide with him,
Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus; Revenge now goes
To lay a complot to betray thy foes.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The empress' sons

Chi. Villains, forbear! we are the empress' sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.
Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word.
Is he sure bound? look that you bind them fast.

Re-enter TITUS, with LAVINIA; she bearing a basin, and he a knife.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.
Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me; [utter.

And with your blood and it I'll make
And of the paste a coffin I will rear,
And make two pasties of your shameful heads;
And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam, [increase.

Let me go grind their bones to powder

And in that paste let their vile heads be baked.

SCENE III.—The Same. Court of TITUS' House. A Banquet set out.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and Goths, with AARON, prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind
That I repair to Rome, I am content.
First Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.
Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor,
This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him, [face,
Till he be brought unto the empress'
For testimony of her foul proceedings:
And see the ambush of our friends be strong; [us.

The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with ÆMILIUS, Senators, Tribunes, and Others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one? [self a sun?
Luc. What boots it thee to call thy-
Marc. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle;
These quarrels must be quietly debated.
The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome:
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.
Sat. Marcus, we will.
[Hautboys sound. The Company sit down at table.

Enter TITUS, dressed like a Cook, LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and Others. TITUS places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen;
Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius; [be poor,
And welcome, all: although the cheer
'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it. [Andronicus?
Sat. Why art thou thus attired,
Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,
To entertain your highness and your empress. [Andronicus.
Tam. We are beholden to you, good
Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this:
Was it well done of rash Virginius
To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforced, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord?

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,
And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me, most wretched, to perform the like.
Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;
And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die! [Kills LAVINIA.

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.
I am as woeful as Virginius was,
And have a thousand times more cause than he
To do this outrage: and it is now done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat? will't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius:
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue;
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie;
Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.
'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point. [Kills TAMORA.

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed! [Kills TITUS.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?
There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed!

[Kills SATURNINUS. A great tumult. MARCUS, LUCIUS, and their Partisans, go up into the balcony.

Marc. You sad-faced men, people and sons of Rome,
By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O, let me teach you how to knit again
This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body;
Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,
And she whom mighty kingdoms court'sy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate castaway,
Do shameful execution on herself.
But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,—
[To LUCIUS] Speak, Rome's dear friend;
as erst our ancestor,
When with his solemn tongue he did discourse
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear
The story of that baleful burning night
When subtle Greeks surprised King Priam's Troy;
Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in
That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.
My heart is not compact of flint nor steel;
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,
But floods of tears will drown my oratory,
And break my very utterance, even i' the time
When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind commiseration.
Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you,
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdered our emperor's brother;
And they it were that ravished our sister:
For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded,
Our father's tears despised, and basely cozen'd
Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel out,
And sent her enemies unto the grave.
Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Rome's enemies;

Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And open'd their arms to embrace me as a friend.
I am the turn'd forth, be it known to you,
That have preserved her welfare in my blood;
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body.
Alas, you know I am no vaunter, I;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just and full of truth.
But, soft! methinks I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me;
For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak. Behold this child;

[Pointing to the Child in the arms of an Attendant.

Of this was Tamora delivered;
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes:
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge
These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you, Romans?
Have we done aught amiss, show us wherein,
And, from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronici
Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak; and if you say we shall,
Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Æmil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,
And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our emperor; for well I know
The common voice do cry it shall be so.

All. Lucius, all hail, Rome's royal emperor!

Marc. [To Attendants.] Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house,
And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudged some direful slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.

[Exeunt Attendants.

MARCUS, LUCIUS, and the Others descend.

All. Lucius, all hail, Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms and wipe away her woe!
But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,
For nature puts me to a heavy task;
Stand all aloof;—but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.
O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,

[Kissing TITUS.

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face,
The last true duties of thy noble son!

Marc. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:
O, were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us
To melt in showers: thy grandsire loved thee well:
Many a time he danced thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet and agreeing with thine infancy;
In that respect then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring,
Because kind nature doth require it so:
Friends should associate friends in grief and woe:
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
Would I were dead, so you did live again!

Luc. O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Re-enter Attendants, with AARON.

Æmil. You sad Andronici, have done with woes:
Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him;

There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food :
If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom : [earth.
Some stay to see him fasten'd in the
Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb ?
I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
I should repent the evils I have done :
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will :
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.
Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence, [grave :
And give him burial in his father's
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mourning weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial ;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey : [pity ;
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of
And, being so, shall have like want of pity. [Moor,
See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning : [state,
Then, afterwards, to order well the
That like events may ne'er it ruinate.

[Exeunt.

PROLOGUE.

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Two households, both alike in dignity, [scene,
In fair Verona, where we lay our
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny, [unclean.
Where civil blood makes civil hands
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes [life;
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their
Whose misadventured piteous overthrows [parents' strife.
Do with their death bury their
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage; [attend,

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Verona. A Public Place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers. [we'll draw.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler,

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand: therefore, if thou art moved, thou runnest away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. 'Tis true; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand: and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues.

Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel; I will back thee.

Gre. How! turn thy back and run?

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Enter ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. [Aside to GRE.] Is the law on our side, if I say ay?

Gre. No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir! no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Gre. [Aside to SAM.] Say 'better:' here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy swashing blow.

[They fight.

Enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. Part, fools! [what you do.
Put up your swords; you know not

[Beats down their swords.

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?
Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death. [up thy sword,

Ben. I do but keep the peace: put
Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace! I hate the word,
As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:
Have at thee, coward! [They fight.

Enter several of both Houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with clubs.

Citizens. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down!
Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET, in his gown; and LADY CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long sword, ho!

Lady Cap. A crutch, a crutch! why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say! Old Montague is come,
And flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet!—Hold me not, let me go.

Lady Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE ESCALUS, with his Train.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, [steel,—
Profaners of this neighbour-stained
Will they not hear?—What, ho! you men, you beasts, [rage
That quench the fire of your pernicious
With purple fountains issuing from your veins, [hands
On pain of torture, from those bloody
Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground, [prince.
And hear the sentence of your moved
Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet, and Montague,
Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets,
And made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their grave beseeming ornaments,
To wield old partisans, in hands as old,
Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate:

If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time, all the rest depart away:
You, Capulet, shall go along with me;
And, Montague, come you this afternoon,
To know our further pleasure in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.
Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.
[Exeunt all but MONTAGUE, LADY MONTAGUE, and BENVOLIO.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?
Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?
Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,
And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:
I drew to part them: in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepared;
Which, as he breathed defiance to my ears,
He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn:
Whilst we were interchanging thrusts and blows,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part,
Till the prince came, who parted either part.
Lady Mon. O, where is Romeo? saw you him to-day?
Right glad I am he was not at this fray.
Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drave me to walk abroad;
Where, underneath the grove of sycamore
That westward rooteth from the city's side,
So early walking did I see your son:
Towards him I made; but he was ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring his affections by my own,
Which then most sought where most might not be found,
Being one too many by my weary self,
Pursued my humour, not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.
Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:
But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself;
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.
Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?
Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him.
Ben. Have you importuned him by any means?
Mon. Both by myself and many other friends:
But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself—I will not say how true—
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure as know.

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. See, where he comes: so please you, step aside;
I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.
Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.
[Exeunt MONTAGUE and Lady.
Ben. Good-morrow, cousin.
Rom. Is the day so young?
Ben. But new struck nine.
Rom Ay me! sad hours seem long.
Was that my father that went hence so fast?
Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?
Rom. Not having that which, having, makes them short.
Ben. In love?
Rom. Out—
Ben. Of love?
Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.
Ben. Alas, that Love, so gentle in his view,

Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof! [muffled still,
Rom. Alas, that Love, whose view is Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will! [fray was here?
Where shall we dine? O me! What Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.
Here's much to do with hate, but more with love: [hate!
Why, then, O brawling love! O loving O any thing, of nothing first create!
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health! [is!
Still-waking sleep, that is not what it This love feel I, that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?
Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.
Rom. Good heart, at what?
Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.
Rom. Why, such is love's transgression. [breast;
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest [hast shown

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall and a preserving sweet.
Farewell, my coz. [Going.
Ben. Soft! I will go along:
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong. [not here;
Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am This is not Romeo; he's some other where. [you love.
Ben. Tell me in sadness, whom she is
Rom. What, shall I groan and tell thee?
Ben. Groan! why, no;
But sadly tell me who.
Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will:
Ah, word ill urged to one that is so ill!
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.
Ben. I aim'd so near when I supposed you loved.
Rom. A right good mark-man! And she's fair I love.
Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.
Rom. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll not be hit [wit;
With Cupid's arrow; she hath Dian's
And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd, [lives unharm'd.
From Love's weak childish bow she
She will not stay the siege of loving terms, [eyes,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:
O, she is rich in beauty, only poor,
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.
Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste?
Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;
For beauty, starved with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love; and in that vow
Do I live dead that live to tell it now.
Ben. Be ruled by me; forget to think of her. [get to think.
Rom. O, teach me how I should for-
Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.
Rom. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more:
These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows, [the fair;
Being black, put us in mind they hide
He that is strucken blind cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost: [fair,
Show me a mistress that is passing

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I, [think,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I
For men so old as we to keep the peace.
Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;

And pity 'tis you lived at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit? [said before:

Cap. But saying o'er what I have
My child is yet a stranger in the world;
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years: [pride
Let two more summers wither in their
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made. [but she,
The earth hath swallow'd all my hopes
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart;
My will to her consent is but a part;

Such as I love; and you, among the store, [number more.
One more, most welcome, makes my

Earth-treading stars that make dark
Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight [night
Among fresh female buds shall you this
Inherit at my house; hear all, all see,
And like her most whose merit most shall be: [being one
Which on more view, of many mine
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me. [To Servant, giving a paper] Go, sirrah, trudge about [sons out
Through fair Verona; find those per-
Whose names are written there, and to them say,
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt CAPULET and PARIS.

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here! It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons whose name are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned.—In good time.

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish; [turning;
Turn giddy, and be holp by backward
One desperate grief cures with another's languish: [eye,
Take thou some new infection to thy
And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plantain-leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is; [food,
Shut up in prison, kept without my
Whipp'd and tormented, and—Good den, good fellow.

Serv. God gi' good den. I pray, sir, can you read? [misery.

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my

Serv. Perhaps you have learned it without book: but, I pray, can you read any thing you see?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly: rest you merry!

Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read. [Reads.

'Signior Martino and his wife and daughters; County Anselme and his beauteous sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signor Placentio and his lovely nieces; Mercutio and his brother Valentine; mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; my fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valentio and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio and the lively Helena.'

A fair assembly: whither should they come?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper; to our house.

Rom. Whose house?

Serv. My master's.

Rom. Indeed, I should have ask'd you that before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: my master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry!

[Exit.

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's [lovest,
Sups the fair Rosaline whom thou so

Go thither, and with unattainted eye
Compare her face with some that I shall show, [a crow.
And I will make thee think thy swan

Maintains such falsehood, then turn
And these, who, often drown'd, could never die, [liars!
Transparent heretics, be burnt for
One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun [world begun.

Herself poised with herself in either eye:
But in those crystal scales let there be weigh'd [maid

And she shall scant show well that now
Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,
But to rejoice in splendour of mine own. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me. [twelve year old,
Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead, at
I bade her come.—What, lamb! what, lady-bird! [what, Juliet!
God forbid!—Where's this girl?—

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now! who calls?
Nurse. Your mother,
Jul. Madam, I am here. What is your will?
Lady Cap. This is the matter. Nurse, give leave awhile,
We must talk in secret:—nurse, come back again; [counsel.
I have remember'd me, thou's hear our
Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age. [unto an hour.
Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age
Lady Cap. She's not fourteen.
Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,—
And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,— [now
She is not fourteen. How long is it
To Lammas-tide?
Lady Cap. A fortnight and odd days.
Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, [fourteen.
Come Lammas-eve at night shall she be
Susan and she,—God rest all Christian souls!— [God;
Were of an age: well, Susan is with
She was too good for me:—but, as I said, [fourteen;
On Lammas-eve at night shall she be
That shall she, marry; I remember it well. [years;
'Tis since the earthquake now eleven
And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,— [day:
Of all the days of the year, upon that
For I had then laid wormwood to my dug, [wall;
Sitting in the sun under the dove-house
My lord and you were then at Mantua:—
Nay, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said,
When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple [fool,
Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty
To see it tetchy and fall out with the dug! [need, I trow,
Shake, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no
To bid me trudge.
And since that time it is eleven years;
For then she could stand alone; nay, by the rood, [about;
She could have run and waddled all
For even the day before, she broke her brow: [his soul!
And then my husband—God be with
'A was a merry man—took up the child:
'Yea,' quoth he, 'dost thou fall upon thy face? [hast more wit;
Thou wilt fall backward when thou
Wilt thou not, Jule?' and, by my holidame, ['Ay.'
The pretty wretch left crying, and said
To see now how a jest shall come about!
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it: 'Wilt thou not, Jule?' quoth he;

And, pretty fool, it stinted, and said
'Ay.'
Lady Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.
Nurse. Yes, madam: yet I cannot choose but laugh, ['Ay:'
To think it should leave crying, and say
And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow [stone;
A bump as big as a young cockerel's
A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly:
'Yea,' quoth my husband, 'fall'st upon
thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!
Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er
I nursed:
An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.
Lady Cap. Marry, that 'marry' is the very theme [Juliet,
I came to talk of. Tell me, daughter

I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom
Lady Cap. Well, think of marriage
now; younger than you,
Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers. By my count, [years
I was your mother much upon these
That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief;
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.
Nurse. A man, young lady! lady,
such a man [wax.
As all the world—why, he's a man of Lady Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.
Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith,
a very flower.
Lady Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?
This night you shall behold him at our feast; [face

But no more deep will I endart mine
Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and every thing in extremity.
I must hence to wait; I beseech you,
follow straight.
Lady Cap. We follow thee. [*Exit

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. —The Same. A Street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO,
with five or six other Masquers, and Torch-bearers.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?
Or shall we on without apology?
Ben. The date is out of such prolixity:
We'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a scarf,
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;
Nor no without-book prologue, faintly

SCENE V.—The Same. A Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

First Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? He shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

Sec. Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing.

First Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate. Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell.—Antony, and Potpan!

Sec. Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

First Serv. You are looked for and called for, asked for and sought for, in the great chamber.

Third Serv. We cannot be here and there too. Cheerly, boys; be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind.

Enter CAPULET, with JULIET and Others of his House, meeting the Guests and Masquers.

Cap. Gentlemen, welcome! ladies that have their toes
Unplagued with corns will have a bout with you.
Ah ha, my mistresses! which of you all
Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty, she, [ye now?
I'll swear, hath corns; am I come near You're welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day
That I have worn a visor, and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please: 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone:
You are welcome, gentlemen!—Come, musicians, play.
A hall, a hall! give room! and foot it, girls.
[Music plays, and they dance.
More light, ye knaves; and turn the tables up, [too hot.
And quench the fire, the room is grown
Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet;
For you and I are past our dancing days:
How long is't now since last yourself and I
Were in a masque?

Sec. Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.

Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much:
'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five-and-twenty years; and then we masqued.

Sec. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder, sir;

His son is thirty.
Cap. Will you tell me that?
His son was but a ward two years ago.
Rom. [To a Servant.] What lady's that, which doth enrich the hand

To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.
Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! wherefore storm you so?
Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.
Cap. Young Romeo is't?
Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.
Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone;
He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him

Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.
Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.
Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's effect I take.
Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purged. [Kissing her.
Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.
Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urged!

Give me my sin again.
Jul. You kiss by the book.
Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.
Rom. What is her mother?
Nurse. Marry, bachelor,
Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous: [withal;
I nursed her daughter, that you talk'd

Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is yon gentleman?
Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio. [of door?
Jul. What's he that now is going out
Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruchio.
Jul. What's he that follows there, that would not dance?
Nurse. I know not. [married,
Jul. Go, ask his name. If he be
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.
Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
The only son of your great enemy.
Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate! [too late!
Too early seen unknown, and known
Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed enemy.
Nurse. What's this? what's this?
Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now
Of one I danced withal.
[One calls within, 'Juliet.'
Nurse. Anon, anon!
Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Verona. A Lane by the Wall of CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here?
Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.

SCENE II.—The Same. CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars that never felt a wound.

[JULIET appears above at a window.

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon, [grief,
Who is already sick and pale with
That thou her maid art far more fair than she:
Be not her maid, since she is envious;
Her vestal livery is but sick and green,
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.
It is my lady; O, it is my love!
O, that she knew she were!
She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that?
Her eye discourses; I will answer it.
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks: [heaven,

Jul. Ay me!

Rom. She speaks:
O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art. [my head,
As glorious to this night, being o'er
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wondering eyes
Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father and refuse thy name;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. [Aside.] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy;
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague. [foot,

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am: My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee;
Had I it written, I would tear the word.
Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound:
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?
Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.
Jul. How camest thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?
The orchard walls are high and hard to climb; [thou art,

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;
For stony limits cannot hold love out, And what love can do, that dares love attempt;
Therefore thy kinsmen are no let to me.
Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.
Rom. Alack, there lies more peril in thine eye
Than twenty of their swords: look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity.
Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.
Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their sight;
And, but thou love me, let them find me here: [hate,
My life were better ended by their Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.
Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?
Rom. By love, that first did prompt me to inquire;
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—
Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in thee,
I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be
Ere one can say 'It lightens.' Sweet, good night!
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.
Good night, good night! as sweet repose and rest
Come to thy heart as that within my breast!
Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?
Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?
Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.
Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it:
And yet I would it were to give again.
Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?
Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have:
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.
I hear some noise within; dear love, adieu! [Nurse calls within.
Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.
Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard,
Being in night, all this is but a dream.
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter Juliet, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night indeed.
If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where and what time thou wilt perform the rite;
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.
Nurse. [Within.] Madam!
Jul. I come, anon.—But if thou mean'st not well,
I do beseech thee,—
Nurse. [Within.] Madam!
Jul. By and by, I come:—
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:
To-morrow will I send.
Rom. So thrive my soul,—
Jul. A thousand times good night! [Exit.
Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.
Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books;
But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.
[Retiring slowly.

Re-enter Juliet, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O, for a falconer's voice,
To lure this tassel-gentle back again!
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine
With repetition of my Romeo's name.
Romeo! [my name:
Rom. It is my soul that calls upon
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!
Jul. Romeo!
Rom. My dear?
Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?
Rom. At the hour of nine.
Jul. I will not fail: 'tis twenty years till then.
I have forgot why I did call thee back.
Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.
Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Remembering how I love thy company.
Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other home but this.
Jul. 'Tis almost morning; I would have thee gone: [bird;
And yet no further than a wanton's
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves, [again,
And with a silk thread plucks it back

So loving-jealous of his liberty.
Rom. I would I were thy bird.
Jul. Sweet, so would I:
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow
That I shall say good night till it be morrow. [Exit.
Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!
Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell,
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. [Exit.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good-morrow, father!
Fri. L. Benedicite!
What early tongue so sweet saluteth me? [head
Young son, it argues a distemper'd
So soon to bid good-morrow to thy bed:
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye, [lie;
And where care lodges, sleep will never
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure
Thou art up-roused by some distemperature;
Or if not so, then here I hit it right,
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night. [rest was mine.
Rom. That last is true; the sweeter
Fri. L. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline?
Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no; [woe.
I have forgot that name and that name's
Fri. L. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?
Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me, [remedies
That's by me wounded: both our

Rom. Then plainly know my heart's
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combined, save what thou must combine [and how,
By holy marriage: when, and where,
We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow, [pray,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I

Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline: [sentence then:

Fri. L. For doting, not for loving,
Rom. And badest me bury love.
Fri. L. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have.
Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she whom I love now [allow;
Doth grace for grace and love for love
The other did not so.
Fri. L. O, she knew well
Thy love did read by rote and could not spell. [me,
But come, young waverer, come, go with
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.
Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.
Fri. L. Wisely, and slow; they stumble that run fast.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be? Came he not home to-night?
Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.
Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline, Torments him so that he will sure run mad. [Capulet,
Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman to old Hath sent a letter to his father's house.
Mer. A challenge, on my life.
Ben. Romeo will answer it.
Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter.
Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.
Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead! stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft: and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?
Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?
Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you. O, he is the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause: ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!
Ben. The what?
Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents! 'By Jesu, a very good blade! a very tall man! a very good whore!' Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-mois, who stand so much on the new form that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bons, their bons!

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.
Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring: O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura to his lady was but a kitchen-wench; marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her; Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, hildings and harlots; Thisbe, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose. Signior Romeo, bon jour!

there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good-morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning, to court'sy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowered.

Mer. Well said: follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out thy pump, that when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain after the wearing sole singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wit faints.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done; for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for any thing when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word 'broad;' which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O, thou art deceived; I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail! [smock.

Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon!

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer of the two.

Nurse. God ye good-morrow, gentlemen. [woman.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentle-

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you!

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made for himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said; 'for himself to mar,' quoth 'a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? very well took, i' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper. [ho!

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare,

sir, in a Lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent. [Sings.

'An old hare hoar,
And an old hare hoar,
Is very good meat in Lent:
But a hare that is hoar,
Is too much for a score,
When it hoars ere it be spent.'

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, [Singing] 'lady, lady, lady.'

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.

Nurse. Marry, farewell!—I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an 'a were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates. [To PETER] And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee—

Nurse. Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, Lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise
Some means to come to shrift this afternoon;
And there she shall at Friar Laurence' cell
Be shrived and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:
Within this hour my man shall be with thee,
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;
Which to the high top-gallant of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.
Farewell; commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee! Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,
Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing—O, there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R. is for the—No; I know it begins with some other letter—and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. [Exit ROMEO.] Peter!

Pet. Anon!

Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before, and apace. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;
In half an hour she promised to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him:—that's not so.—
O, she is lame! Love's heralds should be thoughts, [sun's beams,
Which ten times faster glide than the
Driving back shadows over louring hills: [draw Love,
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve [come.
Is three long hours; yet she is not
Had she affections and warm youthful blood,
She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy her to my sweet love,
And his to me:

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O God, she comes!—O honey nurse, what news? [man away.
Hast thou met with him? Send thy

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O Lord! why look'st thou sad?
Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily; [sweet news

Nurse. I am aweary; give me leave awhile. [have I had!
Fie, how my bones ache! what a jaunce
Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I thy news.
Nay, come, I pray thee, speak; good, good nurse, speak.
Nurse. Jesu, what haste! can you not stay awhile?
Do you not see that I am out of breath?
Jul. How art thou out of breath when thou hast breath
To say to me that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that; [stance:
Say either, and I'll stay the circum-
Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?
Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: he is not the flower of courtesy, but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench; serve God. What, have you dined at home?
Jul. No, no: but all this did I know before. [of that?
What says he of our marriage? what

Jul. Where is my mother! why, she is within; [thou repliest!
Where should she be? How oddly
'Your love says, like an honest gentleman,
Where is your mother?'
Nurse. O God's lady dear!
Are you so hot? marry, come up, I trow; [bones?
Is this the poultice for my aching

Jul. Hie to high fortune! Honest nurse, farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. L. So smile the heavens upon this holy act, [not!
That after-hours with sorrow chide us
Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can, [joy
It cannot countervail the exchange of
That one short minute gives me in her sight: [words,
Do thou but close our hands with holy
Then love-devouring death do what he dare;
It is enough I may but call her mine.
Fri. L. These violent delights have violent ends, [powder,
And in their triumph die; like fire and
Which as they kiss consume: the sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his own deliciousness
And in the taste confounds the appetite:
Therefore love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady. O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:
A lover may bestride the gossamer
That idles in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall; so light is vanity.
Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.
Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.
Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too much.
Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy [be more
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath [tongue
This neighbour air, and let rich music's
Unfold the imagined happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter,

Fri L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;
For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone
Till holy church incorporate two in one.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Verona. A Public Place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire:
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl; [blood stirring.
For now, these hot days, is the mad
Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that when he enters the confines of a tavern claps me his sword upon the table, and says 'God send me no need of thee!' and by the operation of the second cup draws it on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.
Ben. Am I like such a fellow?
Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy, and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.
Ben. And what to?
Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple!

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Enter TYBALT and Others.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.—
Gentlemen, good den: a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us? couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving? [Romeo,—

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with

Mer. Consort! what, dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men: [place,
Either withdraw unto some private
Or reason coldly of your grievances,
Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze; I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir: here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery:
Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower; [him 'man.'
Your worship, in that sense, may call

Tyb. Romeo, the love I bear thee can afford [villain.
No better term than this—thou art a

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee [rage
Doth much excuse the appertaining
To such a greeting: villain am I none;
Therefore farewell; I see thou know'st me not. [injuries

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the
That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw. [thee,

Rom. I do protest I never injured
But love thee better than thou canst devise, [love:
Till thou shalt know the reason of my
And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender
As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
Alla stoccata carries it away.
[Draws.
Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Drawing.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.

Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons:— [rage!
Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this out-
Tybalt—Mercutio—the prince expressly hath
Forbidden bandying in Verona streets:
Hold, Tybalt!—good Mercutio!

[TYBALT under ROMEO'S arm stabs MERCUTIO, and flies with his followers.

Mer. I am hurt;—
A plague o' both your houses!—I am sped:—
Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis enough.
Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me tomorrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world. A plague o' both your houses! 'Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!—Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, [your houses!
Or I shall faint.—A plague o' both
They have made worms' meat of me:
I have it, and soundly too:—your houses!

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally, [hurt
My very friend, hath got his mortal
In my behalf; my reputation stain'd
With Tybalt's slander,—Tybalt, that an hour [Juliet,
Hath been my kinsman: O sweet
Thy beauty hath made me effeminate,
And in my temper soften'd valour's steel!

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio 's dead! [clouds,
That gallant spirit hath aspired the
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend;
This but begins the woe others must end. [back again.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt

Re-enter TYBALT.

Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain!
Away to heaven, respective lenity,
And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now!
Now, Tybalt, take the 'villain' back again [cutio's soul
That late thou gavest me; for Mer-
Is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for thine to keep him company:
Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here,
Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight; TYBALT falls.

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone!
The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:
Stand not amazed: the prince will doom thee death [away!
If thou art taken: hence! be gone!

Rom. O, I am Fortune's fool!

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit ROMEO.

Enter Citizens, etc.

First Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio? [he?
Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

First Cit. Up, sir, go with me;
I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter PRINCE, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and Others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray? [all

Ben. O noble prince, I can discover
The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl:
There lies the man, slain by young Romeo, [cutio.
That slew thy kinsman, brave Mer-

Lady Cap. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's child!
O prince! O cousin! husband! O, the blood is spill'd [art true,
Of my dear kinsman! Prince, as thou
For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.
O cousin, cousin! [bloody fray?

Prin. Benvolio, who began this

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;
Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him bethink [withal
How nice the quarrel was, and urged
Your high displeasure: all this uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd, [spleen
Could not take truce with the unruly
Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts [breast;
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's

Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one [hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,
'Hold, friends! friends, part!' and, swifter than his tongue,
His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath [whose arm
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt [fled;
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to 't they go like lightning; for, [ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain; [fly:
And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

Lady Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague; [not true:
Affection makes him false; he speaks
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife, [life.
And all those twenty could but kill one

His fault concludes but what the law should end,

My blood for your rude brawls doth lie
But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine [mine:

SCENE II.—The Same. CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds, [goner
Towards Phœbus' lodging: such a wag-
As Phaethon would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night, [Romeo
That runaway's eyes may wink, and
Leap to these arms, untalked of and unseen!
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own beauties; or, if love be blind, [night,
It best agrees with night. Come, civil
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match, [hoods:
Play'd for a pair of stainless maiden-
Hood my unmann'd blood bating in my cheeks
With thy black mantle; till strange love, grown bold,
Think true love acted simple modesty.
Come, night! come, Romeo! come thou day in night! [night
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back. [brow'd night,
Come, gentle night, come, loving, black-
Give me my Romeo; and, when he shall die, [stars,
Take him and cut him out in little
And he will make the face of heaven so fine [night,
That all the world will be in love with
And pay no worship to the garish sun.
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it; and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd: so tedious is this day
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child that hath new robes
And may not wear them. O, here comes my nurse,
And she brings news; and every tongue that speaks
But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.

Enter Nurse, with cords.

Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? the cords

That Romeo bade thee fetch?
Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords.
[Throws them down.
Jul. Ay me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands?
Nurse. Ah, well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!
We are undone, lady, we are undone!
Alack the day! he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!
Jul. Can heaven be so envious?
Nurse. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot.—O Romeo, Romeo!— [Romeo!
Who ever would have thought it?—
Jul. What devil art thou that dost torment me thus?
This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell. [but 'I,'
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou
And that bare vowel 'I' shall poison more [trice:
Than the death-darting eye of cocka-
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer 'I.'
If he be slain, say 'I;' or if not, no:
Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe. [with mine eyes,—
Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it
God save the mark!—here on his manly breast: [corse;
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood, [sight
All in gore blood: I swounded at the
Jul. O, break, my heart! poor bankrupt, break at once!
To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here; [bier!
And thou and Romeo press one heavy
Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead! [so contrary?
Jul. What storm is this that blows
Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead? [lord?
My dear-loved cousin, and my dearer
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom! [gone?
For who is living, if those two are
Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished.
Jul. O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood? [it did!
Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day,
Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face!
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven! wolvish-ravening lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain!
O Nature! what hadst thou to do in hell, [fiend
When thou didst bower the spirit of a
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?
Was ever book containing such vile matter [dwell
So fairly bound? O, that deceit should

Nurse. There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjured, [blers.
All forsworn, all naught, all dissem-
Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua vitæ: [make me old.
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows
Shame come to Romeo!
Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue
For such a wish! he was not born to shame: [sit;
Upon his brow shame is ashamed to
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth.
O, what a beast was I to chide at him!
Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?
Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it? [my cousin?
But wherefore, villain, didst thou kill
That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband: [spring;
Back, foolish tears, back to your native
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband: [then?
All this is comfort; wherefore weep I

Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's death, [fain;
That murder'd me: I would forget it
But, O, it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
'Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;' ['banished,'
That 'banished,' that one word
Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's death
Was woe enough, if it had ended there:
Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs, ['Tybalt's dead,'
Why follow'd not, when she said
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both, [moved?
Which modern lamentation might have
But with a rearward following Tybalt's death, [word,
'Romeo is banished,' to speak that
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet, [banished!'—
All slain, all dead.—'Romeo is
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound, [that woe sound.—
In that word's death; no words can

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears: mine shall be spent,
When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment. [are beguiled,
Take up those cords: poor ropes, you
Both you and I; for Romeo is exiled:
He made you for a highway to my bed;
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.
Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-bed;
And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead! [find Romeo

Nurse. Hie to your chamber; I'll
To comfort you: I wot well where he is. [night:
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence' cell.

Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true knight,
And bid him come to take his last farewell.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man:
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom? [my hand,
What sorrow craves acquaintance at
That I yet know not?

Fri. L. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom?

Fri. L. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips, [ment-
Not body's death, but body's banish.

Rom. Ha, banishment! be merciful, say 'death;'
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say 'banishment.' [banished:

Fri. L. Hence from Verona art thou
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide. [Verona walls,

Rom. There is no world without
But purgatory, torture, hell itself.
Hence-banished is banish'd from the world, ['banished'
And world's exile is death: then
Is death mis-term'd: calling death 'banishment,' [axe,
Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden
And smilest upon the stroke that murders me. [thankfulness!

Fri. L. O deadly sin! O rude unThy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince, [law,
Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the
And turn'd that black word death to banishment: [not.
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is here,
Where Juliet lives; and every cat and dog [thing,
And little mouse, every unworthy
Live here in heaven and may look on her;
But Romeo may not: more validity,

More honourable state, more courtship lives [seize
In carrion-flies than Romeo: they may
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not; he is banished:
Flies may do this, but I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished.
And say'st thou yet that exile is not death? [ground knife,
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But 'banished' to kill me?—'banished'? [hell;
O friar, the damned use that word in
Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd, [ished'?
To mangle me with that word 'ban-

Fri. L. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. L. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;
Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished! [philosophy!

Rom. Yet 'banished'? Hang up
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom, [more.
It helps not, it prevails not: talk no

Fri. L. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. L. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel:
Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou tear thy hair,
And fall upon the ground, as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave. [Knocking within.

Fri. L. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself.

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans
Mist-like infold me from the search of eyes. [Knocking.

Fri. L. Hark, how they knock!—Who's there?—Romeo, arise;
Thou wilt be taken.—Stay awhile!—Stand up; [Knocking.
Run to my study.—By and by!—God's will,
What simpleness is this!—I come, I come! [Knocking.
Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;
I come from Lady Juliet.

Fri. L. Welcome, then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar, [Romeo?
Where is my lady's lord, where's

Fri. L. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!

Fri. L. O woeful sympathy!
Piteous predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she,
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubbering. [a man:
Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand; [O?
Why should you fall into so deep an

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir! Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spakest thou of Juliet? how is it with her? [derer,
Doth she not think me an old mur-
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy [own?
With blood removed but little from her
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says [love?
My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;
And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,

And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.
Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman.—O, tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion.
[Drawing his sword.
Fri. L. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art:
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:
Unseemly woman in a seeming man!
Or ill-beseeming beast in seeming both!
Thou hast amazed me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady too that lives in thee,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?
Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet
In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst lose.
Fie, fie! thou shamest thy shape, thy love, thy wit;
Which, like an usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man;
Thy dear love sworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish;
Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skilless soldier's flask,
Is set on fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.
What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy too:
The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy friend,
And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:
A pack of blessings lights upon thy back;
Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbehaved and sullen wench,
Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love.
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;
But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.
Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:
Romeo is coming.
Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here all the night
To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.
Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.
Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir:
Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.
[Exit.
Rom. How well my comfort is revived by this!
Fri. L. Go hence; good night; and here stands all your state:
Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguised from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you that changes here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; good night.
Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief, so brief to part with thee:
Farewell.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fall'n out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter:
Look you, she loved her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I. Well, we were born to die.
'Tis very late; she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo.
Madam, good night: commend me to your daughter.

Lady Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow;
To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my child's love: I think she will be ruled
In all respects by me; nay, more, I doubt it not.
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;
And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—
But, soft! what day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon;
O' Thursday let it be: o' Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl.—
Will you ye ready? do you like this haste?
We'll keep no great ado,—a friend or two;
For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so lately,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much:
Therefore we'll have some half-a-dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone: o' Thursday be it, then.—
Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.
Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber, ho!
Afore me! it is so very very late,
That we may call it early by and by.
Good-night. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. — The Same. JULIET'S Chamber, looking on to the Orchard.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET, above, at the window.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierced the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops:
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yon light is not daylight, I know it, I:
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua;
Therefore stay yet; thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death;
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I'll say yon grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow;
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care to stay than will to go:
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.
How is't, my soul? let's talk: it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is: hie hence, be gone, away!
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discord and unpleasing sharps.
Some say the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so, for she divideth our eyes:
Some say the lark and loathed toad change voices too!
O, now I would they had changed voices too!
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunt's-up to the day.
O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light; more dark and dark our woes!

Enter Nurse, to the Chamber.

Nurse. Madam!

Jul. Nurse? [to your chamber:

Nurse. Your lady mother's coming The day is broke; be wary, look about. [Exit.

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend. [Descends.

Jul. Art thou gone so? my lord! my love! my friend! [hour,

I must hear from thee every day i' the For in a minute there are many days: O, by this count I shall be much in years Ere I again behold my Romeo!

Rom. Farewell!

I will omit no opportunity [to thee. That may convey my greetings, love,

Jul. O, think'st thou we shall ever meet again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve [come.

For sweet discourses in our time to

Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining, soul. [below,

Methinks I see thee, now thou art As one dead in the bottom of a tomb: Either my eyesight fails or thou look'st pale. [so do you:

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu! [Exit.

Jul. O Fortune, Fortune! all men call thee fickle: [him

For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,

But send him back.

Lady Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you up?

Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady mother?

Is she not down so late, or up so early? What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. Why, how now, Juliet!

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

Lady Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?

What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?

An if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live;

Therefore have done: some grief shows much of love;

But much of grief shows still some want of wit. [ing loss.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feel-

Lady Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss,

I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

Lady Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam?

Lady Cap. That same villain, Romeo.

Jul. [Aside.] Villain and he be many miles asunder.—

God pardon him! I do, with all my heart; [my heart.

And yet no man like he doth grieve

Lady Cap. That is because the traitor murderer lives.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands:

Would none but I might venge my cousin's death!

Lady Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not:

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua, [doth live,

Where that same banish'd runagate That shall bestow on him so sure a draught [pany:

Jul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied.

Rather than Paris. These are news
Lady Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;
But for the sunset of my brother's son It rains downright. [in tears?
How now! a conduit, girl? what, still Evermore showering? In one little body [wind:
Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,

Have you deliver'd to her our decree?
Lady Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.
I would the fool were married to her grave!
Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife.
How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks? [her blest,
Is she not proud? doth she not count Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought [groom?
So worthy a gentleman to be her bride-
Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have:
Proud can I never be of what I hate;
But thankful even for hate that is meant love.
Cap. How now! how now, choplogic! What is this?

I tell thee what: get thee to church o' Thursday,
Or never after look me in the face:
Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;
My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us blest [child;
That God had sent us but this only
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her:
Out on her, hilding!
Nurse. God in heaven bless her!
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so. [hold your tongue,
Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.
Nurse. I speak no treason.
Cap. O, God ye good den!
Nurse. May not one speak?
Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!

Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.
Lady Cap. You are too hot.
Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad: day, night, late, early,

Waking or sleeping, still my care hath been [provided
To have her match'd: and having now
A gentleman of noble parentage,
Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd, [parts,

Nor what is mine shall never do thee
Trust to 't, bethink you; I'll not be forsworn. [Exit.
Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?
O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!
Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies. [not speak a word:
Lady Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. [Exit.
Jul. O God!—O nurse, how shall this be prevented?
My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven; [earth,
How shall that faith return again to
Unless that husband send it me from heaven [me.
By leaving earth? comfort me, counsel
Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself!
What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, nurse.
Nurse Faith, here it is.
Romeo is banish'd; and all the world to nothing, [lenge you;
That he dares ne'er come back to chal-
Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth. [it doth,
Then, since the case so stands as now
I think it best you married with the county.
O, he's a lovely gentleman! [madam,
Romeo's a dishclout to him: an eagle,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye [heart,
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very
I think you are happy in this second match, [not,
For it excels your first: or if it did
Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.
Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?
Nurse. And from my soul too;
Or else beshrew them both.
Jul. Amen!
Nurse. To what?
Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.
Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeased my father, to Laurence' cell,
To make confession and to be absolved.
Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done. [Exit.
Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend! [sworn,
Is it more sin to wish me thus for-
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue [above compare
Which she hath praised him with
So many thousand times? Go, counsellor; [be twain.
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy:
If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Verona. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short. [so;
Par. My father Capulet will have it

And I am nothing slow to slack his haste. [the lady's mind:
Fri. L. You say you do not know Uneven is the course; I like it not.
Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,
And therefore have I little talk'd of love;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears. [ous
Now, sir, her father counts it danger-
That she doth give her sorrow so much sway; [riage,
And, in his wisdom, hastes our mar-
To stop the inundation of her tears;
Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society:
Now do you know the reason of this haste.
Fri. L. [Aside.] I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.
Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife! [be a wife.
Jul. That may be, sir, when I may
Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday next.
Jul. What must be shall be.
Fri. L. That's a certain text.
Par. Come you to make confession to this father? [fess to you.
Jul. To answer that, were to con-
Par. Do not deny to him that you love me. [him.
Jul. I will confess to you that I love
Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love me. [price,
Jul. If I do so, it will be of more
Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.
Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abused with tears. [by that;
Jul. The tears have got small victory
For it was bad enough before their spite.
Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.
Jul. That is no slander, sir, that is a truth; [face.
And what I spake, I spake it to my
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it. [own.
Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine
Are you at leisure, holy father, now;
Or shall I come to you at evening mass?
Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.
My lord, we must entreat the time alone. [devotion!
Par. God shield I should disturb
Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:
Till then, adieu; and keep this holy kiss. [Exit.
Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so,
Come weep with me; past hope, past cure, past help!
Fri. L. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief; [wits;
It strains me past the compass of my
I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it, [county.
On Thursday next be married to this
Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this, [it:
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently.
God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;
And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,
Shall be the label to another deed,
Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both: [time,
Therefore, out of thy long-experienced
Give me some present counsel; or, behold, [bloody knife
'Twixt my extremes and me this
Shall play the umpire; arbitrating that
Which the commission of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honour bring.
Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy. [kind of hope,
Fri. L. Hold, daughter; I do spy a
Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather than to marry County Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself,
Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame, ['scape from it;
That copest with Death himself to

And, if thou darest, I'll give thee remedy.
Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris, [tower;
From off the battlements of yonder
Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk [roaring bears;
Where serpents are; chain me with
Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house,
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones, [skulls;
With reeky shanks and yellow chapless
Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble;
And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.
Fri. L. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent
To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow: [alone;
To-morrow night look that thou lie
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this phial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off;
When presently through all thy veins shall run [pulse
A cold and drowsy humour; for no
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease:
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest; [fade
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall
To paly ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
Like Death, when he shuts up the day of life; [ment,
Each part, deprived of supple govern-
Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like Death: [Death
And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk
Thou shalt continue two-and-forty hours, [sleep.
And then awake as from a pleasant
Now, when the bridegroom in the morning comes [thou dead:
To rouse thee from thy bed, there art
Then, as the manner of our country is,
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier [ancient vault
Thou shalt be borne to that same
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie. [awake,
In the meantime, against thou shalt
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift; [I
And hither shall he come: and he and
Will watch thy waking, and that very night [Mantua.
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to
And this shall free thee from this present shame; [fear,
If no unconstant toy, nor womanish
Abate thy valour in the acting it.
Jul. Give me, give me! O, tell me not of fear!
Fri. L. Hold; get you gone: be strong and prosperous
In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed [lord.
To Mantua, with my letters to thy
Jul. Love give me strength! and strength shall help afford.
Farewell, dear father! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, Nurse, and two Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.
[Exit First Servant.
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.
Sec. Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.
Cap. How canst thou try them so?
Sec. Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.
Cap. Go, be gone. [Exit Sec. Servant.
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time. [Laurence?
What, is my daughter gone to Friar
Nurse. Ay, forsooth.
Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:
A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look.
Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?
Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition

To you and your behests, and am enjoin'd [here,
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate
And beg your pardon. Pardon, I beseech you!
Henceforward I am ever ruled by you.

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this: [morning.
I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence' cell; [might,
And gave him what becomed love I
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty. [well: stand up:

Cap. Why, I am glad on 't; this is
This as 't should be.—Let me see the county; [hither.
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him
Now, afore God! this reverend holy friar, [him.
All our whole city is much bound to

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,
To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

Lady Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her: we'll to church to-morrow.

[Exeunt JULIET and Nurse.

Lady Cap. We shall be short in our provision:
'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush, I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife:
Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;
I'll not to bed to-night; let me alone;
I'll play the housewife for this once.—What, ho!— [myself
They are all forth: well, I will walk
To County Paris, to prepare him up
Against to-morrow: my heart is wondrous light,
Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best: but, gentle nurse,
I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;
For I have need of many orisons
To move the heavens to smile upon my state, [full of sin.
Which, well thou know'st, is cross and

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. What, are you busy, ho? need you my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries [row:
As are behoveful for our state to-mor-
So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you; [full all
For I am sure you have your hands
In this so sudden business.

Lady Cap. Good night:
Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.

[Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again. [my veins,
I have a faint cold fear thrills through
That almost freezes up the heat of life:
I'll call them back again to comfort me.
Nurse!—What should she do here?
My dismal scene I needs must act alone.
Come, phial.
What if this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be married then to-morrow morning? [there.—
No, no; this shall forbid it:—lie thou

[Laying down a dagger.

What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,
Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd, [Romeo?
Because he married me before to
I fear it is: and yet, methinks, it should not, [man.
For he hath still been tried a holy
How if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!
Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in, [comes?
And there die strangled ere my Romeo
Or, if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,—
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where, for this many hundred years, the bones
Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
Lies festering in his shroud; where, [as they say,
At some hours in the night spirits resort;—
Alack, alack! is it not like that I, [of the earth,
So early waking, what with loathsome smells,
And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out That living mortals, hearing them, run mad:—
O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears?
And madly play with my forefathers' joints? [his shroud?
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone, [brains?
As with a club, dash out my desperate
O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost [body
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his
Upon a rapier's point.—Stay, Tybalt, stay!—
Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.
[She falls upon her bed, within the curtains.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
The curfew-bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock:
Look to the baked meats, good Angelica:
Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quean, go,
Get you to bed; faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit: what! I have watch'd ere now
All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

Lady Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;
But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Enter three or four Servants, with Spits, Logs, and Baskets.

Now, fellow,
What's there?

First Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit First Serv.] Sirrah, fetch drier logs: [they are.
Call Peter, he will show thee where

Sec. Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,
And never trouble Peter for the matter.

Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whoreson, ha!
Thou shalt be logger-head. [Exit Sec. Serv.] Good faith, 'tis day:
The county will be here with music straight,
For so he said he would. [Music within.] I hear him near.
Nurse! Wife! What, ho! What, nurse, I say!

Re-enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up;
I'll go and chat with Paris: hie, make haste, [come already:
Make haste; the bridegroom he is
Make haste, I say. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress! what, mistress! Juliet! fast, I warrant her, she: [a-bed!
Why, lamb! why, lady, fie, you slug-
Why, love, I say! madam! sweetheart! why, bride!
What, not a word? you take your pennyworths now:
Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
The County Paris hath set up his rest,
That you shall rest but little. God forgive me, [asleep!
Marry, and amen, how sound is she
I needs must wake her. Madam, madam, madam! [bed;
Ay, let the county take you in your
He'll fright you up, i' faith. Will it not be? [Undraws the curtains,
What, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down again! [lady!
I must needs wake you. Lady! lady!

Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
Some aqua vitæ, ho!—My lord! my lady!

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady Cap. What noise is here?
Nurse. O lamentable day!
Lady Cap. What is the matter?
Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!
Lady Cap. O me, O me!—My child, my only life, [thee!—
Revive, look up, or I will die with Help, help!—Call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.
Nurse. She's dead, deceased, she's dead; alack the day!
Lady Cap. Alack the day, she's dead, she's dead, she's dead!
Cap. Ha! let me see her. Out, alas! she's cold; [stiff;
Her blood is settled, and her joints are
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Nurse. O lamentable day!
Lady Cap. O woeful time!
Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS, with Musicians.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church? [return.
Cap. Ready to go, but never to
O son! the night before thy wedding-day [there she lies,
Hath Death lain with thy wife: see,
Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir; [die,
My daughter he hath wedded: I will
And leave him all; life, living, all is Death's.
Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face,
And doth it give me such a sight as this?
Lady Cap. Accurst, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!
Most miserable hour that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight! [woeful day!
Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, Most lamentable day, most woeful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woeful day, O woeful day!
Par. Beguiled, divorced, wronged, spited, slain! [guiled,
Most detestable Death, by thee be-
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!
O love! O life! not life, but love in death!
Cap. Despised, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd! [now
Uncomfortable time, why camest thou
To murder, murder our solemnity?
O child! O child! my soul, and not my child! [dead;
Dead art thou! Alack! my child is
And with my child my joys are buried!
Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives not
In these confusions. Heaven and yourself [hath all,
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven
And all the better is it for the maid:
Your part in her you could not keep from death;
But Heaven keeps his part in eternal life. [motion;
The most you sought was her pro-

O, in this love, you love your child so
That you run mad, seeing that she is well: [ried long;
She's not well married that lives mar-
But she's best married that dies married young. [mary
Dry up your tears, and stick your rose-
On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church:
For though fond Nature bids us all lament, [ment.
Yet Nature's tears are reason's merri-
Cap. All things that we ordained festival,

Turn from their office to black funeral:
Our instruments to melancholy bells;
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast;
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. L. Sir, go you in; and, madam, go you with him;
And, Sir Paris;—every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave:
The heavens do lour upon you for some ill;
Move them no more by crossing their high will.

[Exeunt CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, PARIS, and Friar.

First Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put up;
For, well you know, this is a pitiful case.

[Exit.

First Mus. Ah, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, 'Heart's ease, Heart's ease:' O, an you will have me live, play 'Heart's ease.'

First Mus. Why 'Heart's ease'?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My heart is full of woe:' O, play me some merry dump, to comfort me.

First Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not, then?

First Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

First Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith, but the gleek; I will give you the minstrel.

First Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets: I'll re you, I'll fa you; do you note me?

First Mus. An you re us and fa us, you note us.

Sec. Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men:

'When griping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound'—

why 'silver sound'? why 'music with her silver sound'?—What say you, Simon Catling?

First Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

Sec. Mus. I say 'silver sound,' because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too! What say you, James Soundpost?

Third Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy! you are the singer: I will say for you. It is 'music with her silver sound,' because musicians have no gold for sounding:

'Then music with her silver sound
With speedy help doth lend redress.'

[Exit.

First Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same!

Sec. Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;
And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt my lady came and found me dead—
Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think!—
And breathed such life with kisses in my lips
That I revived and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHASAR, booted.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar!
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?

How doth my lady ? Is my father well ?
How fares my Juliet ? that I ask again ;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.
Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill :
Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you :
O, pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.
Rom. Is it e'en so ? then I defy you, stars ! [and paper,
Thou know'st my lodging : get me ink
And hire post-horses ; I will hence to-night. [patience :
Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.
Rom. Tush, thou art deceived :
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do. [friar ?
Hast thou no letters to me from the
Bal. No, my good lord.
Rom. No matter : get thee gone,
And hire those horses ; I'll be with thee straight.
[Exit BALTHASAR.
Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night. [thou art swift
Let's see for means :—O mischief,
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men !
I do remember an apothecary,—
And hereabouts he dwells,—which late I noted [brows,
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming
Culling of simples ; meagre were his looks ; [bones :
Sharp misery had worn him to the
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shaped fishes ; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds, [of roses,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said
' An if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.' [my need,
O, this same thought did but forerun
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house : [shut.
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is
What, ho ! apothecary !

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud ?
Rom. Come hither, man. I see that thou art poor ;
Hold, there is forty ducats : let me have
A dram of poison ; such soon-speeding gear [veins,
As will disperse itself through all the
That the life-weary taker may fall dead,
And that the trunk may be discharged of breath
As violently as hasty powder fired
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.
Ap. Such mortal drugs I have ; but Mantua's law
Is death to any he that utters them.
Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness, [cheeks,
And fear'st to die ? famine is in thy
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Upon thy back hangs ragged misery,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law : [rich ;
The world affords no law to make thee
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this. [consents.
Ap. My poverty, but not my will,
Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will. [will,
Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you
And drink it off ; and, if you had the strength [straight.
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you
Rom. There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls, [world
Doing more murders in this loathsome
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell. [none.
I sell thee poison ; thou hast sold me
Farewell : buy food, and get thyself in flesh. [me
Come, cordial and not poison, go with
To Juliet's grave ; for there must I use thee.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Verona. FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR JOHN.

Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar John. [Romeo?
Welcome from Mantua: what says
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter. [brother out,

Fri. J. Going to find a bare-foot
One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town, [house
Suspecting that we both were in a
Where the infectious pestilence did reign, [us forth;
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd. [Romeo?

Fri. L. Who bare my letter then to

Fri. J. I could not send it,—here it is again,—
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood, [charge
The letter was not nice, but full of
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger. Friar John, go hence; [straight
Get me an iron crow, and bring it
Unto my cell.

Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. [Exit.

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument alone; [wake:
Within this three hours will fair Juliet
She will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents;
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come:
Poor living corse, closed in a dead man's tomb! [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Churchyard; in it a Tomb belonging to the Capulets.

Enter PARIS, and his Page, bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand aloof:
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground; [tread,
So shall no foot upon the churchyard
Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves, [me,
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to
As signal that thou hear'st something approach. [thee, go.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid

Page. [Aside.] I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure. [Retires.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew,—
O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones;— [dew,
Which with sweet water nightly I will
Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans: [keep
The obsequies that I for thee will
Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep. [The Page whistles.
The boy gives warning something doth approach. [night,
What cursed foot wanders this way to-
To cross my obsequies and true love's rite?
What, with a torch! Muffle me, night, awhile. [Retires.

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a torch, mattock, etc.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron. [ing
Hold, take this letter; early in the morn-
See thou deliver it to my lord and father. [charge thee,
Give me the light: upon thy life, I
Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death
Is partly to behold my lady's face,
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring, a ring that I must use
In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone:
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint [thy limbs:
And strew this hungry churchyard with

The time and my intents are savage-
wild,
More fierce and more inexorable far
Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.
Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.
Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship. Take thou that:
Live, and be prosperous: and farewell, good fellow.
Bal. [Aside.] For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout:
His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.
[Retires.
Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death, [earth,
Gorged with the dearest morsel of the
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open, [Opens the Tomb.
And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food! [Montague
Par. This is that banish'd haughty
That murder'd my love's cousin; with which grief,
It is supposed, the fair creature died,—
And here is come to do some villanous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him. [Advances.
Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague!
Can vengeance be pursued further than death? [thee:
Condemned villain, I do apprehend
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die. [came I hither.
Rom. I must indeed; and therefore
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man; [these gone;
Fly hence and leave me: think upon
Let them affright thee. I beseech thee, youth,
Heap not another sin upon my head,
By urging me to fury: O, be gone!
By heaven, I love thee better than myself, [self:
For I come hither arm'd against my-
Stay not, be gone: live, and hereafter say,
A madman's mercy bade thee run away.
Par. I do defy thy conjurations,
And apprehend thee for a felon here.
Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy!
[They fight.
Page. O Lord! they fight! I will go call the watch.
[Exit.
Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.] If thou be merciful,
Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet.
[Dies.
Rom. In faith, I will.—Let me peruse this face;— [Paris!
Mercutio's kinsman, noble County
What said my man, when my betossed soul [think
Did not attend him as we rode? I
He told me Paris should have married Juliet:
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet, [hand,
To think it was so? O, give me thy
One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!
I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave;
A grave? O, no! a lantern, slaughter'd youth; [makes
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty
This vault a feasting presence full of light. [interr'd.
Death, lie thou there, by a dead man
[Laying PARIS in the Tomb.
How oft when men are at the point of death [keepers call
Have they been merry! which their

Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody
O, what more favour can I do to thee
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin!—Ah, dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? shall I believe
That unsubstantial Death is amorous,
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that, I still will stay with thee; [night
And never from this palace of dim
Depart again: here, here will I remain

With worms that are thy chamber-maids; O, here
Will I set up my everlasting rest,
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars [look your last!
From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O you [ous kiss
The doors of breath, seal with a righte-
A dateless bargain to engrossing death!
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide! [on
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark! [apothecary!
Here's to my love! [Drinks.] O true
Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die. [Dies.

Enter, at the other end of the Churchyard, FRIAR LAURENCE, with a lantern, crow, and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves! Who's there? [dead?
Who is it that consorts, so late, the
Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.
Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
What torch is yond, that vainly lends his light [cern,
To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I dis-
It burneth in the Capels' monument.
Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,
One that you love.
Fri. L. Who is it?
Bal. Romeo.
Fri. L. How long hath he been there?
Bal. Full half an hour.
Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.
Bal. I dare not, sir:
My master knows not but I am gone hence; [death,
And fearfully did menace me with
If I did stay to look on his intents.
Fri. L. Stay then; I'll go alone. Fear comes upon me:
O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing
Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.
Fri. L. Romeo! [Advances.

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre?
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace? [Enters the Tomb.
Romeo! O, pale! Who else? what, Paris too? [unkind hour
And steep'd in blood? Ah, what an
Is guilty of this lamentable chance!
The lady stirs. [JULIET wakes.
Jul. O comfortable friar! where is my lord?
I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am: where is my Romeo? [Noise within.
Fri. L. I hear some noise. Lady, come from that nest
Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep:
A greater Power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents: come, come away: [dead;
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies
And Paris too: come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;
Come, go, good Juliet,—[Noise again.] I dare no longer stay.
Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.
[Exit FRIAR LAURENCE.
What's here? a cup, closed in my true love's hand? [end;
Poison, I see, hath been his timeless
O churl! drunk all, and left no friendly drop
To help me after? I will kiss thy lips;
Haply some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him.
Thy lips are warm.
First Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy: which way?
Jul. Yea, noise? then I'll be brief.—O happy dagger!
[Snatching ROMEO'S dagger.
This is thy sheath [Stabs herself]; there rust, and let me die.
[Falls on ROMEO'S body, and dies.

Enter Watch, with the Page of PARIS.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

First Watch. The ground is bloody; search about the churchyard: Go, some of you, whoe'er you find, attach. [Exeunt some.
Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain; And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead, [buried.
Who here hath lain these two days Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets, Raise up the Montagues,—some others search:
[Exeunt other Watchmen.
We see the ground whereon these woes do lie; [woes
But the true ground of all these piteous We cannot without circumstance descry.

Re-enter some of the Watch, with BALTHASAR.

Sec. Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

First Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither.

Re-enter others of the Watch, with FRIAR LAURENCE.

Third Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps: We took this mattock and this spade from him, [yard's side.
As he was coming from this church-

First Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar too.

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up, [ing's rest?
That calls our person from our morn-

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and Others.

Cap. What should it be that they so shriek abroad?

Lady Cap. The people in the street cry Romeo, [run
Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?

First Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County Paris slain;
And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

First Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man;
With instruments upon them fit to open
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O heavens! O wife, look how our daughter bleeds!
This dagger hath mista'en,—for, lo, his house
Is empty on the back of Montague,—
And it mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom!

Lady Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and Others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early up, [down.
To see thy son and heir more early

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night; [her breath:
Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in this,
To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for awhile,
Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent; [woes,
And then will I be general of your
And lead you even to death: meantime forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience.
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least, [place
Yet most suspected, as the time and
Doth make against me, of this direful murder; [purge
And here I stand, both to impeach and Myself condemned and myself excused.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet; [ful wife:
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faith-

married them; and their stolen marriage-day
Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city; [pined.
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet
You, to remove that siege of grief from her, [perforce
Betroth'd and would have married her
To County Paris: then comes she to me, [some mean
And, with wild looks, bid me devise
To rid her from this second marriage,
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo, [night,
That he should hither come as this dire
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave, [cease.
Being the time the potion's force should
But he which bore my letter, Friar John, [night
Was stay'd by accident, and yesterReturned my letter back. Then, all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault;
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo: [time
But when I came, some minute ere the
Of her awakening, here untimely lay
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth, [patience:
And bear this work of heaven with
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb; [with me,
And she, too desperate, would not go
But, as it seems, did violence on herself.
All this I know; and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy: and, if aught in this
Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrificed, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man. [say in this?
Where's Romeo's man? what can he

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death;
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same monument. [father,
This letter he early bid me give his
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter; I will look on it. [the watch?
Where is the county's page, that raised
Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:
Anon comes one with light to ope the tomb; [him;
And by and by my master drew on
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words, [death:
Their course of love, the tidings of her
And here he writes that he did buy a poison
Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet. [Montague!
Where be these enemies? Capulet!
See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate, [joys with love!
That heaven finds means to kill your
And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen: all are punish'd. [thy hand:

Cap. O brother Montague, give me
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more:
For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
That while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set
As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;
The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head:
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things; [punished:
Some shall be pardon'd, and some
For never was a story of more woe
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.
Pain. I am glad you're well.
Poet. I have not seen you long: how goes the world?
Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.
Poet. Ay, that's well known:
But what particular rarity? what strange, [See,
Which manifold record not matches?
Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power [merchant.
Hath conjured to attend. I know the Pain. I know them both; th' other 's a jeweller.
Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord!
Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.
Mer. A most incomparable man, breathed, as it were, [ness:
To an untirable and continuate good-
He passes.
Jew. I have a jewel here—
Mer. O, pray, let 's see 't: for the Lord Timon, sir?
Jew. If he will touch the estimate: but, for that—
Poet. [Reciting to himself.] 'When we for recompense have praised the vile,
It stains the glory in that happy verse
Which aptly sings the good.'
Mer. [Looking at the jewel.] 'Tis a good form. [look ye.
Jew. And rich: here is a water,
Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication
To the great lord. [from me.
Poet. A thing slipp'd idly
Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes
From whence 'tis nourished: the fire i' the flint [flame
Shows not till it be struck; our gentle
Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies [you there?
Each bound it chafes. What have
Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?
Poet. Upon the heels of my present-ment, sir.
Let's see your piece.
Pain. 'Tis a good piece.
Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.
Pain. Indifferent.
Poet. Admirable: how this grace
Speaks his own standing! what a mental power

This eye shoots forth! how big imagination
Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture
One might interpret. [life.
Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the
Here is a touch; is't good?
Poet. I'll say of it,
It tutors nature: artificial strife
Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord 's follow'd!
Poet. The senators of Athens: happy man!
Pain. Look, more!
Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.
I have, in this rough work, shaped out a man, [brace and hug
Whom this beneath world doth em-
With amplest entertainment: my free drift [self
Halts not particularly, but moves it-
In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice [hold;
Infects one comma in the course I
But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.
Pain. How shall I understand you?
Poet. I'll unbolt to you.
You see how all conditions, how all minds,
As well of glib and slippery creatures as
Of grave and austere quality, tender down [large fortune,
Their services to Lord Timon: his
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging, [and tendance
Subdues and properties to his love
All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-faced flatterer [better
To Apemantus, that few things loves
Than to abhor himself: even he drops down [peace
The knee before him, and returns in
Most rich in Timon's nod.
Pain. I saw them speak together.
Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
Feign'd Fortune to be throned: the base o' the mount [natures,
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states: amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, [wafts to her;
Whom Fortune with her ivory hand
Whose present grace to present slaves and servants
Translates his rivals.
Pain. 'Tis conceived to scope.
This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks, [below,
With one man beckon'd from the rest
Bowing his head against the steepy mount [express'd
To climb his happiness, would be well
In our condition.
Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on.
All those which were his fellows but of late, [moment
Some better than his value, on the
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.
Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?
Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood,
Spurns down her late beloved, all his dependants
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top [slip down,
Even on their knees and hands, let him
Not one accompanying his declining foot.
Pain. 'Tis common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's
More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well [have seen
To show Lord Timon that mean eyes
The foot above the h ad.

Trumpets sound. Enter LORD TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every suitor; a Messenger from VENTIDIUS talking with him; LUCILIUS and other Servants following.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?
Mess. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt; [strait:
His means most short, his creditors most
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which failing,

Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well,
I am not of that feather to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know him
A gentleman that well deserves a help:
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt
and free him.

Mess. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ransom: [to me:
And, being enfranchised, bid him come
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mess. All happiness to your honour! [Exit.

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant named Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: what of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee. [lius!

Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Luci-

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man [to thrift;
That from my first have been inclined
And my estate deserves an heir more raised
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well, what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I,
no kin else, [got:
On whom I may confer what I have
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine [lord,
Attempts her love: I prithee, noble
Join with me to forbid him her resort;
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be,
Timon:
His honesty rewards him in itself;
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young and apt: [us
Our own precedent passions do instruct
What levity 's in youth. [maid?

Tim. [To LUCILIUS.] Love you the

Luc. Ay, my good lord; and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath served me long: [little,
To build his fortune I will strain a
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter: [poise,
What you bestow, in him I'll counter-
And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship:
never may [ing,
That state or fortune fall into my keep-
Which is not owed to you!

[Exeunt LUCILIUS and Old Athenian.

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon:
Go not away.—What have you there,
my friend? [do beseech

Pain. A piece of painting, which I
Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature, [figures are
He is but outside: these pencill'd
Even such as they give out. I like your work; [tendance
And you shall find I like it: wait at-
Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve ye!

Tim. Well fare you, gentleman:
give me your hand;
We must needs dine together.—Sir,
your jewel
Hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord! dispraise?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations. [toll'd,
If I should pay you for 't as 'tis ex

It would unclew me quite.
Jew. My lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would give: but you well know, [owners,
Things of like value, differing in the
Are prized by their masters: believe 't, dear lord, [it.
You mend the jewel by the wearing
Tim. Well mock'd.
Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,
Which all men speak with him.
Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be chid?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We will bear, with your lordship.
Mer. He'll spare none.
Tim. Good-morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!
Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good-morrow;
When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest.
Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.
Apem. Are they not Athenians?
Tim. Yes.
Apem. Then I repent not.
Jew. You know me, Apemantus?
Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by thy name.
Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.
Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.
Tim. Whither art going?
Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.
Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.
Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law. [Apemantus?
Tim. How likest thou this picture,
Apem. The best, for the innocence.
Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?
Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.
Pain. You're a dog.
Apem. Thy mother's of my generation: what's she, if I be a dog?
Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?
Apem. No; I eat not lords.
Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'dst anger ladies.
Apem. O, they eat lords; so they come by great bellies. [sion.
Tim. That's a lascivious apprehen-
Apem. So thou apprehendest it: take it for thy labour.
Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?
Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.
Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth? [How now, poet!
Apem. Not worth my thinking.
Poet. How now, philosopher!
Apem. Thou liest.
Poet. Art not one?
Apem. Yes.
Poet. Then I lie not.
Apem. Art not a poet?
Poet. Yes.
Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feigned him a worthy fellow.
Poet. That 's not feigned; he is so.
Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!
Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?
Apem. E'en as Apemantus does now; hate a lord with my heart.
Tim. What, thyself?
Apem. Ay.
Tim. Wherefore?
Apem. That I had no angry wit to bay a lord.—Art not thou a merchant?
Mer. Ay, Apemantus.
Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!
Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.
Apem. Traffic's thy god; and thy god confound thee!

Trumpets sound. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?
Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse,
All of companionship.
Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.
[Exeunt some Attendants.
You must needs dine with me.—Go not you hence
Till I have thank'd you; and, when dinner 's done,
Show me this piece.—I am joyful of your sights.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir! [They salute.
Apem. So, so; there!
Aches contract and starve your supple joints!
That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves,
And all this courtesy! The strain of man's bred out
Into baboon and monkey.
Alcib. Sir, you have saved my longing, and I feed
Most hungrily on your sight.
Tim. Right welcome, sir!
Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time
In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.
[Exeunt all but APEMANTUS.

Enter two Lords.

First Lord. What time o' day is 't, Apemantus?
Apem. Time to be honest.
First Lord. That time serves still.
Apem. The more accursed thou, that still omitt'st it.
Sec. Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast?
Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves and wine heat fools. [well.
Sec. Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee
Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.
Sec. Lord. Why, Apemantus?
Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.
First Lord. Hang thyself!
Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend.
Sec. Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence!
Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels o' the ass. [Exit.
First Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in,
And taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
The very heart of kindness.
Sec. Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold, [repays
Is but his steward: no meed but he
Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him,
But breeds the giver a return exceeding
All use of quittance. [he carries
First Lord. The noblest mind
That ever govern'd man.
Sec. Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in?
First Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Banqueting-room in TIMON'S House.

Hautboys playing loud Music. A great Banquet served in; FLAVIUS and Others attending; then enter LORD TIMON, ALCIBIADES, Lords, Senators, and VENTIDIUS. Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly, like himself.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon, it hath pleased the gods to remember
My father's age, and call him to long peace. [rich:
He is gone happy, and has left me
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents, [whose help
Doubled with thanks and service, from I derived liberty.
Tim. O, by no means,
Honest Ventidius; you mistake my love:
I gave it freely ever; and there's none
Can truly say he gives, if he receives:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare [are fair.
To imitate them; faults that are rich
Ven. A noble spirit!
[They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON.
Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devised at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes, [shown;
Recanting goodness, sorry 'ere 'tis
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes
Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.
First Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.
Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it! hang'd it, have you not? [come.
Tim. O, Apemantus, you are wel-
Apem. No;
You shall not make me welcome:
I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.
Tim. Fie, thou'rt a churl; you've got a humour there

Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame.
They say, my lords, 'Ira furor brevis est,'
But yond man's ever angry.
Go, let him have a table by himself;
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for it, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil, Timon:
I come to observe; I give thee warning on 't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian, therefore welcome: I myself would have no power; prithee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should Ne'er flatter thee. O you gods! what a number not!
Of men eat Timon, and he sees 'em
It grieves me to see so many dip their meat ness is,
In one man's blood; and all the madHe cheers them up too. with men:
I wonder men dare trust themselves
Methinks they should invite them without knives; lives.
Good for their meat, and safer for their
There's much example for't; the fellow that Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges
The breath of him in a divided draught,
Is the readiest man to kill him: it has been proved.
If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals,
Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes:
Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health go round.

Sec. Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! he keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon. sinner,
Here's that which is too weak to be a
Honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire: no odds:
This and my food are equals; there 's
Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Apemantus' Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;
I pray for no man but myself:
Grant I may never prove so fond,
To trust man on his oath or bond;
Or a harlot for her weeping;
Or a dog that seems a-sleeping;
Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.
Amen. So fall to't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.

[Eats and drinks.

Much good do it thy good heart, Apemantus! in the field now.

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em: I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightst kill 'em and bid me to 'em!

First Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods, think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for 'em, and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits: and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, e'en made away ere 't can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weepest to make them drink, Timon.

Sec. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes, [up.
And at that instant like a babe sprung

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

Third Lord. I promise you, my lord, you moved me much.

Apem. Much! [Tucket, within.

Tim. What means that trump?

Enter a Servant.

How now!

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies! what are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon!—and to all [best senses
That of his bounties taste!—The five
Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely [ear,
To gratulate thy plenteous bosom: the
Taste, touch, and smell, pleased from thy table rise; [eyes.
They only now come but to feast thine

Tim. They're welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance:
Music, make their welcome!

[Exit CUPID.

First Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you're beloved.

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a Masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!
They dance! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. [ourselves;
We make ourselves fools, to disport
And spend our flatteries, to drink those men
Upon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite and envy. Who lives, that's not [bears
Depraved or depraves? who dies, that
Not one spurn to their graves of their friends' gift? [me now
I should fear those that dance before
Would one day stamp upon me: 't has been done; [sun.
Men shut their doors against a setting

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of TIMON; and to show their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, Men with Women, a lofty strain or two to the Hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,
Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind; [lustre,
You have added worth unto't and lively
And entertain'd me with mine own device:
I am to thank you for 't.

First Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet
Attends you: please you to dispose yourselves. [lord.

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my [Exeunt CUPID and Ladies.

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord? [hither.

Tim. The little casket bring me

Flav. Yes, my lord. [Aside] More jewels yet!
There is no crossing him in 's humour;
Else I should tell him,—well, i' faith, I should,—
When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.
'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind,
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. [Exit.

First Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

Sec. Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter FLAVIUS, with the casket.

Tim. O my friends,
I have one word to say to you: look, my good lord, [much
I must entreat you, honour me so
As to advance this jewel; accept and wear it,
Kind my lord. [your gifts,—

First Lord. I am so far already in

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate
Newly alighted, and come to visit you.
Tim. They are fairly welcome.
Flav. I beseech your honour,
Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.
Tim. Near! why, then, another time I'll hear thee: I prithee, let us be provided to show them entertainment.
Flav. [Aside.] I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Sec. Serv. May it please your honour, the Lord Lucius, [you
Out of his free love, hath presented to Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver. [the presents
Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

How now! what news?
Third Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.
Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be received,
Not without fair reward.
Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to? [great gifts,
He commands us to provide, and give
And all out of an empty coffer:
Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this, [is,
To show him what a beggar his heart
Being of no power to make his wishes good:
His promises fly so beyond his state
That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes [now
For every word: he is so kind that he
Pays interest for 't; his land 's put to their books. [office
Well, would I were gently put out of
Before I were forced out! [feed
Happier is he that has no friend to
Than such as do e'en enemies exceed.
I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.
Tim. You do yourselves
Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits.
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.
Sec. Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.
Third Lord. O, he's the very soul of bounty! [you gave
Tim. And now I remember, my lord,
Good words the other day of a bay courser [liked it.
I rode on: it is yours, because you
Third Lord. O, I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.
Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know, no man
Can justly praise but what he does affect: [mine own;
I weigh my friend's affection with
I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.
All Lords. O, none so welcome.
Tim. I take all and your several visitations [give;
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to
Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich; [thy living
It comes in charity to thee: for all
Is 'mongst the dead; and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitch'd field.
Alcib. Ay, defiled land, my lord.
First Lord. We are so virtuously bound—
Tim. And so
Am I to you.
Sec. Lord. So infinitely endear'd—
Tim. All to you.—Lights, more lights!
First Lord. The best of happiness,
Honour and fortunes, keep with you, Lord Timon!
Tim. Ready for his friends.
[Exeunt all but APEMANTUS and TIMON.
Apem. What a coil 's here!
Serving of becks and jutting-out of bums!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums [full of dregs:
That are given for 'em. Friendship 's
Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies. [not sullen,
Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert
I'd be good to thee.
Apem. No, I'll nothing: for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon thee; and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou givest so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what needs these feasts, pomps, and vain-glories?

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you. Farewell; and come with better music. [Exit.

Apem. So: [shalt not then:
Thou wilt not hear me now; thou
I'll lock thy heaven from thee.
O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery!
[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Senator's House.

Enter Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand; besides my former sum, [in motion
Which makes it five-and-twenty. Still
Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not. [dog
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's
And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold. [twenty more
If I would sell my horse, and buy
Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon; [straight,
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me,
And able horses. No porter at his gate, [invites
But rather one that smiles and still
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason [ho!
Can found his state in safety. Caphis,
Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleasure?

Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to Lord Timon;
Importune him for my moneys; be not ceased [when—
With slight denial, nor then silenced
'Commend me to your master'—and the cap [him, sirrah,
Plays in the right hand, thus: but tell
My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn [are past,
Out of mine own; his days and times
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit: I love and honour him,
But must not break my back to heal his finger: [lief
Immediate are my needs; and my re-
Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words, [gone:
But find supply immediate. Get you
Put on a most importunate aspect,
A visage of demand; for, I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phœnix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, sir. [along with you,

Sen. 'I go, sir!'—Take the bonds
And have the dates in compt.

Caph. I will, sir.

Sen. Go.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flavius. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense, [tain it,
That he will neither know how to main-
Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account [sumes no care
How things go from him; nor re-
Of what is to continue: never mind
Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
What shall be done? he will not hear, till feel:
I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Caph. Good even, Varro: what,
You come for money? [too?

Var. Serv. Is 't not your business

Caph. It is: and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. Would we were all discharged!

Var. Serv I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, Lords, and Others.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again,

My Alcibiades.—With me? what is your will? [certain dues.
Caph. My lord, here is a note of
Tim. Dues! Whence are you?
Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.
Tim. Go to my steward.
Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off [month:
To the succession of new days this
My master is awaked by great occasion [prays you
To call upon his own, and humbly
That with your other noble parts you'll suit
In giving him his right.
Tim. Mine honest friend,
I prithee, but repair to me next morning.
Caph. Nay, good my lord,—
Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.
Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good lord,—
Isid. Serv. From Isidore;
He humbly prays your speedy payment.
Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants—
Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks
And past. [off, my lord;
Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me
And I am sent expressly to your lordship.
Tim. Give me breath.— [on;
I do beseech you, good my lords, keep
I'll wait upon you instantly.
[Exeunt ALCIBIADES and Lords.
[To FLAVIUS] Come hither: pray you,
How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd [bonds,
With clamorous demands of date-broke
And the detention of long-since-due debts,
Against my honour?
Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this business:
Your importunacy cease till after dinner, [stand
That I may make his lordship under-
Wherefore you are not paid.
Tim. Do so, my friends:
See them well entertain'd. [Exit.
Flav. I pray, draw near. [Exit.

Enter APEMANTUS and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus: let's ha' some sport with 'em. [us.
Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse
Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!
Var. Serv. How dost, fool?
Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?
Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.
Apem. No, 'tis to thyself. [To the Fool] Come away.
Isid. Serv. [To VAR. Serv.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.
Apem. No, thou stand'st single, thou'rt not on him yet.
Caph. Where's the fool now?
Apem. He last asked the question. Poor rogues, and usurers' men! bawds between gold and want!
All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?
Apem. Asses.
All Serv. Why?
Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, fool.
Fool. How do you, gentlemen?
All Serv. Gramercies, good fool: how does your mistress?
Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth!
Apem. Good! gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.
Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain! what do you in this wise company?—How dost thou, Apemantus?
Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.
Page. Prithee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.
Apem. Canst not read?
Page. No.
Apem. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd.
Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death. Answer not; I am gone. [Exit.
Apem. E'en so thou outrunnest

grace. Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home.—You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay; would they served us!

Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: the reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apem. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave; which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime 't appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; some time like a philosopher, with two stones more than 's artificial one: he is very often like a knight; and, generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus. [Lord Timon.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime the philosopher.

[Exeunt APEMANTUS and Fool.

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon.

[Exeunt Servants.

Tim. You make me marvel: wherefore, ere this time, [me;
Had you not fully laid my state before
That I might so have rated my expense
As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me,
At many leisures I proposed.

Tim. Go to:
Perchance some single vantages you took,
When my indisposition put you back;
And that unaptness made your minister,
Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord,
At many times I brought in my accounts,
Laid them before you; you would throw them off, [honesty.
And say, you found them in mine
When for some trifling present you have bid me [and wept;
Return so much, I have shook my head
Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you [endure
To hold your hand more close: I did
Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebb of your estate
And your great flow of debts. My loved lord,
Though you hear now,—too late!—yet now's a time
The greatest of your having lacks a half
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engaged, some forfeited and gone; [mouth
And what remains will hardly stop the
Of present dues: the future comes apace: [at length
What shall defend the interim? and
How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend. [is but a word;

Flav. O my good lord, the world
Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone!

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood,
Call me before the exactest auditors,
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me, [press'd
When all our offices have been op-
With riotous feeders, when our vaults have wept [every room
With drunken spilth of wine, when
Hath blazed with lights and bray'd with minstrelsy,
I have retired me to a wasteful cock,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prithee, no more.
Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord!
How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasants [Timon's?
This night englutted! Who is not
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?
Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon! [buy this praise,
Ah, when the means are gone that
The breath is gone whereof this praise is made: [winter showers,
Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of
These flies are couch'd.
Tim. Come, sermon me no further:
No villanous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.
Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,
To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart; [love,
If I would broach the vessels of my
And try the argument of hearts by borrowing, [use
Men and men's fortunes could I frankly
As I can bid thee speak.
Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!
Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd,
That I account them blessings; for by these [how you
Shall I try friends: you shall perceive
Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other Servants.

Serv. My lord! my lord!
Tim. I will dispatch you severally:—you, to Lord Lucius:—to Lord Lucullus you: I hunted with his honour to-day:—you, to Sempronius: commend me to their loves; and, I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use 'em toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents.
Flam. As you have said, my lord.
Flav. [Aside.] Lord Lucius? and Lucullus? hum!
Tim. [To another Servant.] Go you, sir, to the senators,—
Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserved this hearing,—bid 'em send o' the instant
A thousand talents to me.
Flav. I have been bold,
For that I knew it the most general way, [name;
To them to use your signet and your
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.
Tim. Is 't true? can 't be?
Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot
Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable,—
But yet they could have wish'd—they know not— [nature
Something hath been amiss—a noble
May catch a wrench—would all were well—'tis pity;—
And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks and these hard fractions, [ing nods
With certain half-caps and cold-mov-
They froze me into silence.
Tim. You gods, reward them!
I prithee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows [ditary:
Have their ingratitude in them here-
Their blood is caked, 'tis cold, it seldom flows; [not kind;
'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are
And nature, as it grows again toward earth, [heavy.
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and
[To a Serv.] Go to Ventidius. [To FLAVIUS] Prithee, be not sad
Thou art true and honest; ingeniously I speak,
No blame belongs to thee. [To Serv.] Ventidius lately [stepp'd
Buried his father; by whose death he's
Into a great estate: when he was poor,
Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents; greet him from me;
Bid him suppose some good necessity
Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd
With those five talents. [Exit Servant.
[To FLAV.] That had, give't these fellows [for think
To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak
That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty's foe; Being free itself, it thinks all others so. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Room in LUCULLUS' House.

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of Lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius; you are very respectively welcome, sir. [To Serv.] Fill me some wine. [Exit Serv.] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir: and what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la! 'nothing doubting,' says he? Alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' dined with him, and told him on't; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his: I ha' told him on 't, but I could ne'er get him from 't.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit—give thee thy due—and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. [To Serv.] Get you gone, sirrah. [Exit Serv.] Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money; especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say thou sawest me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is 't possible the world should so much differ, [baseness,
And we alive that lived? Fly, damned
To him that worships thee!
[Throwing the money back.

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!
Let molten coin be thy damnation,
Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! [heart,
Has friendship such a faint and milky
It turns in less than two nights? O you gods, [slave,
I feel my master's passion! This
Unto this hour, has my lord's meat in him: [triment,
Why should it thrive and turn to nu-
When he is turn'd to poison?
O, may diseases only work upon 't!
And, when he 's sick to death, let not that part of nature [power
Which my lord paid for, be of any
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour!
[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter LUCIUS, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

Sec. Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely for 't, and showed what necessity belonged to 't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How! [lord.

Sec. Stran. I tell you, denied, my

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such-like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour. [To LUCIUS] My honoured lord!

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me; [talents.
He cannot want fifty-five hundred

Ser. But in the meantime he wants less, my lord.
If his occasion were not virtuous,
I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfurnish myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour! Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do—the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius. [Exit SERVILIUS.
True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed;
And he that's once denied will hardly speed. [Exit.

First Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

Sec. Stran. Ay, too well.

First Stran. Why, this is the world's soul; and just of the same piece [call him
Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can
His friend that dips in the same dish? for, in [lord's father,
My knowing, Timon has been this
And kept his credit with his purse;
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks, [lip;
But Timon's silver treads upon his
And yet—O, see the monstrousness of man [shape!—
When he looks out in an ungrateful
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

Third Stran. Religion groans at it.

First Stran. For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest, [virtue,
For his right noble mind, illustrious
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,

And the best half should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart: but, I perceive, [pense;
Men must learn now with pity to dis-
For policy sits above conscience.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in SEMPRONIUS' House.

Enter SEMPRONIUS, and a Servant of TIMON'S.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't, —hum!—'bove all others?
He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these
Owe their estates unto him.
Serv. My lord,
They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for
They have all denied him.
Sem. How! have they denied him?
Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him? [hum!
And does he send to me? Three? hum!
It shows but little love or judgment in him: [like physicians,
Must I be his last refuge? His friends,
Thrice give him over: must I take the cure upon me?
He has much disgraced me in't; I'm angry at him,
That might have known my place: I see no sense for 't,
But his occasions might have woo'd me first; [man
For, in my conscience, I was the first
That e'er received gift from him:
And does he think so backwardly of me now, [may prove
That I'll requite it last? No: so it

And I amongst the lords be thought a fool. [sum,
I'd rather than the worth of thrice the
He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;
I'd such a courage to do him good.
But now return, [join;
And with their faint reply this answer
Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin. [Exit.
Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic; he crossed himself by 't: and I cannot think but, in the end, the villanies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked; like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire:
Of such a nature is his politic love.
This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled, [are dead,
Save the gods only: now his friends
Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards [ploy'd
Many a bounteous year, must be em-
Now to guard sure their master.
And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TITUS, HORTENSIUS, and other Servants to TIMON'S Creditors, waiting his coming out.

First Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, Titus and Hortensius.
Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.
Hor. Lucius!
What, do we meet together?
Luc. Serv. Ay, and I think
One business does command us all; for mine
Is money.
Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotus too!
Phi. Good day at once.
Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.
What do you think the hour?
Phi. Labouring for nine.
Luc. Serv. So much?
Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?
Luc. Serv. Not yet.
Phi. I wonder on 't; he was wont to shine at seven.
Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him:
You must consider that a prodigal course [recoverable
Is like the sun's; but not, like his,
I fear [purse;
'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's

That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet
Find little.
Phi. I am of your fear for that.
Tit. I'll show you how to observe a strange event.
Your lord sends now for money.
Hor. Most true, he does.
Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,
For which I wait for money.
Hor. It is against my heart.
Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows, [he owes:
Timon in this should pay more than
And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels,
And send for money for 'em.
Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness: [wealth,
I know my lord hath spent of Timon's
And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.
First Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns; what's yours?
Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.
First Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sum
Your master's confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equall'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of Lord Timon's men.
Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word: pray, is my lord ready to come forth?
Flam. No, indeed he is not.
Tit. We attend his lordship: pray, signify so much.
Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit.

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?
He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.
Tit. Do you hear, sir? [sir,—
Sec. Var. Serv. By your leave,
Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend? [sir.
Tit. We wait for certain money here,
Flav. Ay,
If money were as certain as your waiting, [ferr'd you not
'Twere sure enough. Why then preYour sums and bills, when your false masters eat
Of my lord's meat? Then they could smile and fawn [terest
Upon his debts, and take down the in-
Into their gluttonous maws. You do yourselves but wrong
To stir me up; let me pass quietly:
Believe 't, my lord and I have made an end;
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.
Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve. [base as you;
Flav. If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so
For you serve knaves. [Exit.
First Var. Serv. How! what does his cashiered worship mutter?
Sec. Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.
Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from 't; for, take 't on my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him; he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber.
Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are not sick:
And if it be so far beyond his health,
Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a clear way to the gods.
Serv. Good gods!
Tit. We cannot take this for an answer, sir.
Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help! My lord! my lord!

Enter TIMON, in a rage; FLAMINIUS following.

Tim. What, are my doors opposed against my passage?
Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?
The place which I have feasted, does it now, [heart?
Like all mankind, show me an iron
Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.
Luc. Serv. Here 's mine.
Hor. And mine, my lord.
Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.
Phi. All our bills.
Tim. Knock me down with 'em: cleave me to the girdle.
Luc. Serv. Alas, my lord,—
Tim. Cut my heart in sums.
Tit. Mine, fifty talents.
Tim. Tell out my blood.
Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.
Tim. Five thousand drops pays that. What yours?—and yours?
First Var. Serv. My lord,—
Sec. Var. Serv. My lord,—
Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.
Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money: these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em. [Exeunt.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves.
Creditors?—devils!
Flav. My dear lord,—
Tim. What if it should be so?
Flav. My lord,—
Tim. I'll have it so. My steward!
Flav. Here, my lord.
Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again,
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius: all:
I'll once more feast the rascals.
Flav. O my lord,
You only speak from your distracted soul;
There is not so much left, to furnish out
A moderate table.
Tim. Be 't not in thy care; go,
I charge thee; invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. The Senate-house.

The Senate sitting.

First Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's
Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die:
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.
Sec. Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.

Enter ALCIBIADES, attended.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!
First Sen. Now, captain?
Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood, [past depth
Hath stepp'd into the law, which is
To those that without heed do plunge into 't.
He is a man, setting his fate aside,
Of comely virtues: [ice,—
Nor did he soil the fact with cowardAn honour in him which buys out his fault,—
But with a noble fury and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe: [sion
And with such sober and unnoted pas-He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but proved an argument.
First Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox, [fair:
Striving to make an ugly deed look
Your words have took such pains as if they labour'd
To bring manslaughter into form, and set quarrelling
Upon the head of valour; which indeed
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world [born:

To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

And the ass more captain than the lion, the felon

If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good:
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;
But in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just.
To be in anger is impiety;
But who is man that is not angry?
Weigh but the crime with this.

Sec. Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain! his service done
At Lacedæmon and Byzantium
Were a sufficient briber for his life.

First Sen. What's that?

Alcib. I say, my lords, he has done fair service, [mies:
And slain in fight many of your ene-
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds!

Sec. Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em, [often
He's a sworn rioter: he has a sin that
Drowns him and takes his valour prisoner: [alone
If there were no foes, that were enough
To overcome him: in that beastly fury
He has been known to commit outrages
And cherish factions: 'tis inferr'd to us, [gerous.

First Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.

Third Sen. What!

Alcib. I cannot think but your age has forgot me; [base it could not else be I should prove so
To sue and be denied such common grace:
My wounds ache at you.

First Sen. Do you dare our anger?
'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish me!
Banish your dotage; banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly.

First Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain thee,
Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,
He shall be executed presently.
[Exeunt Senators.

Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough, that you may live
Only in bone, that none may look on you! [back their foes,
I am worse than mad: I have kept
While they have told their money and let out
Their coin upon large interest, I myself
Rich only in large hurts. All those for this? [senate

SCENE VI.—A Banqueting-room in TIMON'S House.

Music. Tables set out: Servants attending. Enter divers Lords, Senators, and Others, at several doors.

First Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

Sec. Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

First Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

Sec. Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

First Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

Sec. Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

First Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

Sec. Lord. Every man here 's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

First Lord. A thousand pieces.

Sec. Lord. A thousand pieces!

First Lord. What of you?

Sec. Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter TIMON and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both: and how fare you?

First Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

Sec. Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship.

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men.—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to 't presently.

First Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.

Sec. Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah, my good friend, what cheer?

Sec. Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

Sec. Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance.

[The Banquet brought in.

Come, bring in all together.

Sec. Lord. All covered dishes!

First Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

Third Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

First Lord. How do you? What's the news? [hear you of it?

Third Lord. Alcibiades is banished: First and Sec. Lord. Alcibiades banished!

Third Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

First Lord. How! how!

Sec. Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

Third Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

Sec. Lord. This is the old man still.

Third Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold? [—and so—

Sec. Lord. It does: but time will

Third Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods, —the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes are uncovered and seen to be full of warm water.

Some of the Guests. What does his lordship mean?

Other of the Guests. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and lukewarm water [last;
Is your perfection. This is Timon's
Who stuck and spangled you with flatteries, [faces
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your

Most smiling, smooth, detested para-
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears, [Time's flies,
You fools of Fortune, trencher-friends,
Cap-and-knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!
Of man and beast the infinite malady
Crust you quite o'er!—What, dost thou go? [and thou:—
Soft! take thy physic first—thou too—
Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.

[Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast, [guest.
Whereat a villain's not a welcome
Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be
Of Timon, man, and all humanity!

Re-enter the Lords, Senators, etc.

First Lord. How now, my lords!

Sec. Lord. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury? [cap?

Third Lord. Pish! did you see my

Fourth Lord. I have lost my gown.

First Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat. Did you see my jewel?

Third Lord. Did you see my cap?

Sec. Lord. Here 'tis.

Fourth Lord. Here lies my gown.

First Lord. Let's make no stay.

Sec. Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

Third Lord. I feel't upon my bones.

Fourth Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall, [the earth,

The gods confound—hear me, you good
The Athenians both within and out that wall! [may grow
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate
To the whole race of mankind, high and low!
Amen. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Athens. TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants.

First Serv. Hear you, master steward, where's our master?
Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?
Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you? [gods,
Let me be recorded by the righteous
I am as poor as you.
First Serv. Such a house broke!
So noble a master fall'n! All gone! and not [arm,
One friend to take his fortune by the
And go along with him!
Sec. Serv. As we do turn our backs
From our companion thrown into his grave,
So his familiars to his buried fortunes
Slink all away; leave their false vows with him, [poor self,
Like empty purses pick'd; and his
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty,
Walks, like contempt, alone.—More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.
Third Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery; [still,
That see I by our faces; we are fellows
Serving alike in sorrow: leak'd is our bark; [deck,
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying
Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
Into this sea of air.
Flav. Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you. [sake
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's
Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and say, [fortunes,
As 'twere a knell unto our master's
'We have seen better days.' Let each take some.

[Giving them money.

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more: [poor.
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting

[Servants embrace, and part several ways.

O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us! [exempt,
Who would not wish to be from wealth
Since riches point to misery and contempt? [to live
Who'd be so mock'd with glory? or
But in a dream of friendship?
To have his pomp and all what state compounds [friends?
But only painted, like his varnish'd
Poor honest lord, brought low by his own heart, [sual blood,
Undone by goodness! Strange, unu-
When man's worst sin is, he does too much good! [again?
Who then dares to be half so kind
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men. [accursed,
My dearest lord, bless'd, to be most
Rich, only to be wretched, thy great fortunes [kind lord!
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas,
He's flung in rage from this ungrateful seat [him to
Of monstrous friends; nor has he with Supply his life, or that which can command it.
I'll follow, and inquire him out:
I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Woods and Cave, near the Sea-shore.

Enter TIMON, from the Cave.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth [orb
Rotten humidity; below thy sister's
Infect the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb,—
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,

Scarce is dividant,—touch them with several fortunes; [ture,
The greater scorns the lesser: not na-
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune
But by contempt of nature.
Raise me this beggar and deny 't that lord; [ditary,
The senator shall bear contempt here-
The beggar native honour. [sides,
It is the pasture lards the rother's
The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,
In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say 'This man's a flatterer'? if one be, [tune
So are they all; for every grise of for-
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate [oblique;
Ducks to the golden fool: all is
There's nothing level in our cursed natures [horr'd
But direct villany. Therefore, be ab-
All feasts, societies, and throngs of men! [disdains:
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon
Destruction fang mankind! Earth, yield me roots! [Digging.
Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate [is here?
With thy most operant poison! What
Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods,
I am no idle votarist: roots, you clear heavens! [white, foul fair,
Thus much of this will make black
Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward valiant.
Ha, you gods! why this? what this, you gods? Why, this
Will lug your priests and servants from your sides; [their heads:
Pluck stout men's pillows from below
This yellow slave [accursed;
Will knit and break religions; bless the

And give them title, knee and appro-
With senators on the bench: this is it
That makes the wappen'd widow wed again; [ous sores
She, whom the spital-house and ulcer-
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices [damned earth,
To the April day again. Come,
Thou common whore of mankind, that put'st odds
Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature. [March afar off.] Ha! a drum? — Thou'rt quick, [strong thief,
But yet I'll bury thee: thou'lt go,
When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand.
Nay, stay thou out for earnest.
[Keeping some gold.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with Drum and Fife, in warlike manner; PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Alcib. What art thou there? speak.
Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart,
For showing me again the eyes of man!
Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,
That art thyself a man? [mankind.
Tim. I am Misanthropos, and hate
For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.
Alcib. I know thee well;
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.
Tim. I know thee too; and more than that I know thee
I not desire to know. Follow thy drum; [gules, gules:
With man's blood paint the ground,
Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;
Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine [sword,
Hath in her more destruction than thy
For all her cherubin look.
Phry. Thy lips rot off!
Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns
To thine own lips again.
Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change? [light to give:
Tim. As the moon does, by wanting
But then renew I could not, like the moon;
There were no suns to borrow of.
Alcib. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee? [opinion.
Tim. None, but to maintain my
Alcib. What is it, Timon?
Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man: if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man!

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries. [prosperity.
Tim. Thou saw'st them when I had
Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.
Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.
Timan. Is this the Athenian minion whom the world
Voiced so regardfully?
Tim. Art thou Timandra?
Timan. Yes. [not that use thee;
Tim. Be a whore still: they love thee
Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust. [the slaves
Make use of thy salt hours: season
For tubs and baths; bring down rose-cheeked youth
To the tub-fast and the diet.
Timan. Hang thee, monster!
Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra; for his wits
Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon, [revolt
The want whereof doth daily make
In my penurious band: I have heard, and grieved, [worth,
How cursed Athens, mindless of thy
Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,
But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them,—
Tim. I prithee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.
Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.
Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?
I had rather be alone.
Alcib. Why, fare thee well:
Here's some gold for thee.
Tim. Keep 't, I cannot eat it.
Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—
Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?
Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.
Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest; [quer'd!
And thee after, when thou hast con-
Alcib. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That, by killing of villains,
Thou wast born to conquer my country.
Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold —go on;
Be as a planetary plague, when Jove
Will o'er some high-viced city hang his poison [one:
In the sick air: let not thy sword skip
Pity not honour'd age for his white beard; [terfeit matron;
He is an usurer: strike me the coun-
It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself's a bawd: let not the virgin's cheek [those milk-paps,
Make soft thy trenchant sword; for
That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,
Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
But set them down horrible traitors: spare not the babe,
Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy;
Think it a bastard, whom the oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounced thy throat shall cut, [against objects;
And mince it sans remorse: swear
Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes, [maids, nor babes,
Whose proof nor yells of mothers,
Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding, [thy soldiers:
Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay
Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent, [be gone.
Confounded be thyself! Speak not,
Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou givest me,
Not all thy counsel.
Tim. Dost thou or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee!
Phry. } Give us some gold, good
Timan. } Timon: hast thou more?
Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,
And to make whores, a bawd. Hold up, you sluts, [oathable,
Your aprons mountant: you are not
Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear, [agues,
Into strong shudders and to heavenly
The immortal gods that hear you; spare your oaths,
I'll trust to your conditions: be whores still; [convert you,
And he whose pious breath seeks to
Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up; [smoke,
Let your close fire predominate his
And be no turncoats: yet may your pains, six months,
Be quite contrary: and thatch your poor thin roofs

With burdens of the dead;—some that were hang'd,
No matter:—wear them, betray with them: whore still;
Paint till a horse may mire upon your face:
A pox of wrinkles!
Phry. } Well, more gold: what
Timan. } then? [gold.
Believe 't that we'll do any thing for
Tim. Consumptions sow
In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,
That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quillets shrilly: hoar the flamen,
That scolds against the quality of flesh,
And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away
Of him that, his particular to foresee,
Smells from the general weal: make curl'd-pate ruffians bald;
And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you: plague all;
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection. There's more gold:
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!
Phry. } More counsel with more
Timan. } money, bounteous Timon.
Tim. More whore, more mischief first; I have given you earnest.
Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens! Farewell, Timon:
If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.
Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more.
Alcib. I never did thee harm.
Tim. Yes, thou spokest well of me.
Alcib. Call'st thou that harm?
Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take Thy beagles with thee.
Alcib. We but offend him. Strike!
[Drum beats. Exeunt ALCIBIADES, PHRYNIA, and TIMANDRA.
Tim. That Nature, being sick of man's unkindness,
Should yet be hungry! Common mother, thou,
Whose womb unmeasurable and infinite breast [Digging.
Teems, and feeds all; whose selfsame mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,
Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm,
With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;
Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root!
Ensear thy fertile and conceptious womb,
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!
Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented!—O, a root! dear thanks!—
Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas;
Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips!

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man? plague! plague!
Apem. I was directed hither: men report
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.
Tim. 'Tis then because thou dost not keep a dog,
Whom I would imitate: consumption catch thee!
Apem. This is in thee a nature but affected;
A poor unmanly melancholy sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft;
Hug their diseased perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods
By putting on the cunning of a carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'lt observe
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain
And call it excellent: thou wast told thus;

Thou gavest thine ears, like tapsters that bid welcome,
To knaves and all approachers: 'tis most just [wealth again,
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou
Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself;

A madman so long, now a fool. What, think'st [chamberlain,
That the bleak air, thy boisterous
Will put thy shirt on warm? will these moss'd trees, [heels,
That have outlived the eagle, page thy
And skip where thou point'st out? will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste, [the creatures
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? Call
Whose naked natures live in all the spite [housed trunks,
Of wreakful heaven, whose bare un-
To the conflicting elements exposed,
Answer mere nature; bid them flatter thee;
O, thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee: depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a caitiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in 't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on [but thou
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well:
Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again,
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: best state, contentless, [being,
Hath a distracted and most wretched
Worse than the worst, content.
Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable. [miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath that is more
Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm [a dog.
With favour never clasp'd; but bred
Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded [affords
The sweet degrees that this brief world
To such as may the passive drudges of it [plunged thyself
Freely command, thou wouldst have
In general riot; melted down thy youth [learn'd
In different beds of lust; and never
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd [myself,
The sugar'd game before thee. But
Who had the world as my confectionary, [hearts of men
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes and
At duty, more than I could frame employment, [leaves
That numberless upon me stuck, as
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush [open, bare
Fell from their boughs, and left me
For every storm that blows;—I, to bear this, [burden:
That never knew but better, is some
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men?
They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given? [rag,
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor
Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff [thee
To some she beggar and compounded
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone! [of men,
If thou hadst not been born the worst
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was
No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:
Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee, [thee gone.
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.
[Offering him something.

Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were. [Athens?

Apem. What wouldst thou have to

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt, [I have.
Tell them there I have gold; look, so

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best and truest;
For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where liest o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that 's above me.
Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient and knew my mind!

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: when thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee t' attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when peradventure thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee, and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury: wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse: wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard: wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life: all thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence. What beast couldst thou be that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation!

Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here: the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter: the plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way: when I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus. [fools alive.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon!

Apem. A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee. [hands.
I'll beat thee,—but I should infect my

Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off! [dog!
Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy
Choler does kill me that thou art alive;
I swoon to see thee.
Apem. Would thou wouldst burst!
Tim. Away.
Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I shall lose
A stone by thee.
[Throws a stone at him.
Apem. Beast!
Tim. Slave!
Apem. Toad!
Tim. Rouge, rogue, rogue!
[APEMANTUS retreats backward, as going.
I am sick of this false world, and will love nought
But even the mere necessities upon 't.
Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave; [may beat
Lie where the light foam of the sea
Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph, [laugh.
That death in me at others' lives may [Looking on the gold.] O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce
'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler [Mars!
Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant
Thou ever young, fresh, loved, and delicate wooer,
Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow [god,
That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible
That solder'st close impossibilities,
And makest them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue,
To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts! [thy virtue
Think thy slave man rebels; and by
Set them into confounding odds, that beasts
May have the world in empire!
Apem. Would 'twere so!
But not till I am dead. I'll say thou hast gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.
Tim. Throng'd to!
Apem. Ay.
Tim. Thy back, I prithee.
Apem. Live, and love thy misery!
Tim. Long live so, and so die! [Exit APEMANTUS.] I am quit.
More things like men! Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter Thieves.

First Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder: the mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy. [mass of treasure.
Sec. Thief. It is noised he hath a
Third Thief. Let us make the assay upon him: if he care not for 't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall 's get it?
Sec. Thief. True; for he bears it not about him; 'tis hid.
First Thief. Is not this he?
All. Where?
Sec. Thief. 'Tis his description.
Third Thief. He; I know him.
All. Save thee, Timon.
Tim. Now, thieves?
All. Soldiers, not thieves.
Tim. Both too; and women's sons.
All. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.
Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of men.
Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;
Within this mile break forth a hundred springs; [hips;
The oaks bear mast, the briers scarlet
The bounteous housewife, Nature, on each bush [why want?
Lays her full mess before you. Want!
First Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water,
As beasts and birds and fishes.
Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;
You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con [you work not
That you are thieves profess'd; that
In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves,
Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape,
Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth, [physician;
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the
His antidotes are poison, and he slays
More than you rob: take wealth and lives together; [do 't,
Do villany, do, since you profess to
Like workmen. I'll example you with thievery: [attraction
The sun's a thief, and with his great

rant thief, [the sun:
And her pale fire she snatches from
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves [a thief,
The moon into salt tears: the earth's
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen [a thief:
From general excrement: each thing's
The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power
Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves; away.
Rob one another. There's more gold.
Cut throats: [Athens go,
All that you meet are thieves: to Break open shops; nothing can you steal, [for this
But thieves do lose it: steal not less
I give you; and gold confound you howsoe'er!
Amen. [Retires towards his cave.

Third Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession by persuading me to it.

First Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

Sec. Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

First Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens: there is no time so miserable but a man may be true.

[Exeunt Thieves.

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods! [lord?
Is yon despised and ruinous man my Full of decay and failing? O monument [stow'd!
And wonder of good deeds evilly be-
What an alteration of honour
Has desperate want made!
What viler thing upon the earth than friends [ends!
Who can bring noblest minds to basest
How rarely does it meet with this time's guise, [enemies!
When man was wish'd to love his
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischief me than those that do! [present
He has caught me in his eye: I will
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord, [est master!
Still serve him with my life.—My dear-

Tim. [Coming forward.] Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;
Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee. [yours.

Flav. An honest poor servant of

Tim. Then I know thee not:
I ne'er had honest man about me, I; all
I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness, [grief
Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep? come nearer. Then I love thee,
Because thou art a woman, and dis-claim'st [give
Flinty mankind, whose eyes do never
But thorough lust and laughter. Pity 's sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief, and, whilst this poor wealth lasts,
To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward [able?
So true, so just, and now so comfort-
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild. [man
Let me behold thy face. Surely this
Was born of woman. [rashness,
Forgive my general and exceptless
You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim [but one;
One honest man—mistake me not—
No more, I pray,—and he's a steward.
How fain would I have hated all mankind! [save thee,
And thou redeem'st thyself: but all,
I fell with curses. [than wise;
Methinks thou art more honest now
For, by oppressing and betraying me,
Thou mightst have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters,
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true— [sure—
For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
If not a usuring kindness, and as rich
men deal gifts,
Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast [late:
Doubt and suspect, alas, are placed too
You should have fear'd false times when you did feast:
Suspect still comes where an estate is least. [merely love,
That which I show, heaven knows, is
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living; and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
To requite me by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so! Thou singly honest man, [misery,
Here, take: the gods, out of my
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy; [from men;
But thus condition'd: thou shalt build
Hate all, curse all, show charity to none; [the bone
But let the famish'd flesh slide from
Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs [swallow 'em,
What thou deniest to men; let prisons
Debts wither 'em to nothing: be men like blasted woods,
And may diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O, let me stay
And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hatest
Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou 'rt blest and free: [see thee.

[Exit FLAVIUS. TIMON retires to his cave.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Woods. Before TIMON'S Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter; TIMON behind, unperceived.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? does the rumour hold for true, that he's so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity: 'tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travail for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation: only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time: it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Tim. [Aside.] Excellent workman! thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him: it must be a personating of himself; a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. [Aside.] Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:
Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True; [ner'd night,
When the day serves, before black-cor-
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. [Aside.] I'll meet you at the turn. What a god 's gold,
That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple

Than where swine feed !
'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark and plough'st the foam,
Settlest admired reverence in a slave :
To thee be worship ! and thy saints for aye [obey !
Be crown'd with plagues that thee alone
Fit I meet them. [Advancing.
Poet. Hail, worthy Timon !
Pain. Our late noble master !
Tim. Have I once lived to see two honest men ?
Poet. Sir,
Having often of your open bounty tasted, [fall'n off,
Hearing you were retired, your friends
Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits !— [enough—
Not all the whips of heaven are large
What ! to you, [influence
Whose star-like nobleness gave life and
To their whole being ! I'm rapt, and cannot cover
The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.
Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the better : [you are,
You that are honest, by being what
Make them best seen and known.
Pain. He and myself
Have travail'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.
Tim. Ay, you are honest men.
Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.
Tim. Most honest men ! Why, how shall I requite you ?
Can you eat roots, and drink cold water ? no.
Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.
Tim. Ye're honest men : ye've heard that I have gold ;
I am sure you have : speak truth ; ye're honest men.
Pain. So it is said, my noble lord : but therefore Came not my friend nor I.
Tim. Good honest men ! [To Pain.] Thou draw'st a counterfeit
Best in all Athens : thou'rt indeed the best ;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.
Pain. So, so, my lord.
Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. [To Poet] And, for thy fiction,
Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth [art.—
That thou art even natural in thine
But, for all this, my honest-natured friends, [fault :
I must needs say you have a little
Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you ; neither wish I
You take too much pains to mend.
Both. Beseech your honour
To make it known to us.
Tim. You'll take it ill.
Both. Most thankfully, my lord.
Tim. Will you, indeed ?
Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.
Tim. There's ne'er a one of you but trusts a knave
That mightily deceives you.
Both. Do we, my lord ?
Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble, [feed him,
Know his gross patchery, love him,
Keep in your bosom : yet remain assured
That he's a made-up villain.
Pain. I know none such, my lord.
Poet. Nor I.
Tim. Look you, I love you well ; I'll give you gold, [panies :
Rid me these villains from your com-
Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught, [come to me,
Confound them by some course, and
I'll give you gold enough.
Both. Name them, my lord, let's know them.
Tim. You that way, and you this, but two in company :
Each man apart, all single and alone,
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.
[To Pain.] If, where thou art, two villains shall not be,
Come not near him. [To Poet] If thou wouldst not reside
But where one villain is, then him abandon.—
Hence ! pack ! there's gold ; you came for gold, ye slaves :
[To Pain.] You have done work for me, there 's payment : hence !
[To Poet] You are an alchemist ; make gold of that :—
Out, rascal dogs !
[Beats them out, and then retires to his cave.

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;
For he is set so only to himself
That nothing but himself which looks like man
Is friendly with him.

First Sen. Bring us to his cave:
It is our part and promise to the Athenians
To speak with Timon.

Sec. Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs
That framed him thus: Time, with his fairer hand,
Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him. Bring us to him,
And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.
Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!
Look out, and speak to friends: the Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:
Speak to them, noble Timon.

TIMON comes from his Cave.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn!—Speak, and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

First Sen. Worthy Timon,—

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

First Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them.

First Sen. O, forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators with one consent of love
Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

Sec. Sen. They confess
Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross:
Which now the public body, which doth seldom
Play the recanter, feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon;
And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,
Together with a recompense more fruitful
Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprise me to the very brink of tears:
Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,
And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.

First Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority: so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

Sec. Sen. And shakes his threatening sword
Against the walls of Athens.

First Sen. Therefore, Timon,—

Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir; thus:
If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not,
And let him take 't at worst; for their knives care not,
While you have throats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whittle in the unruly camp,
But I do prize it at my love before
The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not; all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph; [sickness
It will be seen to-morrow: my long
Of health and living now begins to mend, [Go, live still;
And nothing brings me all things.
Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!
First Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country, and am not [wreck,
One that rejoices in the common
As common bruit doth put it.
First Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Commend me to my loving countrymen,—
First Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.
Sec. Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphers
In their applauding gates.
Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them that, to ease them of their griefs, [aches, losses,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes [tain
That nature's fragile vessel doth sus-
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them:
I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.
Sec. Sen. I like this well; he will return again.
Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down, [friends,
And shortly must I fell it: tell my
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree
From high to low throughout, that whoso please [haste,
To stop affliction, let him take his
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe, [greeting.
And hang himself. I pray you, do my
Flav. Trouble him no further; thus you still shall find him.
Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Athens, [sion
Timon hath made his everlasting man-
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood; [froth
Whom once a day with his embossed
The turbulent surge shall cover: thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle.
Lips, let sour words go by and language end: [mend!
What is amiss plague and infection
Graves only be men's works, and death their gain! [his reign.
Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done
[Retires to his cave.
First Sen. His discontents are unremoveably
Coupled to nature.
Sec. Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return, [unto us
And strain what other means is left
In our dear peril.
First Sen. It requires swift foot.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators, and a Messenger.

First Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files
As full as thy report?
Mess. I have spoke the least:
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.
Sec. Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.
Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend; [opposed,
Whom, though in general part we were
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like friends: this man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which imported [your city,
His fellowship i' the cause against
In part for his sake moved.
First Sen. Here come our brothers.

Enter the Senators from TIMON.

Third Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.
The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring [prepare:
Doth choke the air with dust: in, and
Ours is the fall, I fear; our foes the snare. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Woods. TIMON'S Cave, and a rude Tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking TIMON.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.

Who 's here? speak, ho!—No answer! —What is this?

[Reads Inscription on the rock.

TIMON IS DEAD, WHO HATH OUTSTRETCH'D HIS SPAN:
SOME BEAST READ THIS; THERE DOES NOT LIVE A MAN.

Dead, sure; and this his grave.

[Seeing another Inscription on the Tomb.

What 's on this tomb
I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax:
Our captain hath in every figure skill,
An aged interpreter, though young in days: [this,
Before proud Athens he 's set down by Whose fall the mark of his ambition is.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES and Forces.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach.

[A Parley sounded.

Enter Senators on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on and fill'd the time [your wills
With all licentious measure, making
The scope of justice; till now myself and such [power
As slept within the shadow of your
Have wander'd with our traversed arms and breathed [is flush,
Our sufferance vainly: now the time
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong, [less wrong
Cries of itself 'No more:' now breath-
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease, [wind
And pursy insolence shall break his
With fear and horrid flight.

First Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit, [of fear,
Ere thou hadst power or we had cause
We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

Sec. Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promised means:

We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

First Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom [they such
You have received your griefs: nor are
That these great towers, trophies and schools should fall
For private faults in them.

Sec. Sen. Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out; [excess
Shame that they wanted cunning, in
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death,—
If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which Nature loathes,—take thou the destined tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

First Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square to take [like lands,
On those that are, revenges: crimes,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman, [thy rage:
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without
Spare thy Athenian cradle and those kin [fall
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must
With those that have offended: like a shepherd [forth,
Approach the fold and cull the infected
But kill not all together.

Sec. Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to 't with thy sword.

First Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampired gates, and they shall ope; [before,
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart
To say thou'lt enter friendly.

Sec. Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress [powers
And not as our confusion, all thy Shall make their harbour in our town, till we
Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports: [own,
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine

Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more: and, to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning, not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

[The Senators descend, and open the Gates.

Enter Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea;
And on his grave-stone this insculpture, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads the Epitaph.]

'Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name: a plague consume you wicked caitiffs left!
Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:
Pass by and curse thy fill, but pass and stay not here thy gait.'

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefs,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets which
From niggard Nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon: of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword;
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war; make each
Prescribe to other as each other's leech.—
Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and a Rabble of Citizens.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home:
Is this a holiday? what! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day without the sign
Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou?

First Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron and thy rule?
What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—
You, sir, what trade are you?

Sec. Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? answer me directly.

Sec. Cit. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is indeed, sir, a member of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

Sec. Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? mend me, thou saucy fellow!

Sec. Cit. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Sec. Cit. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I re-cover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?
Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Sec. Cit. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Cæsar and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?
What tributaries follow him to Rome,
To grace in captive bonds his chariot-wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!
O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft

Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chim-[ney-tops,
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The live-long day, with patient expect-[ation,
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his chariot but ap-[pear,
Have you not made an universal shout,
That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds
Made in her concave shores? [tire?
And do you now put on your best at-
And do you now cull out a holiday?
And do you now strew flowers in his way [blood?
That comes in triumph over Pompey's
Be gone! [knees,
Run to your houses, fall upon your

That needs must light on this ingrati-[tude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault, [sort;
Assemble all the poor men of your

This way will I: disrobe the images,

You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about, [streets:
And drive away the vulgar from the
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch;
Who else would soar above the view of men
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter, in Procession, with Music, CÆSAR; ANTONY, for the course; CALPURNIA, PORTIA, DECIUS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA; a great Crowd following; among them a Soothsayer.

Cæs. Calpurnia!

Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks. [Music ceases.

Cæs. Calpurnia!

Cal. Here, my lord. [way,

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius'
When he doth run his course.—Antonius!

Ant. Cæsar, my lord? [Antonius!

Cæs. Forget not, in your speed,
To touch Calpurnia; for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curse.

Ant. I shall remember:
When Cæsar says 'Do this,' it is perform'd.

Cæs. Set on; and leave no ceremony out. [Music.

Sooth. Cæsar!

Cæs. Ha! who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still; peace yet again. [Music ceases.

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on me? [music,
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the Cry 'Cæsar!' Speak; Cæsar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.

Cæs. What man is that?

Bru. A soothsayer, bids you beware the Ides of March.

Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his face.

Cas. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Cæsar.

Cæs. What say'st thou to me now? speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.

Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him: pass.

[Sennet. Exeunt all but BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?

Bru. Not I.

Cas. I pray you, do. [some part

Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.

Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you. [of late:
Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now
I have not from your eyes that gentleness [have:
And show of love as I was wont to
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.
Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceived: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours; [be grieved—
But let not therefore my good friends
Among which number, Cassius, be you one—
Nor construe any further my neglect
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war, [men.
Forgets the shows of love to other
Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried [tations.
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogi-
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face? [not itself
Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees
But by reflection, by some other things.
Cas. 'Tis just:
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard [Rome,
Where many of the best respect in
Except immortal Cæsar, speaking of Brutus, [yoke,
And groaning underneath this age's
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes. [lead me, Cassius,
Bru. Into what dangers would you
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?
Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepared to hear:
And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of. [tus:
And be not jealous of me, gentle Bru-
Were I a common laugher, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester; if you know
That I do fawn on men and hug them hard, [know
And after scandal them; or if you
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous. [Flourish and shout.
Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear, the people
Choose Cæsar for their king.
Cas. Ay, do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so. [love him well.
Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I
But wherefore do you hold me here so long? [me?
What is it that you would impart to
If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death. [Brutus,
Cas. I know that virtue to be in you,
As well as I do know your outward favour. [story.
Well, honour is the subject of my
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.
I was born free as Cæsar; so were you:
We both have fed as well, and we can both [he:
Endure the winter's cold as well as
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores, [sius, now
Cæsar said to me 'Darest thou, Cas-
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?' Upon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in
And bade him follow; so indeed he did.
The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy; [posed,
But ere we could arrive the point pro-

Cæsar cried 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink!'
I, as Æneas, our great ancestor,
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber
Did I the tired Cæsar. And this man
Is now become a god; and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body
If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when the fit was on him, I did mark [did shake:
How he did shake: 'tis true, this god
His coward lips did from their colour fly, [awe the world
And that same eye whose bend doth
Did lose his lustre: I did hear him groan: [the Romans
Ay, and that tongue of his that bade
Mark him and write his speeches in their books, [Titinius,'
Alas! it cried 'Give me some drink,
As a sick girl. Ye gods! it doth amaze me
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world
And bear the palm alone.

[Shout. Flourish.

Bru. Another general shout!
I do believe that these applauses are
For some new honours that are heap'd on Cæsar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates: [stars,
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our
But in ourselves, that we are underlings. [that 'Cæsar'?
Brutus, and Cæsar: what should be in
Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
Write them together, yours is as fair a name; [as well;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,
'Brutus' will start a spirit as soon as 'Cæsar.'

[Shout.

Now, in the names of all the gods at once, [feed,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art shamed! [bloods!
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble
When went there by an age, since the great flood, [one man?
But it was famed with more than with
When could they say till now that talk'd of Rome
That her wide walls encompass'd but one man? [enough,
Now is it Rome indeed, and room
When there is in it but one only man.
O, you and I have heard our fathers say
There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd [Rome
The eternal devil to keep his state in
As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
What you would work me to, I have some aim: [these times,
How I have thought of this and of
I shall recount hereafter; for this present, [entreat you,
I would not, so with love I might
Be any further moved. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time [high things.
Both meet to hear and answer such
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Bru. The games are done, and Cæsar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve; [you
And he will, after his sour fashion, tell
What hath proceeded worthy note today.

Re-enter CÆSAR and his train.

Bru. I will do so: but, look you, Cassius, [brow,
The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's

And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calpurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.
Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.
Cæs. Antonius!
Ant. Cæsar?
Cæs. Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.
Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar; he's not dangerous;
He is a noble Roman, and well given.
Cæs. Would he were fatter!—but I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;
He is a great observer, and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men; he loves no plays,
As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music;
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself and scorn'd his spirit
That could be moved to smile at any thing.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd
Than what I fear; for always I am Cæsar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Sennet. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train. CASCA stays behind.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanced to-day,
That Cæsar looks so sad.

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what hath chanced.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offered him: and being offered him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Cas. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offered him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was 't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offered him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown: yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets: and, as I told you, he put it by once; but for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again: but, to my thinking, he was very loth to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; he put it the third time by: and still as he refused it, the rabblement hooted, and clapped their chopped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swooned and fell down at it: and for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But, soft, I pray you: what, did Cæsar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like: he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet and offered them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had done or said any thing amiss, he desired their worships to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried 'Alas, good soul!' and forgave him with all their hearts: but there's no need to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again: but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good: I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both.

[Exit.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be! [to school.
He was quick mettle when he went

Cas. So he is now in execution
Of any bold or noble enterprise,
However he puts on this tardy form.
This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you: [me,
To-morrow, if you please to speak with
I will come home to you; or, if you will, [you.
Come home to me and I will wait for

Cas. I will do so: till then, think of the world. [Exit BRUTUS.
Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,
Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is disposed: therefore 'tis meet [likes;
That noble minds keep ever with their
For who so firm that cannot be seduced? [Brutus:
Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves
If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius, [night,
He should not humour me. I will this
In several hands, in at his windows throw,
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion [in obscurely
That Rome holds of his name; wherein
Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:
And after this let Cæsar seat him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca: brought you Cæsar home?
Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you moved, when all the sway of earth
Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero,
I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds [seen
Have rived the knotty oaks; and I have
The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam, [clouds;
To be exalted with the threatening
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.
Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave—you know him well by sight—
Held up his left hand, which did flame
and burn [his hand,
Like twenty torches join'd; and yet
Not sensible of fire, remain'd un-
scorch'd. [my sword—
Besides—I ha' not since put up
Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glared upon me, and went surly
by, [drawn
Without annoying me: and there were
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,
Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw
Men all in fire walk up and down the streets. [sit
And yesterday the bird of night did
Even at noon-day upon the marketplace, [prodigies
Hooting and shrieking. When these
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say
'These are their reasons; they are natural;' [things
For, I believe, they are portentous
Unto the climate that they point upon.
Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time: [their fashion,
But men may construe things after Clean from the purpose of the things themselves. [row?
Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-mor-Casca. He doth; for he did bid An-tonius [to-morrow.
Send word to you he would be there
Cic. Good night then, Casca: this disturbed sky
Is not to walk in.
Casca. Farewell, Cicero.
[Exit CICERO.

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?
Casca. A Roman.
Cas. Casca, by your voice.
Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius,
what night is this! [men.
Cas. A very pleasing night to honest
Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?
Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.
For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night;
And thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bared my bosom to the thunder-
stone; [seem'd to open
And when the cross blue lightning
The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.
Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?
It is the part of men to fear and tremble
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.
Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life [want,
That should be in a Roman you do
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder, [heavens:
To see the strange impatience of the
But if you would consider the true cause [gliding ghosts,
Why all these fires, why all these Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind, [culate,
Why old men fool and children cal-
Why all these things change from their ordinance
Their natures and performed faculties
To monstrous quality,—why, you shall find [these spirits
That heaven hath infused them with
To make them instruments of fear and warning
Unto some monstrous state. [man
Nor could I, Casca, name to thee a
Most like this dreadful night,
That thunders, lightens, opens graves,
and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol,
A man no mightier than thyself or me
In personal action; yet prodigious grown [are.
And fearful, as these strange eruptions
Casca. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean;
is it not, Cassius? [now
Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans
Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors;
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds
are dead, [spirits;
And we are govern'd with our mothers'
Our yoke and sufferance show us
womanish.
Casca. Indeed, they say the senators to-morrow
Mean to establish Cæsar as a king;

And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.
Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then:
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius.
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat;
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear
I can shake off at pleasure.
[Thunder still.
Casca. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.
Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant then? Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
Begin it with weak straws: what trash is Rome,
What rubbish and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief,
Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak this
Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.
Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such a man
That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes farthest.
Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Casca, I have moved already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir or walking in the streets,
And the complexion of the element
In favour 's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.
Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.
Cas. 'Tis Cinna; I do know him by his gait;
He is a friend.

Enter CINNA.

Cinna, where haste you so?
Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?
Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?
Cin. I am glad on 't. What a fearful night is this!
There 's two or three of us have seen strange sights.
Cas. Am I not stay'd for? tell me.
Cin. Yes, you are.
O Cassius, if you could
But win the noble Brutus to our party—
Cas. Be you content: good Cinna, take this paper,
And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this in
In at his window; set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.
Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?
Cin. All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.
Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.
[Exit CINNA.
Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Upon the next encounter yields him ours.
Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's hearts;
And that which would appear offence in us
His countenance, like richest alchemy,

Will change to virtue and to worthiness.
Cas. Him and his worth and our great need of him [us go,
You have right well conceited. Let
For it is after midnight; and ere day
We will awake him and be sure of him.
[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. BRUTUS' Orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho!
I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day.—Lucius, I say!— [soundly.
I would it were my fault to sleep so
When, Lucius, when? awake, I say! what, Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?
Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius: [here.
When it is lighted, come and call me
Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.
Bru. It must be by his death: and for my part, [him,
I know no personal cause to spurn at
But for the general. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there's the question.
It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;
And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—that!— [him,
And then, I grant, we put a sting in
That at his will he may do danger with.
The abuse of greatness is when it disjoins [truth of Cæsar,
Remorse from power: and, to speak
I have not known when his affections sway'd [mon proof,
More than his reason. But 'tis a com-
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder, [face;
Whereto the climber-upward turns his
But when he once attains the upmost round, [back,
He then unto the ladder turns his
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees [may.
By which he did ascend. So Cæsar
Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel [is,
Will bear no colour for the thing he
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented, [tremities:
Would run to these and these ex-
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg, [grow mischievous;
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind,
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir. [found
Searching the window for a flint, I
This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure,
It did not lie there when I went to bed.
[Gives him a letter.
Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day. [March?
Is not to-morrow, boy, the Ides of
Luc. I know not, sir. [me word.
Bru. Look in the calendar and bring
Luc. I will, sir. [Exit.
Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air [them.
Give so much light that I may read by [Opens the letter, and reads.
'Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake, and see thyself.
Shall Rome, etc. Speak, strike, redress!
Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!'
Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up. [it out:
'Shall Rome, etc.' Thus must I piece
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What, Rome?
My ancestors did from the streets of Rome [a king.
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd
'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated
To speak and strike? O Rome, I make thee promise,
If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days. [Knocking within.
Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks.
[Exit LUCIUS.
Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar
I have not slept.
Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is

Like a phantasma or a hideous dream:
The Genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council, and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.
Bru. Is he alone?
Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.
Bru. Do you know them?
Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears, [cloaks,
And half their faces buried in their
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour.
Bru. Let 'em enter. [Exit LUCIUS.
They are the faction. O Conspiracy,
Shamest thou to show thy dangerous brow by night, [by day
When evils are most free? O, then,
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, Conspiracy;
Hide it in smiles and affability: [on;
For if thou path, thy native semblance
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the Conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest: [you?
Good-morrow, Brutus; do we trouble
Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all night.
Know I these men that come along with you? [no man here
Cas. Yes, every man of them; and
But honours you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.
Bru. He is welcome hither.
Cas. This Decius Brutus.
Bru. He is welcome too.
Cas. This Casca; this, Cinna; and this, Metellus Cimber.
Bru. They are all welcome.
What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?
Cas. Shall I entreat a word?
[BRUTUS and CASSIUS whisper.
Dec. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?
Casca. No. [yon grey lines
Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and
That fret the clouds are messengers of day. [are both deceived.
Casca. You shall confess that you
Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises; [south,
Which is a great way growing on the
Weighing the youthful season of the year. [ward the north
Some two months hence up higher to-
He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.
Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one. [tion.
Cas. And let us swear our resolu-
Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men, [abuse,—
The sufferance of our souls, the time's
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards and to steel with valour [countrymen,
The melting spirits of women, then,
What need we any spur but our own cause [bond
To prick us to redress? what other
Than secret Romans that have spoke the word, [oath
And will not palter? and what other
Than honesty to honesty engaged,
That this shall be or we will fall for it?
Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous, [souls
Old feeble carrions and such suffering
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear [not stain
Such creatures as men doubt; but do
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insuppressive mettle of our spirits, [formance
To think that or our cause or our per-
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood

That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.
Cas. But what of Cicero? shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with us.
Casca. Let us not leave him out.
Cin. No, by no means.
Met. O, let us have him; for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion,
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:
It shall be said his judgment ruled our hands;
Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.
Bru. O, name him not; let us not break with him;
For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.
Cas. Then leave him out.
Casca. Indeed he is not fit.
Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?
Cas. Decius, well urged: I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well beloved of Cæsar,
Should outlive Cæsar: we shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all: which to prevent,
Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.
Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards;
For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar.
Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar;
And in the spirit of men there is no spirit,
blood:
O, that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar! But, alas,
Cæsar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,
Let 's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let 's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds:
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary and not envious:
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm
When Cæsar's head is off.
Cas. Yet I do fear him;
For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cæsar—
Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him:
If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself, take thought and die for Cæsar:
And that were much he should; for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.
Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not die;
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.
Clock strikes.
Bru. Peace! count the clock.
Cas. The clock hath stricken three.
Treb. 'Tis time to part.
Cas. But it is doubtful yet
Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or no;
For he is superstitious grown of late;
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies:
It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.
Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolved,
I can o'ersway him; for he loves to hear
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
Lions with toils, and men with flatterers:
But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does; being then most flattered.
Let me work;
For I can give his humour the true bent,
And I will bring him to the Capitol.
Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.
Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the uttermost?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard, [Pompey:
Who rated him for speaking well of I wonder none of you have thought of him. [by him:

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along He loves me well, and I have given him reasons; [him.
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion

Cas. The morning comes upon 's: we'll leave you, Brutus:
And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember
What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on our purposes;
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untired spirits and formal constancy: [one.
And so, good-morrow to you every

[Exeunt all but BRUTUS.

Boy! Lucius!—Fast asleep? It is no matter; [ber:
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slum-
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord!

Bru. Portia, what mean you? wherefore rise you now?
It is not for your health thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You've ungently, Brutus, [supper,
Stole from my bed; and yesternight, at
You suddenly arose and walk'd about,
Musing and sighing, with your arms across; [ter was,
And when I ask'd you what the mat-
You stared upon me with ungentle looks: [your head,
I urged you further; then you scratch'd
And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot:
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not;
But, with an angry wafture of your hand, [did,
Gave sign for me to leave you: so I
Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man. [sleep;

Within the bond of marriage, tell me,
Is it expected I should know no secrets

A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife:
I grant I am a woman, but withal

Hark, hark! one knocks: Portia, go in awhile;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart: [thee,
All my engagements I will construe to
All the charactery of my sad brows.
Leave me with haste. [Exit PORTIA.]
Lucius, who's that knocks?

Re-enter LUCIUS with LIGARIUS.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.
Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.— [how?
Boy, stand aside.—Caius Ligarius!
Lig. Vouchsafe good-morrow from a feeble tongue.
Bru. O, what a time have you chose out, brave Caius,
To wear a kerchief! Would you were not sick! [hand
Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in

I here discard my sickness! Soul of Brave son, derived from honourable loins!
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjured up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible, [to do?
Yea, get the better of them. What 's
Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.
Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?
Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going
To whom it must be done.
Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fired I follow you,
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.
Bru. Follow me, then.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. CÆSAR'S House.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter CÆSAR, in his nightgown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night:
Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out [within?
'Help, ho! they murder Cæsar!' Who's
Enter a Servant.
Serv. My lord? [sacrifice,
Cæs. Go bid the priests do present
And bring me their opinions of success.
Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.
Enter CALPURNIA.
Cal. What mean you, Cæsar? think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house today.
Cæs. Cæsar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me
Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see
The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.
Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies, [within,
Yet now they fright me. There is one
Besides the things that we have heard and seen, [the watch.
Recounts most horrid sights seen by
A lioness hath whelped in the streets;
And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead; [clouds,
Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,

Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol;
The noise of battle hurtled in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.
O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cæs. What can be avoided
Whose end is purposed by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions
Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.

Cal. When beggars die, there are no comets seen;
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear;
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

What say the augurers?

Serv. They would not have you to stir forth to-day.
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:
Cæsar should be a beast without a heart
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Cæsar shall not: Danger knows full well
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he:
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible:
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consumed in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house;
And he shall say you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not well;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter DECIUS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cæsar, all hail! good-morrow, worthy Cæsar:
I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæs. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them that I will not come to-day;
Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser:
I will not come to-day; tell them so, Decius.

Cal. Say he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,
To be afeard to tell greybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.

Cæs. The cause is in my will: I will not come;
That is enough to satisfy the senate.
But, for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.
Calpurnia here, my wife, stays me at home;
She dreamt to-night she saw my statua,
Which, like a fountain with an hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it.
And these does she apply for warnings and portents,
And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate:
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bathed,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood; and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calpurnia's dream is signified.

Cæs. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say:
And know it now: the senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.

If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it [were a mock
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say
'Break up the senate till another time,
When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams.'
If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper
'Lo, Cæsar is afraid'? [love
Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear dear
To your proceeding bids me tell you this,
And reason to my love is liable.

Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calpurnia!
I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my robe, for I will go.

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good-morrow, Cæsar.

Cæs. Welcome, Publius.
What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
Good-morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius,
Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy
As that same ague which hath made you lean.
What is't o'clock?

Bru. Cæsar, 'tis strucken eight.

Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights, [Antony.
Is notwithstanding up. Good-morrow,

Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.

Cæs. Bid them prepare within:
I am to blame to be thus waited for.
Now, Cinna: now, Metellus: what, Trebonius! [you;
I have an hour's talk in store for
Remember that you call on me to-day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will. [Aside] And so near will I be,
That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Cæs. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me;
And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Bru. [Aside.] That every like is not the same, O Cæsar,
The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street near the Capitol.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a Paper.

Art. 'Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou beest not immortal, look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, ARTEMIDORUS.'

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.
If thou read this, O Cæsar, thou mayst live;
If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Another Part of the same Street, before the House of BRUTUS.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house; [gone.
Stay not to answer me, but get thee
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here again, [do there.
Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst
O constancy, be strong upon my side!
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue! [might.
I have a man's mind, but a woman's
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!—
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well, [good note
For he went sickly forth; and take
What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him.

Hark, boy! what noise is that?
Luc. I hear none, madam.
Por. Prithee, listen well:
I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.
Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow: which way hast thou been?
Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.
Por. What is 't o'clock?
Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.
Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol?
Sooth. Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand,
To see him pass on to the Capitol.
Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not?
Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Cæsar
To be so good to Cæsar as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.
Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?
Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.
Good-morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:
The throng that follows Cæsar at the heels,
Of senators, of praetors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death:
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along. [Exit.
Por. I must go in. Ay me, how weak a thing
The heart of woman is! O Brutus,
The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise!
Sure, the boy heard me.—Brutus hath a suit
That Cæsar will not grant.—O, I grow faint.
Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord;
Say I am merry: come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee. [Exeunt severally.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol; the Senate sitting above.

A Crowd of People; among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and Others.

Cæs. [To the Soothsayer.] The Ides of March are come.
Sooth. Ay, Cæsar; but not gone.
Art. Hail, Cæsar! read this schedule.
Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read, [suit.
At your best leisure, this his humble
Art. O Cæsar, read mine first; for mine 's a suit
That touches Cæsar nearer: read it, great Cæsar.
Cæs. What touches us ourself shall be last served. [stantly.
Art. Delay not, Cæsar; read it in-
Cæs. What, is the fellow mad?
Pub. Sirrah, give place.
Cas. What, urge you your petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.

CÆSAR goes up to the Senate-house, the rest following. All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?
Pop. Fare you well. [Advances to CÆSAR.
Bru. What said Popilius Lena?
Cas. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive.
I fear our purpose is discovered.
Bru. Look, how he makes to Cæsar: mark him.
Cas. Casca,
Be sudden, for we fear prevention.
Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known, [back,
Cassius or Cæsar shall never turn
For I will slay myself.
Bru. Cassius, be constant:
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;
For, look, he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.
Cas. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus, [way.
He draws Mark Antony out of the [Exeunt ANTONY and TREBONIUS.
CÆSAR, and the Senators take their seats.
Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go.

And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar.
Bru. He is address'd: press near, and second him.
Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.
Cæs. Are we all ready? What is now amiss
That Cæsar and his senate must redress?
Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsar,
Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
An humble heart:— [Kneeling.
Cæs. I must prevent thee, Cimber.
These couchings and these lowly courtesies
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And turn pre-ordinance and first decree
Into the law of children. Be not fond,
To think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood [quality
That will be thaw'd from the true
With that which melteth fools; I mean, sweet words,
Low-crooked court'sies, and base spaniel-fawning.
Thy brother by decree is banished:
If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.
Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without cause
Will he be satisfied. [than my own,
Met. Is there no voice more worthy
To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear [brother?
For the repealing of my banish'd
Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Cæsar; [may Desiring thee that Publius Cimber
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.
Cæs. What, Brutus! [pardon:
Cas. Pardon, Cæsar; Cæsar,
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber. [were as you;
Cæs. I could be well moved, if I
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me: [star,
But I am constant as the northern
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks; [shine;
They are all fire and every one doth
But there 's but one in all doth hold his place:
So in the world; 'tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
Yet in the number I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshaked of motion: and that I am he,
Let me a little show it, even in this;
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd, [so.
And constant do remain to keep him
Cin. O Cæsar,— [Olympus?
Cæs. Hence! wilt thou lift up
Dec. Great Cæsar,— [kneel?
Cæs. Doth not Brutus bootless
Casca. Speak, hands, for me!
[CASCA first, then the other Conspirators and MARCUS BRUTUS stab CÆSAR.
Cæs. Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Cæsar!
[Dies. The Senators and People retire in confusion.
Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead! [streets.
Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the
Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out [ment!'
'Liberty, freedom, and enfranchise-
Bru. People and senators, be not affrighted;
Fly not; stand still: ambition's debt is paid.
Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.
Dec. And Cassius too.
Bru. Where 's Publius?
Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.
Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's
Should chance— [good cheer;
Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius,
There is no harm intended to your person, [Publius.
Nor to no Roman else: so tell them,
Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people, [some mischief.
Rushing on us, should do your age
Bru. Do so; and let no man abide this deed
But we the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where 's Antony?
Tre. Fled to his house amazed:
Men, wives and children stare, cry out and run

As it were doomsday.
Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures : [the time
That we shall die, we know ; 'tis but
And drawing days out, that men stand upon. [years of life
Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty Cuts off so many years of fearing death.
Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit : [abridged
So are we Cæsar's friends, that have
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop, [blood
And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords : [place ;
Then walk we forth, even to the market-
And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads, [liberty ! '
Let 's all cry ' Peace, freedom and
Cas. Stoop then, and wash. How many ages hence [over
Shall this our lofty scene be acted
In states unborn and accents yet unknown !
Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,
That now on Pompey's basis lies along
No worthier than the dust !
Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave their country liberty.
Dec. What, shall we forth ?
Cas. Ay, every man away :
Brutus shall lead ; and we will grace his heels [of Rome.
With the most boldest and best hearts

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft ! who comes here ? A friend of Antony's.
Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel ; [down ;
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say : [est ;
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and hon-
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving :
Say I love Brutus and I honour him ;
Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him and loved him.
If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolved [death,
How Cæsar hath deserved to lie in
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living ; but will follow [tus
The fortunes and affairs of noble Bru-
Thorough the hazards of this untrod state, [Antony.
With all true faith. So says my master
Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman ;
I never thought him worse. [place,
Tell him, so please him come unto this
He shall be satisfied ; and, by my honour,
Depart untouch'd.
Serv. I 'll fetch him presently. [Exit.
Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend. [I a mind
Cas. I wish we may : but yet have
That fears him much ; and my misgiving still
Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony. Welcome, Mark Antony.
Ant. O mighty Cæsar ! dost thou lie so low ? [umphs, spoils,
Are all thy conquests, glories, tri-
Shrunk to this little measure ? Fare thee well. [tend,
I know not, gentlemen, what you in-
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank :
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death hour ; nor no instrument [swords, made rich
Of half that worth as those your
With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke, [years,
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand
I shall not find myself so apt to die :
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age. [of us.
Bru. O Antony, beg not your death
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel, [act,
As, by our hands and this our present
You see we do ; yet see you but our hands [have done :
And this the bleeding business they

Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful; [Rome—
And pity to the general wrong of
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity—
Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part, [Mark Antony:
To you our swords have leaden points,
Our arms, in strength of amity, and our hearts
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence. [any man's
Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as
In the disposing of new dignities.
Bru. Only be patient till we have appeased [fear,
The multitude, beside themselves with
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.
Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand: [with you;
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand; [yours, Metellus;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now
Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours; [good Trebonius.
Though last, not least in love, yours,
Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground, [conceit me,
That one of two bad ways you must
Either a coward or a flatterer.
That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, 'tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse? [wounds,
Had I as many eyes as thou hast
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood, [close
It would become me better than to
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart;
Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.
O world, thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee. [princes,
How like a deer, stricken by many
Dost thou here lie!
Cas. Mark Antony,—
Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Cæsar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.
Cas. I blame you not for praising Cæsar so; [with us?
But what compact mean you to have
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends, [you?
Or shall we on, and not depend on
Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was indeed
Sway'd from the point by looking down on Cæsar. [all;
Friends am I with you all, and love you
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons [ous.
Why and wherein Cæsar was danger-
Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle:
Our reasons are so full of good regard
That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
You should be satisfied.
Ant. That 's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor that I may
Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.
Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.
Cas. Brutus, a word with you.
[Aside to BRU.] You know not what you do: do not consent
That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be moved
By that which he will utter?
Bru. [Aside to CAS.] By your pardon:
I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Cæsar's death: [test
What Antony shall speak, I will pro-
He speaks by leave and by permission;
And that we are contented Cæsar shall
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies. [wrong.
It shall advantage more than do us
Cas. [Aside to BRU.] I know not what may fall; I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's body. [blame us,
You shall not in your funeral speech
But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar;
And say you do 't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: and you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.
Ant. Be it so;
I do desire no more. [follow us.
Bru. Prepare the body then, and [Exeunt all but ANTONY.
Ant. O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth, [butchers!
That I am meek and gentle with these
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hands that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,—
Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips, [tongue,—
To beg the voice and utterance of my
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile when they behold [of war;
Their infants quarter'd with the hands
All pity choked with custom of fell deeds:
And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Atê by his side come hot from hell, [arch's voice
Shall in these confines with a mon-
Cry 'Havoc,' and let slip the dogs of war; [the earth
That this foul deed shall smell above
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?
Serv. I do, Mark Antony.
Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome. [is coming;
Serv. He did receive his letters, and
And bid me say to you by word of mouth—
O Cæsar! [Seeing the body.
Ant. Thy heart is big; get thee apart and weep. [eyes,
Passion, I see, is catching; for mine
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine, [ing?
Began to water. Is thy master com-
Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.
Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanced:
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;
Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet stay awhile; [this corse
Thou shalt not back till I have borne
Into the market-place: there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which, thou shalt discourse [things.
To young Octavius of the state of Lend me your hand.
[Exeunt, with CÆSAR'S body.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied.
Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.
Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers. [stay here;
Those that will hear me speak, let 'em
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cæsar's death.
First Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.
Sec. Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.
[Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens.
BRUTUS goes into the pulpit.
Third Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: silence!
Bru. Be patient till the last.
Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer:—Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter ANTONY and Others, with CÆSAR'S body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart,—that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

All. Live, Brutus! live, live!

First Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

Sec. Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

Third Cit. Let him be Cæsar.

Fourth Cit. Cæsar's better parts
Shall now be crown'd in Brutus.

First Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—

Sec. Cit. Peace! silence! Brutus speaks.

First Cit. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone, [Antony:
And, for my sake, stay here with
Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech [Mark Antony, Tending to Cæsar's glories; which
By our permission, is allow'd to make.
I do entreat you, not a man depart,
Save I alone, till Antony have spoke.
[Exit.

First Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

Third Cit. Let him go up into the public chair; [up.
We'll hear him.—Noble Antony, go

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholden to you.
[Goes into the pulpit.

Fourth Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

Third Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake,
He finds himself beholden to us all.

Fourth Cit. T'were best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

First Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.

Third Cit. Nay, that's certain:
We are blest that Rome is rid of him.

Sec. Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,— [him.

Citizens. Peace, ho! let us hear

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears; [him.
I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise
The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones; [Brutus
So let it be with Cæsar. This noble
Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.
Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,—
For Brutus is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men,—
Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
But Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome, [fill:
Whose ransoms did the general coffers
Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?
When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept: [stuff:
Ambition should be made of sterner

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
You all did see that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition?
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And, sure, he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once, not without cause:
What cause withholds you then to mourn for him?
O judgment! thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason. Bear with me;
My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar,
And I must pause till it come back to me.

First Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

Sec. Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Cæsar has had great wrong.

Third Cit. Has he, masters?
I fear there will a worse come in his place.

Fourth Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;
Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

First Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

Sec. Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

Third Cit. There 's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

Fourth Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday the word of Cæsar might
Have stood against the world: now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O masters! if I were disposed to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
Who, you all know, are honourable men.
I will not do them wrong; I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men.
But here 's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar;
I found it in his closet; 'tis his will:
Let but the commons hear this testament—
Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—
And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds,
And dip their napkins in his sacred blood;
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy
Unto their issue.

Fourth Cit. We'll hear the will: read it, Mark Antony.

All. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it;
It is not meet you know how Cæsar loved you.
You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;
And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad:
'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;
For if you should, O, what would come of it!

Fourth Cit. Read the will; we'll hear it, Antony; you shall read us the will, Cæsar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile?
I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it.
I fear I wrong the honourable men
Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar; I do fear it.

Fourth Cit. They were traitors: honourable men!

All. The will! the testament!

Sec. Cit. They were villains, murderers: the will! read the will!

Ant. You will compel me then to read the will?
Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,
And let me show you him that made the will.
Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

Several Citizens. Come down.

Sec. Cit. Descend.

Third Cit. You shall have leave.

[ANTONY comes down.

Fourth Cit. A ring; stand round.

First Cit. Stand from the hearse, stand from the body.

Sec. Cit. Room for Antony, most noble Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.
Several Citizens. Stand back! room! bear back!
Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now. [member
You all do know this mantle: I re-
The first time ever Cæsar put it on;
'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii:
Look, in this place ran Cassius' dagger through: [made:
See what a rent the envious Casca
Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd; [away,
And as he pluck'd his cursed steel
Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,
As rushing out of doors, to be resolved
If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel: [loved him!
Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar
This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms, [mighty heart;
Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his
And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statua,
Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell. [men!
O, what a fall was there, my country-
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us. [feel
O, now you weep, and I perceive you
The dint of pity: these are gracious drops. [but behold
Kind souls, what! weep you when you
Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here, [with traitors.
Here is himself, marr'd, as you see,
First Cit. O piteous spectacle!
Sec. Cit. O noble Cæsar!
Third Cit. O woeful day!
Fourth Cit. O traitors, villains!
First Cit. O most bloody sight!
Sec. Cit. We will be revenged.
Citizens. Revenge!—About!—Seek!—Burn!—Fire!—
Kill!—Slay!—Let not a traitor live!
Ant. Stay, countrymen.
First Cit. Peace there! hear the noble Antony.
Sec. Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.
Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They that have done this deed are honourable: [know not,
What private griefs they have, alas, I
That made them do it: they are wise and honourable, [swer you.
And will, no doubt, with reasons an-
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:
I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man, [know full well
That love my friend; and that they
That gave me public leave to speak of him: [worth,
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech, [right on;
To stir men's blood: I only speak
I tell you that which you yourselves do know;
Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor dumb mouths,
And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus, [tony
And Brutus Antony, there were an An-
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue [move
In every wound of Cæsar, that should
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.
All. We'll mutiny. [Brutus.
First Cit. We'll burn the house of
Sec. Cit. Away, then! come, seek the conspirators.
Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.
All. Peace, ho! Hear Antony. Most noble Antony!
Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what: [loves?
Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserved your
Alas, you know not; I must tell you then: [of.
You have forgot the will I told you
All. Most true: the will! Let's stay and hear the will.
Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal.
To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.
Sec. Cit. Most noble Cæsar! We'll revenge his death.

Third Cit. O royal Cæsar!
Ant. Hear me with patience.
All. Peace, ho! [his walks,
Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all
His private arbours and new-planted orchards, [them you,
On this side Tiber; he hath left
And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,
To walk abroad and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Cæsar! when comes such another? [away!
First Cit. Never, never. Come, away,
We'll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body.
Sec. Cit. Go, fetch fire.
Third Cit. Pluck down benches.
Fourth Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.
[Exeunt Citizens, with the body.
Ant. Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot,
Take thou what course thou wilt!

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow!
Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.
Ant. Where is he? [sar's house.
Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæ-
Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him: [merry,
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is
And in this mood will give us anything.
Serv. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius [of Rome.
Are rid like madmen through the gates
Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people,
How I had moved them. Bring me to Octavius. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CINNA the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar, [tasy:
And things unlucky charge my fan-
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

First Cit. What is your name?
Sec. Cit. Whither are you going?
Third Cit. Where do you dwell?
Fourth Cit. Are you a married man or a bachelor? [rectly.
Sec. Cit. Answer every man di-
First Cit. Ay, and briefly.
Fourth Cit. Ay, and wisely. [best.
Third Cit. Ay, and truly, you were
Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely, and truly: wisely, I say, I am a bachelor.
Sec. Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry; you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly. [sar's funeral.
Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæ-
First Cit. As a friend or an enemy?
Cin. As a friend.
Sec. Cit. That matter is answered directly. [briefly.
Fourth Cit. For your dwelling,—
Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.
Third Cit. Your name, sir, truly.
Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.
First Cit. Tear him to pieces; he's a conspirator.
Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.
Fourth Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.
Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.
Sec. Cit. It is no matter, his name 's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.
Third Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! firebrands: to Brutus', to Cassius'; burn all: some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's: some to Ligarius': away, go! [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Room in ANTONY'S House.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.
Oct. Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus?
Lep. I do consent,—
Oct. Prick him down, Antony.
Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live, [tony.
Who is your sister's son, Mark An-

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.
But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house;
Fetch the will hither, and we will determine
How to cut off some charge in legacies.
Lep. What, shall I find you here?
Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol.
[Exit LEPIDUS.
Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit,
The threefold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?
Oct. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be prick'd to die
In our black sentence and proscription.
Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you:
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads,
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven, as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.
Oct. You may do your will;
But he 's a tried and valiant soldier.
Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that
I do appoint him store of provender.
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on,
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth; A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On objects, orts, and imitations;
Which, out of use and staled by other men,
Begin his fashion: do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius are levying powers; we must straight make head:
Therefore let our alliance be combined,
Our best friends made, our means stretch'd to the utmost;
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclosed,
And open perils surest answered.
Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake,
And bay'd about with many enemies;
And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischiefs. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Camp near Sardis. Before BRUTUS' Tent.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers; TITINIUS and PINDARUS meet them.

Bru. Stand, ho!
Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.
Bru. What now, Lucilius! is Cassius near?
Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.
Bru. He greets me well. Your master, Pindarus,
In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done undone: but if he be at hand
I shall be satisfied.
Pin. I do not doubt
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.
Bru. He is not doubted.—A word, Lucilius,
How he received you: let me be resolved.
Lucil. With courtesy and with respect enough;
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath used of old.
Bru. Thou hast described
A hot friend cooling: ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;
But when they should endure the bloody spur,

They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?
Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius.
[Low march within.
Bru. Hark! he is arrived:
March gently on to meet him.

Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho! [along.
Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word
First Sol. Stand!
Sec. Sol. Stand!
Third Sol. Stand!
Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.
Bru. Judge me, you gods! wrong I mine enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?
Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;
And when you do them—
Bru. Cassius, be content;
Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well. [here,
Before the eyes of both our armies
Which should perceive nothing but love from us, [away;
Let us not wrangle: bid them move
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.
Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.
Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no man [conference.
Come to our tent till we have done our
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of BRUTUS.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off. [in such a case.
Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write
Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet [his comment.
That every nice offence should bear
Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself [ing palm;
Are much condemn'd to have an itch-
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To undeservers.
Cas. I an itching palm!
You know that you are Brutus that speak this, [your last.
Or, by the gods, this speech were else
Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption, [his head.
And chastisement doth therefore hide
Cas. Chastisement!
Bru. Remember March, the Ides of March remember! [sake?
Did not great Julius bleed for justice'
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, [of us,
And not for justice? What, shall one
That struck the foremost man of all this world [now
But for supporting robbers, shall we
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes, [honours
And sell the mighty space of our large
For so much trash as may be grasped thus? [moon,
I had rather be a dog, and bay the
Than such a Roman.
Cas. Brutus, bay not me;
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.
Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius.
Cas. I am.
Bru. I say you are not.
Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself; [no further.
Have mind upon your health, tempt me
Bru. Away, slight man!
Cas. Is 't possible?
Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler? [stares?
Shall I be frighted when a madman
Cas. O ye gods, ye gods! must I endure all this?
Bru. All this! ay, more: fret till your proud heart break;
Go show your slaves how choleric you are, [Must I budge?
And make your bondmen tremble.

Must I observe you ? must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour ? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you ; for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this ?

Bru. You say you are a better soldier :
Let it appear so ; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well : for mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way ; you wrong me, Brutus ;
I said, an elder soldier, not a better :
Did I say 'better' ?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cæsar lived, he durst not thus have moved me.

Bru. Peace, peace ! you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not !

Bru. No.

Cas. What, durst not tempt him !

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love ;
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats ;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me :
For I can raise no money by vile means :
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me : was that done like Cassius ?
Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so ?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts ;
Dash him to pieces !

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not : he was but a fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath rived my heart :
A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aweary of the world ;
Hated by one he loves ; braved by his brother ; checked like a bondman ; all his faults observed,
Set in a note-book, learn'd and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes ! There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast ; within, a heart
Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold :
If that thou beest a Roman, take it forth ;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart :
Strike, as thou didst at Cæsar ; for I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lovedst him better
Than ever thou lovedst Cassius.

Bru. Sheathe your dagger :
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope ;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb
That carries anger as the flint bears fire ;
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius lived
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him ?

Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too.

Cas. Do you confess so much ? Give me your hand.

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus !

Bru. What's the matter ?

Cas. Have you not love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour which my mother gave me
Makes me forgetful? [forth,
Bru. Yes, Cassius, and from hence-
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so. [Noise within.
Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals; [not meet
There is some grudge between 'em; 'tis
They be alone.
Lucil. [Within.] You shall not come to them. [shall stay me.
Poet. [Within.] Nothing but death

Enter Poet, followed by Lucilius, Titinius, and Lucius.

Cas. How now! what's the matter?
Poet. For shame, you generals! what do you mean?
Love, and be friends, as two such men should be; [than ye.
For I have seen more years, I am sure,
Cas. Ha, ha! how vilely doth this cynic rhyme!
Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, hence! [fashion.
Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his
Bru. I'll know his humour when he knows his time:
What should the wars do with these jigging fools?
Companion, hence!
Cas. Away, away, be gone! [Exit Poet.
Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders [night.
Prepare to lodge their companies to-
Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you
Immediately to us.
[Exeunt Lucilius and Titinius.
Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine! [Exit Lucius.
Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry. [griefs.
Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many
Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.
Bru. No man bears sorrow better: Portia is dead.
Cas. Ha! Portia!
Bru. She is dead.
Cas. How 'scaped I killing when I cross'd you so?—
O insupportable and touching loss!
Upon what sickness?
Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong:—for with her death
That tidings came;—with this she fell distract, [fire.
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd
Cas. And died so?
Bru. Even so.
Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Re-enter Lucius, with Wine and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine.
In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.
Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge. [cup;
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.
Bru. Come in, Titinius! [Exit Lucius.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Welcome, good Messala.
Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.
Cas. Portia, art thou gone?
Bru No more, I pray you.
Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power, [Philippi.
Bending their expedition toward
Mes. Myself have letters of the selfsame tenour.
Bru. With what addition?
Mes. That by proscription and bills of outlawry
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.
Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree; [died
Mine speak of seventy senators that
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.
Cas. Cicero one!
Mes. Ay, Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription.
Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?

Bru. No, Messala.
Mes. Nor nothing in your letters
Bru. Nothing, Messala.
Mes. That, methinks, is strange.
Bru. Why ask you? hear you aught of her in yours?
Mes. No, my lord.
Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.
Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.
Bru. Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die, Messala:
With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.
Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.
Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,
But yet my nature could not bear it so.
Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently?
Cas. I do not think it good.
Bru. Your reason?
Cas. This it is:
'Tis better that the enemy seek us:
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers, lying still,
Doing himself offence; whilst we,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.
Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.
The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forced affection;
For they have grudged us contribution:
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-added and encouraged; from which advantage shall we cut him off,
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.
Cas. Hear me, good brother.
Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside,
That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day;
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.
Cas. Then, with your will, go on;
We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.
Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
And nature must obey necessity;
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?
Cas. No more. Good night:
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.
Bru. Lucius! [Re-enter LUCIUS.] My gown. [Exit LUCIUS.] Farewell, good Messala:
Good night, Titinius:—Noble, noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.
Cas. O my dear brother!
That was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division 'tween our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.
Bru. Every thing is well.
Cas. Good night, my lord.
Bru. Good night, good brother.
Tit. } Good night, Lord Brutus.
Mes. }
Bru. Farewell, every one.
[Exeunt all but BRUTUS.

Re-enter LUCIUS, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?
Luc. Here in the tent.
Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily?
Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'er-watch'd. [men;
Call Claudius and some other of my
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.
Luc. Varro and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord?
Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep;
It may be I shall raise you by and by
On business to my brother Cassius.
Var. So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure.
Bru. I will not have it so: lie down, good sirs;
It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.
Look, Lucius, here 's the book I sought for so;

I put it in the pocket of my gown.
[VARRO and CLAUDIUS lie down.
Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.
Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful. [awhile,
Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes
And touch thy instrument a strain or two?
Luc. Ay, my lord, an 't please you.
Bru. It does, my boy:
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.
Luc. It is my duty, sir.
Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might; [of rest.
I know young bloods look for a time
Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.
Bru. It was well done; and thou shalt sleep again; [live,
I will not hold thee long: if I do
I will be good to thee.
[Music, and a Song.
This is a sleepy tune. O murderous slumber! [my boy,
Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon
That plays thee music? Gentle knave, good night;
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee: [instrument;
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night. [turn'd down
Let me see, let me see; is not the leaf
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think. [He sits down.

Enter the Ghost of CÆSAR.

How ill this taper burns! Ha! who comes here?
I think it is the weakness of mine eyes
That shapes this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me. Art thou any thing? [some devil,
Art thou some god, some angel, or
That makest my blood cold and my hair to stare?
Speak to me what thou art.
Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.
Bru. Why comest thou?
Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi. [again?
Bru. Well; then I shall see thee
Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.
Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi, then. [Ghost vanishes.
Now I have taken heart thou vanishest:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee. [awake!
Boy! Lucius! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, Claudius!
Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.
Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument.
Lucius, awake!
Luc. My lord?
Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?
Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.
Bru. Yes, that thou didst: didst thou see any thing?
Luc. Nothing, my lord. [Claudius!
Bru. Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah
[To VARRO] Fellow thou, awake!
Var. My lord?
Clau. My lord? [in your sleep?
Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs,
Var. } Did we, my lord?
Clau. }
Bru. Ay; saw you any thing?
Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.
Clau. Nor I, my lord.
Bru. Go and commend me to my brother Cassius; [before,
Bid him set on his powers betimes
And we will follow.
Var. } It shall be done, my lord.
Cla. } [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered: [down,
You said the enemy would not come
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so: their battles are at hand; [here,
They mean to warn us at Philippi
Answering before we do demand of them. [I know
Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and
Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face [have courage;
To fasten in our thoughts that they
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:

The enemy comes on in gallant show:
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.
Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left. [exigent?
Ant. Why do you cross me in this
Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. [March.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and Others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley. [out and talk.
Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must
Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle? [their charge.
Ant. No, Cæsar, we will answer on
Make forth; the generals would have some words.
Oct. Stir not until the signal.
Bru. Words before blows: is it so, countrymen? [as you do.
Oct. Not that we love words better,
Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.
Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:
Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,
Crying 'Long live! hail, Cæsar!'
Cas. Antony,
The posture of your blows are yet unknown; [bees,
But for your words, they rob the Hybla
And leave them honeyless.
Ant. Not stingless too.
Bru. O, yes, and soundless too;
For you have stolen their buzzing, Antony, [sting.
And very wisely threat before you
Ant. Villains, you did not so, when your vile daggers [Cæsar:
Hack'd one another in the sides of
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet; [behind
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur,
Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers! [yourself:
Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank
This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have ruled.
Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat, [drops.
The proof of it will turn to redder
Look;
I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again? [wounds
Never, till Cæsar's three-and-thirty
Be well avenged, or till another Cæsar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors. [traitors' hands,
Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by Unless thou bring'st them with thee.
Oct. So I hope;
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.
Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain, [honourable.
Young man, thou couldst not die more
Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour,
Join'd with a masquer and a reveller!
Ant. Old Cassius still!
Oct. Come, Antony; away!
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth: [field;
If you dare fight to-day, come to the
If not, when you have stomachs.
[Exeunt OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.
Cas. Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
Bru. Ho!
Lucilius, hark, a word with you.
Lucil. My lord?
[BRUTUS and LUCILIUS converse apart.
Cas. Messala!
Mes. What says my general?
Cas. Messala,
This is my birthday; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala: [will,
Be thou my witness that against my
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
Upon one battle all our liberties.
You know that I held Epicurus strong
And his opinion: now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign [perch'd,
Two mighty eagles fell; and there they
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
Who to Philippi here consorted us:

This morning are they fled away and gone;
And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites,
Fly o'er our heads and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly;
For I am fresh of spirit and resolved
To meet all perils very constantly.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly; that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affair of men rest still uncertain,
Let 's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you then determined to do?

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself: I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life: arming myself with patience
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?

Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work the Ides of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take.
For ever and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.

Bru. Why then, lead on. O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business ere it come!
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known. Come, ho! away! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills
Unto the legions on the other side.
[Loud alarum.
Let them set on at once; for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early;
Who, having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclosed.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord!
Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius;
Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lovest me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,
And here again; that I may rest assured
Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought. [Exit.

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou notest about the field.

[PINDARUS ascends the hill.

This day I breathed first: time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end;
My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?

Pin. [Above.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. [Above.] Titinius is enclosed round about
With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;
Yet he spurs on.—Now they are almost on him.
Now, Titinius!—Now some 'light.—O, he 's ta'en. [Shout.] And, hark! they shout for joy.

Cas. Come down; behold no more.
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

PINDARUS descends.

Come hither, sirrah!
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath;
Now be a freeman; and with this good sword,
That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer: here, take thou the hilts;
And, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword. [PINDARUS stabs him.] Cæsar, thou art revenged,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee.

[Dies.

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been,
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.

[Exit.

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

Mes. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.

Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!

Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more. O setting sun,
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set!
The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!
Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.
O hateful error, melancholy's child,
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O error, soon conceived,
Thou never comest unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee!

Tit. What, Pindarus! where art thou, Pindarus?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears: I may say 'thrusting' it;
For piercing steel and darts envenomed
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while.

[Exit MESSALA.

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?
Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing!
But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.
By your leave, gods:—this is a Roman's part:

Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. [Kills himself.

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, YOUNG CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? [mourning it.

Mes. Lo, yonder; and Titinius

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet! [swords

Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our In our own proper entrails.

[Low alarums.

Cato. Brave Titinius!

Look, whether he have not crown'd dead Cassius!

Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?—

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!

It is impossible that ever Rome

Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe more tears [me pay.

To this dead man than you shall see

I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time. [his body:

Come therefore, and to Thasos send

His funerals shall not be in our camp,

Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;

And come, young Cato; let us to the field.

Labeo and Flavius, set our battles on.

'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night

We shall try fortune in a second fight.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Another Part of the Field.

[Alarum. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then BRUTUS, YOUNG CATO, LUCILIUS, and Others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me? [field.

I will proclaim my name about the

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I; [for Brutus!

Brutus, my country's friend; know me

[Exit, charging the Enemy. CATO is overpowered, and falls.

Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou down? [nius,

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titi-

And mayst be honour'd, being Cato's son.

First Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Lucil. Only I yield to die:

[Offering money] There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight;

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death. [noble prisoner!

First Sold. We must not. A

Sec. Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

First Sold. I'll tell the news. Here comes the general.

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he? [enough:

Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe

I dare assure thee that no enemy

Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:

The gods defend him from so great a shame! [dead,

When you do find him, or alive, or

He will be found like Brutus, like himself. [I assure you,

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but,

A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe; [have

Give him all kindness: I had rather

Such men my friends than enemies. Go on, [dead;

And see whether Brutus be alive or

And bring us word unto Octavius' tent

How every thing is chanced. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cli. Statilius show'd the torchlight, but, my lord, [slain.

He came not back: he is or ta'en or

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus. [Whispers.

Cli. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Bru. Peace then! no words.

Cli. I'll rather kill myself.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. [Whispers.

Dar. Shall I do such a deed?

Cli. O Dardanius!
Dar. O Clitus! [make to thee?
Cli. What ill request did Brutus
Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates. [grief,
Cli. Now is that noble vessel full of
That it runs over even at his eyes.
Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a word.
Vol. What says my lord?
Bru. Why, this, Volumnius:
The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two several times by night; at Sardis once, [fields:
And, this last night, here in Philippi
I know my hour is come.
Vol. Not so, my lord.
Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.
Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes;
Our enemies have beat us to the pit:
[Low alarums.
It is more worthy to leap in ourselves
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,
Thou know'st that we two went to school together: [thee,
Even for that our love of old, I pray
Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it.
Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord. [Alarum still.
Cli. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying here.
Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and you, Volumnius.
Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; [men,
Farewell to thee too, Strato. Country-
My heart doth joy that yet in all my life
I found no man but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this losing day
More than Octavius and Mark Antony
By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue
Hath almost ended his life's history:
Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest, [hour.
That have but labour'd to attain this [Alarum. Cry within, 'Fly, fly, fly!'
Cli. Fly, my lord, fly.
Bru. Hence! I will follow.
[Exeunt CLITUS, DARDANIUS, and VOLUMNIUS.
I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it: [thy face,
Hold then my sword, and turn away
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato? [you well, my lord.
Stra. Give me your hand first. Fare
Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now be still: [will.
I kill'd not thee with half so good a
[He runs on his sword, and dies.
Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and their Army.
Oct. What man is that?
Mes. My master's man. Strato, where is thy master?
Stra. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala: [him;
The conquerors can but make a fire of
For Brutus only overcame himself,
And no man else hath honour by his death.
Lucil. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus,
That thou hast proved Lucilius' saying true. [entertain them.
Oct. All that served Brutus, I will
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me? [to you.
Stra. Ay, if Messala will prefer me
Oct. Do so, good Messala.
Mes. How died my master, Strato?
Stra. I held the sword, and he did run on it. [low thee,
Mes. Octavius, then take him to fol-
That did the latest service to my master. [of them all:
Ant. This was the noblest Roman
All the conspirators save only he
Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;
He only, in a general honest thought
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up [a man!'
And say to all the world 'This was
Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,
With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.
So call the field to rest; and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day.

SCENE I.—A Desert Place.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

First Witch. When shall we three meet again
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
Sec. Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle 's lost and won.
Third Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.
First Witch. Where the place?
Sec. Witch. Upon the heath.
Third Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.
First Witch. I come, Graymalkin!
Sec. Witch. Paddock calls.
Third Witch. Anon.
All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
Hover through the fog and filthy air.
[Witches vanish.

SCENE II.—A Camp near Forres.

Alarum within. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.
Mal. This is the sergeant
Who like a good and hardy soldier fought [friend!
'Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave
Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
As thou didst leave it.
Ser. Doubtful it stood;
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together [Macdonwald—
And choke their art. The merciless
Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
The multiplying villanies of nature
Do swarm upon him—from the western isles
Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied;
And Fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling, [too weak:
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all 's
For brave Macbeth,—well he deserves that name,— [ish'd steel,
Disdaining Fortune, with his brand-
Which smoked with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion [slave;
Carved out his passage till he faced the
And ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,

And fix'd his head upon our battlements.
Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Ser. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break,
So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to come
Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland, mark:
No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,
But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men
Began a fresh assault.
Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?
Ser. Yes;
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharged with double cracks, so they Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell—
But I am faint; my gashes cry for help.
Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honour both.—Go get him surgeons.
[Exit Sergeant, attended.
Who comes here?

Enter Ross.

Mal. The worthy Thane of Ross.
Len. What a haste looks through his eyes! So should he look
That seems to speak things strange.
Ross. God save the king!
Dun. Whence camest thou, worthy thane?
Ross. From Fife, great king;
Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict;
Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us.
Dun. Great happiness!
Ross. That now
Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colme's inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.
Dun. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive
Our bosom interest: go pronounce his present death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.
Ross. I'll see it done.
Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?
Sec. Witch. Killing swine.
Third Witch. Sister, where thou?
First Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap,
And mounch'd, and mounch'd, and mounch'd. 'Give me,' quoth I:
'Aroint thee, witch!' the rump-fed ronyon cries.
Her husband 's to Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger:
But in a sieve I'll thither sail,
And, like a rat without a tail,
I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.
Sec. Witch. I'll give thee a wind.
First Witch. Thou'rt kind.
Third Witch. And I another.
First Witch. I myself have all the other;
And the very ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know
I' the shipman's card.
I will drain him dry as hay:
Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his pent-house lid;
He shall live a man forbid:
Weary se'nnights nine times nine
Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:
Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tost.
Look what I have.
Sec. Witch. Show me, show me.
First Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,

Wreck'd as homeward he did come.
[Drum within.
Third Witch. A drum, a drum!
Macbeth doth come.
All. The weird sisters, hand in hand,
Posters of the sea and land,
Thus do go about, about:
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine.
Peace! the charm 's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
Ban. How far is't call'd to Forres? What are these
So wither'd, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like the inhabitants o' the earth,
And yet are on't? Live you? or are you aught
That man may question? You seem to understand me,
By each at once her choppy finger laying
Upon her skinny lips: you should be women,
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.
Macb. Speak, if you can: what are you?
First Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Glamis!
Sec. Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor!
Third Witch. All hail, Macbeth! thou shalt be king hereafter!
Ban. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear
Things that do sound so fair?—I' the name of truth,
Are ye fantastical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace and great prediction
Of noble having and of royal hope,
That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak not.
If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say which grain will grow and which will not,
Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear
Your favours nor your hate.
First Witch. Hail!
Sec. Witch. Hail!
Third Witch. Hail!
First Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.
Sec. Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.
Third Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:
So all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!
First Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!
Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more:
By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis;
But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives,
A prosperous gentleman; and to be king
Stands not within the prospect of belief,
No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence
You owe this strange intelligence? or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge you.
[Witches vanish.
Ban. The earth hath bubbles as the water has,
And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd?
Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal melted
As breath into the wind. Would they had stay'd!
Ban. Were such things here as we do speak about?
Or have we eaten of the insane root
That takes the reason prisoner?
Macb. Your children shall be kings.
Ban. You shall be king.
Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too; went it not so?
Ban. To the selfsame tune and words. Who 's here?

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.

Ross. The king hath happily received, Macbeth,
The news of thy success; and when he reads
Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend
Which should be thine or his: silenced with that,
In viewing o'er the rest o' the selfsame day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afeard of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as hail
Came post with post, and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent
To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee. [honour,
Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater
He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor: [thane!
In which addition, hail, most worthy
For it is thine.
Ban. What, can the devil speak true?
Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me
In borrow'd robes?
Ang. Who was the thane lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life [he was combined
Which he deserves to lose. Whether
With those of Norway, or did line the rebel [with both
With hidden help and vantage, or that
He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not; [proved,
But treasons capital, confess'd and
Have overthrown him. [of Cawdor:
Macb. [Aside.] Glamis, and Thane
The greatest is behind. [To Ross and ANGUS] Thanks for your pains.
[To BAN.] Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me
Promised no less to them?
Ban. That, trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths; [us
Win us with honest trifles, to betray
In deepest consequence.
Cousins, a word, I pray you.
Macb. [Aside.] Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme. [Aloud] I thank you, gentlemen.
[Aside] This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good: if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am Thane of Cawdor: [tion
If good, why do I yield to that suggesWhose horrid image doth unfix my hair [my ribs,
And make my seated heart knock at
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings:
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical, [function
Shakes so my single state of man that
Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is
But what is not.
Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.
Macb. [Aside.] If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,
Without my stir.
Ban. New honours come upon him,
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould
But with the aid of use.
Macb. [Aside.] Come what come may, [roughest day.
Time and the hour runs through the
Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.
Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was wrought
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains
Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them. Let us toward the king. [at more time,
Think upon what hath chanced; and,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.
Ban. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then, enough. Come, friends. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Forres. The Palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return'd?
Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back. But I have spoke [report
With one that saw him die; who did
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons, [set forth
Implored your highness' pardon and
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died [death
As one that had been studied in his
To throw away the dearest thing he owed

As 'twere a careless trifle.
Dun. There 's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face :
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS, and ANGUS.

O worthiest cousin !
The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me : thou art so far before [slow
That swiftest wing of recompense is
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less deserved, [payment
That the proportion both of thanks and
Might have been mine ! only I have left to say, [can pay.
More is thy due than more than all
Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe, [ness' part
In doing it, pays itself. Your high-
Is to receive our duties ; and our duties [and servants ;
Are to your throne and state, children
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing
Safe toward your love and honour.
Dun. Welcome hither :
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour [Banquo,
To make thee full of growing.—Noble
That hast no less deserved, nor must be known [thee
No less to have done so, let me infold
And hold thee to my heart.
Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.
Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves [thanes,
In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen,
And you whose places are the nearest, know
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter [our must
The Prince of Cumberland ; which hon-
Not unaccompanied invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine [hence to Inverness,
On all deservers. [To MACB.] From
And bind us further to you.
Macb. The rest is labour, which is not used for you :
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful [proach ;
The hearing of my wife with your ap-
So humbly take my leave.
Dun. My worthy Cawdor !
Macb. [Aside.] The Prince of Cumberland ! that is a step
On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap, [your fires ;
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide
Let not light see my black and deep desires : [be
The eye wink at the hand ; yet let that
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see. [Exit.
Dun. True, worthy Banquo ; he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations I am fed ;
It is a banquet to me. Let's after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome :
It is a peerless kinsman.
[Flourish. Exeunt

SCENE V.—Inverness. A Room in MACBETH'S Castle.

Enter LADY MACBETH, reading a letter.

Lady M. 'They met me in the day of success ; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who allhailed me "Thane of Cawdor ;" by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with "Hail, king that shalt be !" This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness ; that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.'

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor ; and shalt be [fear thy nature ;
What thou art promised : yet do I
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness [wouldst be great ;
To catch the nearest way : thou
Art not without ambition, but without
The illness should attend it : what thou wouldst highly,
That wouldst thou holily ; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win : thou'dst have, great Glamis,

That which cries 'Thus thou must do, if thou have it; [to do
And that which rather thou dost fear than wishest should be undone.' Hie thee hither, [ear,
That I may pour my spirits in thine And chastise with the valour of my tongue [round,
All that impedes thee from the golden Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter a Messenger.

What is your tidings?

Mess. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it: Is not thy master with him? who, were 't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mess. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming: [him;
One of my fellows had the speed of Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending; He brings great news. [Exit Messenger.
The raven himself is hoarse That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan [you spirits
Under my battlements. Come, come, That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here; [top-full
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood, [remorse,
Stop up the access and passage to That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between [breasts,
The effect and it! Come to my woman's And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers,
Wherever in your sightless substances You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick night, [hell,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of That my keen knife see not the wound it makes; [of the dark,
Nor heaven peep through the blanket To cry 'Hold, hold!'

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter! [yond
Thy letters have transported me beThis ignorant present, and I feel now The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?

Macb. To-morrow,—as he purposes.

Lady M. O, never
Shall sun that morrow see!
Your face, my thane, is as a book where men [the time,
May read strange matters. To beguile Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye, [innocent flower,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the But be the serpent under 't. He that 's coming [put
Must be provided for: and you shall This night's great business into my dispatch; [to come
Which shall to all our nights and days Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look up clear;
To alter favour ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Before MACBETH'S Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LENNOX, MACDUFF, ROSS, ANGUS, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve, [ven's breath
By his loved mansionry, that the heaSmells wooingly here: no jutty, frieze, Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird [creant cradle:
Hath made his pendent bed and proWhere they most breed and haunt, I have observed
The air is delicate.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess!
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,

Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you [your pains,
How you shall bid God 'ild us for And thank us for your trouble.
Lady M. All our service
In every point twice done, and then done double, [contend
Were poor and single business, to Against those honours deep and broad wherewith [those of old,
Your majesty loads our house: for And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits. [dor?
Dun. Where 's the Thane of Caw-
We coursed him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor: but he rides well;
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp him [hostess,
To his home before us. Fair and noble We are your guest to-night.
Lady M. Your servants ever
Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.
Dun. Give me your hand;
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly, [him.
And shall continue our graces towards By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Same. A Room in MACBETH'S Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well were done quickly: if the assassination [catch,
Could trammel up the consequence, and With his surcease, success; that but this blow [here,
Might be the be-all and the end-all But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,— [these cases
We'd jump the life to come. But in We still have judgment here; that we but teach [taught, return
Bloody instructions, which, being To plague the inventor: this even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice [trust:
To our own lips. He 's here in double First, as I am his kinsman and his subject, [his host,
Strong both against the deed; then, as Who should against his murderer shut the door, [this Duncan
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been [virtues
So clear in his great office, that his Will plead like angels trumpet-tongued against
The deep damnation of his taking-off;
And pity, like a naked new-born babe, Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, horsed
Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur [only
To prick the sides of my intent, but Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself
And falls on the other.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

How now! what news?
Lady M. He has almost supp'd: why have you left the chamber?
Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?
Lady M. Know you not he has?
Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:
He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought [people,
Golden opinions from all sorts of Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.
Lady M. Was the hope drunk
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since? [and pale
And wakes it now, to look so green At what it did so freely? From this time [afeard
Such I account thy love. Art thou To be the same in thine own act and valour [have that
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem, Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,'

Like the poor cat i' the adage ?
Macb. Prithee, peace:
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.
Lady M. What beast was 't then
That made you break this enterprise to me ? [a man;
When you durst do it, then you were
And, to be more than what you were, you would [nor place
Be so much more the man. Nor time
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now
Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know [milks me:
How tender 'tis to love the babe that
I would, while it was smiling in my face, [boneless gums,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as you
Have done to this.
Macb. If we should fail,—
Lady M. We fail!
But screw your courage to the sticking-place, [asleep—
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is
Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey [lains
Soundly invite him,—his two chamber-
Will I with wine and wassail so convince
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbec only: when in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon [the guilt
His spongy officers, who shall bear
Of our great quell? [only;
Macb. Bring forth men-children
For thy undaunted mettle should compose [received,
Nothing but males. Will it not be
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two [very daggers,
Of his own chamber, and used their
That they have done 't?
Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?
Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat. [show:
Away, and mock the time with fairest
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Inverness. Court of MACBETH'S Castle.

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE bearing a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?
Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.
Ban. And she goes down at twelve.
Fle. I take 't, 'tis later, sir.
Ban. Hold, take my sword. There's husbandry in heaven;
Their candles are all out. Take thee that too. [me,
A heavy summons lies like lead upon
And yet I would not sleep. Merciful powers, [that nature
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts
Gives way to in repose!

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.

Give me my sword.
Who's there?
Macb. A friend. [king 's a-bed:
Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The
He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great largess to your officers.
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up
In measureless content.
Macb. Being unprepared,
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrought.
Ban. All 's well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters: [truth.
To you they have show'd some
Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve, [that business,
We would spend it in some words upon
If you would grant the time.
Ban. At your kind'st leisure.
Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent, when 'tis,
It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchised and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsell'd.
Macb. Good repose the while!
Ban. Thanks, sir: the like to you!
[Exeunt BANQUO and FLEANCE.
Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed. [Exit Servant.
Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee: [still.
I have thee not, and yet I see thee
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw. [going;
Thou marshall'st me the way that I was
And such an instrument I was to use.
Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses, [still;
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee
And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood, [such thing:
Which was not so before. There 's no
It is the bloody business which informs
Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one half-world [abuse
Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams
The curtain'd sleeper; witchcraft celebrates [murder,
Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd
Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,
Whose howl 's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design
Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set earth,
Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear [about,
The very stones prate of my where-
And take the present horror from the time, [threat, he lives:
Which now suits with it. Whilst I
Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.
[A bell rings.
I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold;
What hath quench'd them hath given me fire. Hark! Peace!
It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman, [He is about it:
Which gives the stern'st good-night.
The doors are open, and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd their possets,
That Death and Nature do contend about them,
Whether they live or die. [what, ho!
Macb. [Within.] Who 's there?
Lady M. Alack, I am afraid they have awaked, [not the deed
And 'tis not done: the attempt and Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready; [resembled
He could not miss 'em. Had he not
My father as he slept, I had done 't.

Enter MACBETH.

My husband!
Macb. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise?
Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.
Did not you speak?
Macb. When?
Lady M. Now.
Macb. As I descended?
Lady M. Ay.
Macb. Hark!
Who lies i' the second chamber?
Lady M. Donalbain.
Macb. This is a sorry sight.
[Looking on his hands.
Lady M. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.
Macb. There 's one did laugh in 's sleep, and one cried 'Murder!'
That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them:
But they did say their prayers, and address'd them
Again to sleep. [together.
Lady M. There are two lodged
Macb. One cried 'God bless us!' and 'Amen' the other;
As they had seen me with these hangman's hands:

Listening their fear, I could not say
'Amen,'
When they did say 'God bless us!'
Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.
Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce 'Amen'?
I had most need of blessing, and
'Amen'
Stuck in my throat. [thought
Lady M. These deeds must not be After these ways; so, it will make us mad.
Macb. Methought I heard a voice
cry 'Sleep no more!
Macbeth does murder sleep'—the innocent sleep;
Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleave
of care, [bour's bath,
The death of each day's life, sore la-
Balm of hurt minds, great Nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast,—
Lady M. What do you mean?
Macb. Still it cried 'Sleep no more!'
to all the house:
'Glamis hath murder'd sleep; and therefore Cawdor
Shall sleep no more: Macbeth shall sleep no more!'
Lady M. Who was it that thus cried?
Why, worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength, to think [water,
So brainsickly of things. Go get some
And wash this filthy witness from your hand. [the place?
Why did you bring these daggers from
They must lie there: go carry them,
and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.
Macb. I'll go no more;
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on 't again I dare not.
Lady M. Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers: the sleeping and the dead [childhood
Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal;
For it must seem their guilt.
[Exit. Knocking within.
Macb. Whence is that knocking?
How is 't with me, when every noise
appals me?
What hands are here? ha! they pluck out mine eyes!
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash
this blood
Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour, but I shame
To wear a heart so white. [Knocking within.] I hear a knocking
At the south entry: retire we to our chamber:
A little water clears us of this deed:
How easy is it then! Your constancy
Hath left you unattended. [Knocking within.] Hark! more knocking.
Get on your nightgown, lest occasion
call us, [lost
And show us to be watchers. Be not
So poorly in your thoughts.
Macb. To know my deed, 'twere best not know myself.
[Knocking within.
Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same.

Knocking within. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here 's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock, knock! Who 's there, i' the name of Beelzebub? Here 's a farmer, that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty: come in time; have napkins enow about you; here you'll sweat for 't. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock! Who 's there, i' the other devil's name? Faith, here 's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O, come in, equivocator. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock, knock! Who 's there? Faith, here 's an English tailor come hither, for stealing out of a French hose: come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock; never at quiet! What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking within.] Anon, anon! I pray you, remember the porter.

[Opens the gate.

Enter MACDUFF and LENNOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed,
That you do lie so late?

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance: therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat o' me: but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awaked him; here he comes.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir.

Macb. Good-morrow, both.

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him:
I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him.

Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you;
But yet 'tis one. [sics pain.

Macb. The labour we delight in phy-
This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call,
For 'tis my limited service. [Exit.

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb. He does: he did appoint so.

Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down, and, as they say,
Lamentings heard i' the air, strange screams of death;
And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combustion and confused events [obscure bird
New hatch'd to the woeful time: the
Clamour'd the livelong night: some say, the earth
Was feverous and did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror!
Tongue nor heart
Cannot conceive nor name thee!

Macb. }
Len. } What 's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his master-piece! [ope
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' the building.

Macb. What is't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight [speak;
With a new Gorgon: do not bid me
See, and then speak yourselves.

[Exeunt MACBETH and LENNOX.

Awake, awake!
Ring the alarum-bell. Murder and treason! [awake!
Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm!
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit, [see
And look on death itself! up, up, and
The great doom's image! Malcolm!
Banquo! [like sprites,
As from your graves rise up, and walk
To countenance this horror! Ring the bell. [Bell rings.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. What 's the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley [speak!
The sleepers of the house? speak,

Macd. O gentle lady,
'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:

The repetition, in a woman's ear,
Would murder as it fell.

Enter BANQUO.

O Banquo, Banquo!
Our royal master 's murder'd!
Lady M. Woe, alas!
What, in our house?
Ban. Too cruel any where.
Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself,
And say it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENNOX.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had lived a blessed time; for, from this instant,
There 's nothing serious in mortality:
All is but toys: renown and grace is dead;
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss?
Macb. You are, and do not know 't:
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood
Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.
Macd. Your royal father 's murder'd.
Mal. O, by whom?
Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done 't:
Their hands and faces were all badged with blood;
So were their daggers, which unwiped we found
Upon their pillows:
They stared, and were distracted; no man's life
Was to be trusted with them.
Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.
Macd. Wherefore did you so?
Macb. Who can be wise, amazed, temperate and furious,
Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:
The expedition of my violent love
Outrun the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin laced with his golden blood;
And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature
For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,
Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers
Unmannerly breech'd with gore: who could refrain,
That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage to make 's love known?
Lady M. Help me hence, ho!
Macd. Look to the lady.
Mal. [Aside to DON.] Why do we hold our tongues,
That most may claim this argument for ours?
Don. [Aside to MAL.] What should be spoken.
Here, where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,
May rush and seize us? Let 's away: our tears
Are not yet brew'd.
Mal. [Aside to DON.] Nor our strong sorrow
Upon the foot of motion.
Ban. Look to the lady:
[LADY MACBETH is carried out.
And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:
In the great hand of God I stand, and thence
Against the undivulged pretence I fight
Of treasonous malice.
Macd. And so do I.
All. So all.
Macb. Let 's briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet i' the hall together.
All. Well contented.
[Exeunt all but MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.
Mal. What will you do? Let 's not consort with them:
To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.
Don. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune
Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There 's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.
Mal. This murderous shaft that 's shot
Hath not yet lighted; and our safest way
Is to avoid the aim. Therefore to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away: there 's warrant in that theft
Which steals itself when there 's no mercy left.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Outside MACBETH'S Castle.

Enter Ross and an Old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well: [have seen
Within the volume of which time I
Hours dreadful and things strange; but this sore night
Have trifled former knowings.
Ross. Ah, good father,
Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,
Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp: [shame,
Is't night's predominance, or the day's
That darkness does the face of earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it?
Old M. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that 's done. On Tuesday last, [place,
A falcon, towering in her pride of
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.
Ross. And Duncan's horses—a thing most strange and certain—
Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race, [flung out,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls,
Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would make War with mankind. [other.
Old M. 'Tis said they eat each
Ross. They did so; to the amazement of mine eyes,
That look'd upon 't. Here comes the good Macduff.

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world, sir, now?
Macd. Why, see you not?
Ross. Is 't known who did this more than bloody deed? [slain.
Macd. Those that Macbeth hath
Ross. Alas, the day!
What good could they pretend?
Macd. They were suborn'd:
Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons, [upon them
Are stol'n away and fled; which puts Suspicion of the deed.
Ross. 'Gainst nature still:
Thriftless ambition, that wilt ravin up
Thine own life's means! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.
Macd. He is already named, and gone to Scone
To be invested.
Ross. Where is Duncan's body?
Macd. Carried to Colmekill,
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors,
And guardian of their bones.
Ross. Will you to Scone?
Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.
Ross. Well, I will thither.
Macd. Well, may you see things well done there: adieu! [new!
Lest our old robes sit easier than our Ross. Farewell, father.
Old M. God's benison go with you, and with those
That would make good of bad, and friends of foes! [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now: King, Cawdor, Glamis, all, [fear
As the weird women promised; and I
Thou play'dst most foully for 't: yet it was said
It should not stand in thy posterity;
But that myself should be the root and father [from them—
Of many kings. If there come truth
As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine— [good,
Why, by the verities on thee made
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But hush! no more.

Sennet sounded. Enter MACBETH, as King; LADY MACBETH, as Queen; LENNOX, ROSS, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here 's our chief guest.
Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all-thing unbecoming.
Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.
Ban. Let your highness
Command upon me; to the which my duties

Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.
Macb. Ride you this afternoon?
Ban. Ay, my good lord.
Macb. We should have else desired your good advice,
Which still hath been both grave and prosperous, [to-morrow.
In this day's council; but we'll take
Is 't far you ride? [the time
Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up
'Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the better
I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.
Macb. Fail not our feast.
Ban. My lord, I will not.
Macb. We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd [fessing
In England and in Ireland, not con-
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers [morrow;
With strange invention: but of that to-
When therewithal we shall have cause of state [adieu,
Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse:
Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?
Ban. Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon us.
Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot; [backs.
And so I do commend you to their
Farewell. [Exit BANQUO.
Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night: to make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself
Till supper-time alone: while then, God be with you!
[Exeunt all but MACBETH and an Attendant.
Sirrah, a word with you: attend those men
Our pleasure? [the palace-gate.
Attend. They are, my lord, without
Macb. Bring them before us.
[Exit Attendant.
To be thus is nothing,
But to be safely thus: our fears in Banquo [nature
Stick deep; and in his royalty of Reigns that which would be fear'd:
'tis much he dares;
And, to that dauntless temper of his mind, [his valour
He hath a wisdom that doth guide
To act in safety. There is none but he
Whose being I do fear: and under him
My Genius is rebuked; as, it is said,
Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the sisters,
When first they put the name of King upon me, [prophet-like,
And bade them speak to him; then,
They hail'd him father to a line of kings: [less crown,
Upon my head they placed a fruit-
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand, [so,
No son of mine succeeding. If 't be
For Banquo's issue have I filed my mind; [murder'd;
For them the gracious Duncan have I
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man,
To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings! [list,
Rather than so, come, Fate, into the
And champion me to the utterance!—
Who 's there?

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now go to the door, and stay there till we call. [Exit Attendant.
Was it not yesterday we spoke together? [highness.
First Mur. It was, so please your Macb. Well then, now
Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know [held you
That it was he in the times past which
So under fortune; which you thought had been [you
Our innocent self: this I made good to
In our last conference; pass'd in probation with you,
How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the instruments,
Who wrought with them, and all things else that might
To half a soul and to a notion crazed
Say 'Thus did Banquo.' [us.
First Mur. You made it known to Macb. I did so; and went further, which is now [find
Our point of second meeting. Do you
Your patience so predominant in your nature [gospell'd
That you can let this go? Are you so
To pray for this good man and for his issue,

Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave
And beggar'd yours for ever?
First Mur. We are men, my liege.
Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,
Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are clept
All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The housekeeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous Nature
Hath in him closed; whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the bill
That writes them all alike: and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say it;
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.
Sec. Mur. I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incensed that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.
First Mur. And I another
So weary with disasters, tugg'd with Fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on 't.
Macb. Both of you
Know Banquo was your enemy.
Both Mur. True, my lord.
Macb. So he is mine; and in such bloody distance
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life: and though I could
With barefaced power sweep him from my sight
And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
Who I myself struck down; and thence it is
That I to your assistance do make love;
Masking the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons.
Sec. Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.
First Mur. Though our lives—
Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most
I will advise you where to plant yourselves;
Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,
The moment on 't; for 't must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought
That I require a clearness: and with him—
To leave no rubs nor botches in the work—
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart:
I'll come to you anon.
Both Mur. We are resolved, my lord.
Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide within.
[Exeunt Murderers.
It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter LADY MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court? [again to-night.
Serv. Ay, madam, but returns
Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
For a few words.
Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.
Lady M. Nought 's had, all 's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone, [making;
Of sorriest fancies your companions
Using those thoughts which should indeed have died
With them they think on? Things without all remedy
Should be without regard: what 's done is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it:
She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor malice
Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,
Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams
That shake us nightly: better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you:
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we must lave our honours in these flattering streams,
And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife!
Thou know'st that Banquo, and his Fleance, lives.

Lady M. But in them Nature's copy's not eterne.

Macb. There 's comfort yet; they are assailable;
Then be thou jocund: ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight; ere to black Hecate's summons
The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done
A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What 's to be done?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling night,
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day;
And with thy bloody and invisible hand
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond
Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and the crow
Makes wing to the rooky wood:
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,
Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse.
Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee still;
Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill:
So, prithee, go with me. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Park, with a Road leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.

First Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

Third Mur. Macbeth.

Sec. Mur. He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers
Our offices, and what we have to do,
To the direction just.

First Mur. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day:
Now spurs the lated traveller apace
To gain the timely inn; and near approaches
The subject of our watch.

Third Mur. Hark! I hear horses.

Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!

Sec. Mur. Then it is he: the rest
That are within the note of expectation
Already are i' the court.

First Mur. His horses go about.

Third Mur. Almost a mile: but he does usually— palace gate
So all men do—from hence to the Make it their walk.

Sec. Mur. A light, a light!

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE with a torch.

Third Mur. 'Tis he.

First Mur. Stand to 't.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

First Mur. Let it come down.

[They set upon BANQUO.

Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!
Thou mayst revenge.—O slave!

[Dies. FLEANCE escapes.

Third Mur. Who did strike out the light?

First Mur. Was 't not the way?
Third Mur. There 's but one down; the son is fled.
Sec. Mur. We have lost
Best half of our affair.
First Mur. Well, let 's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

A Banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, LADY MACBETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees; sit down: at first
And last the hearty welcome.
Lords. Thanks to your majesty.
Macb. Ourself will mingle with society,
And play the humble host. [time
Our hostess keeps her state, but in best
We will require her welcome.
Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends;
For my heart speaks they are welcome.
Enter First Murderer, to the door.
Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.
Both sides are even: here I'll sit i' the midst: [measure
Be large in mirth; anon we'll drink a
The table round. [Approaching the door.] There 's blood upon thy face.
Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Macb. 'Tis better thee without than he within.
Is he dispatch'd?
Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him.
Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats: yet he 's good
That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it,
Thou art the nonpareil.
Mur. Most royal sir,
Fleance is 'scaped.
Macb. [Aside.] Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect; [rock;
Whole as the marble, founded as the
As broad and general as the casing air:
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confined, bound in
To saucy doubts and fears. [To Mur.] But Banquo 's safe?
Mur. Ay, my good lord: safe in a ditch he bides, [head;
With twenty trenched gashes on his
The least a death to nature.
Macb. Thanks for that.
[Aside] There the grown serpent lies; the worm that 's fled
Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present. [To Mur.] Get thee gone: to-morrow
We'll hear, ourselves, again.
[Exit Murderer.
Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold [a-making,
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis
'Tis given with welcome: to feed were best at home; [mony;
From thence, the sauce to meat is cere-
Meeting were bare without it.
Macb. Sweet remembrancer!
Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both! [sit.
Len. May 't please your highness
[The Ghost of BANQUO rises, and sits in MACBETH'S place.
Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd,
Were the graced person of our Banquo present; [ness
Who may I rather challenge for unkind-
Than pity for mischance!
Ross. His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon his promise. Please 't your highness
To grace us with your royal company.
Macb. The table 's full.
Len. Here is a place reserved, sir.
Macb. Where?
Len. Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness?
Macb. Which of you have done this?
Lords. What, my good lord?
Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake
Thy gory locks at me. [is not well.
Ross. Gentlemen, rise; his highness
Lady M. Sit, worthy friends: my lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep seat;
The fit is momentary; upon a thought
He will again be well: if much you note him,
You shall offend him and extend his passion:

Feed, and regard him not. [To MACBETH] Are you a man ?
Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appal the devil.
Lady M. O proper stuff !
This is the very painting of your fear :
This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said, [and starts,
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws
Impostors to true fear, would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Authorized by her grandam. Shame itself ! [all 's done,
Why do you make such faces ? When
You look but on a stool.
Macb. Prithee, see there ! behold ! look ! lo ! how say you ?
Why, what care I ? If thou canst nod, speak too. [send
If charnel-houses and our graves must
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites.
[Ghost vanishes.
Lady M. What ! quite unmann'd in folly ?
Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.
Lady M. Fie, for shame !
Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' the olden time, [weal ;
Ere human statute purged the gentle
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd [been,
Too terrible for the ear : the time has
That, when the brains were out, the man would die, [again,
And there an end ; but now they rise
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns, [more strange
And push us from our stools : this is
Than such a murder is.
Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.
Macb. I do forget.
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends ; [nothing
I have a strange infirmity, which is
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all ;
Then I'll sit down. Give me some wine, fill full. [table,
I drink to the general joy o' the whole
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss ; [we thirst,
Would he were here ! to all, and him,
And all to all.
Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.
Ghost rises again.
Macb. Avaunt ! and quit my sight ! let the earth hide thee !
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold ;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.
Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom : 'tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.
Macb. What man dare, I dare :
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear, [tiger ;
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble : or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword ; [me
If trembling I inhabit then, protest
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow !
Unreal mockery, hence !
[Ghost vanishes.
Why, so : being gone,
I am a man again. [To the Guests.] Pray you, sit still.
Lady M. You have displaced the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admired disorder.
Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder ? You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights, [cheeks,
And keep the natural ruby of your
When mine are blanch'd with fear.
Ross. What sights, my lord ?
Lady M. I pray you, speak not ; he grows worse and worse ;
Question enrages him. At once, good-night : [going,
Stand not upon the order of your
But go at once. [health
Len. Good night ; and better
Attend his majesty !
Lady M. A kind good night to all !
[Exeunt all but MACBETH and LADY MACBETH.
Macb. It will have blood : they say blood will have blood :

Stones have been known to move and trees to speak;
Augures and understood relations have
By maggot-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth [the night?
The secret'st man of blood.—What is Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.
Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies his person
At our great bidding?
Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?
Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send: [house
There 's not a one of them but in his
I keep a servant fee'd. I will to-morrow,
And betimes I will, to the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know,
By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good [blood
All causes shall give way: I am in
Stepp'd in so far that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er:
Strange things I have in head that will to hand, [scann'd.
Which must be acted ere they may be
Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.
Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse
Is the initiate fear that wants hard use:
We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting HECATE.

First Witch. Why, how now, Hecate! you look angerly. [you are,
Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as Saucy and overbold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth
In riddles and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me i' the morning: thither he
Will come to know his destiny:
Your vessels and your spells provide,
Your charms and every thing beside.
I am for the air; this night I'll spend
Unto a dismal and a fatal end:
Great business must be wrought ere noon:
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound;
I'll catch it ere it come to ground:
And that distill'd by magic sleights
Shall raise such artificial sprites
As by the strength of their illusion
Shall draw him on to his confusion:
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear:
And you all know, security
Is mortals' chiefest enemy.
[Music and a Song within: 'Come away, come away,' etc.
Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me.
[Exit
First Witch. Come, let 's make haste; she'll soon be back again.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Forres. The Palace.

Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts, [say
Which can interpret further: only I
Things have been strangely borne. The gracious Duncan [dead:
Was pitied of Macbeth: marry, he was
And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late; [Fleance kill'd,
Whom, you may say, if 't please you,
For Fleance fled: men must not walk too late. [monstrous
Who cannot want the thought how
It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain
To kill their gracious father? damned fact! [straight,
How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not
In pious rage, the two delinquents tear,
That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep?
Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too; [alive
For 'twould have anger'd any heart

To hear the men deny 't. So that, I say,
He has borne all things well: and I do think
That, had he Duncan's sons under his key—
As, an 't please Heaven, he shall not—they should find
What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance.
But, peace! for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd
His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear
Macduff lives in disgrace: sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan,
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
Lives in the English court; and is received
Of the most pious Edward with such grace,
That the malevolence of Fortune nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff
Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid
To wake Northumberland and warlike Siward:
That, by the help of these—with Him above
To ratify the work—we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights;
Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives;
Do faithful homage and receive free honours:
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath so exasperate the king that he
Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute 'Sir, not I,'
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums, as who should say 'You'll rue the time
That clogs me with this answer.'

Len. And that well might
Advise him to a caution, to hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England and unfold
His message ere he come; that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accursed!

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him.

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Cavern. In the middle, a boiling Cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

Sec. Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whined.

Third Witch. Harpier cries 'Tis time, 'tis time.'

First Witch. Round about the cauldron go;
In the poison'd entrails throw.
Toad, that under cold stone
Days and nights hast thirty-one
Swelter'd venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first i' the charmed pot.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Sec. Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and owlet's wing,
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Third Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witches' mummy, maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark,
Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark,
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew
Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse,
Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips,
Finger of birth-strangled babe
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,
Make the gruel thick and slab:
Add thereto a tiger's chaudron,
For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Sec. Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE to the other three Witches.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains;

And every one shall share i' the gains :
And now about the cauldron sing,
Live elves and fairies in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.
[Music and a Song : 'Black spirits,' etc. HECATE retires.
Sec. Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes :
Open, locks,
Whoever knocks !
Enter MACBETH.
Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags !
What is 't you do ?
All. A deed without a name.
Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess, [me :
Howe'er you come to know it, answer
Though you untie the winds, and let them fight [waves
Against the churches ; though the yesty
Confound and swallow navigation up ;
Though bladed corn be lodged and trees blown down ;
Though castles topple on their warders' heads ;
Though palaces and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations ; though the treasure
Of Nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken ; answer me
To what I ask you.
First Witch. Speak.
Sec. Witch. Demand.
Third Witch. We'll answer.
First Witch. Say, if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters ?
Macb. Call 'em ; let me see 'em.
First Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten
Her nine farrow ; grease that 's sweaten
From the murderer's gibbet throw
Into the flame.
All. Come, high or low ;
Thyself and office deftly show !
Thunder. First Apparition : an armed Head.
Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—
First Witch. He knows thy thought :
Hear his speech, but say thou nought.
First App. Macbeth ! Macbeth ! Macbeth ! beware Macduff ; Beware the Thane of Fife. Dismiss me. Enough. [Descends.
Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution, thanks ;
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright : but one word more,—
First Witch. He will not be commanded : here 's another,
More potent than the first.
Thunder. Second Apparition : a bloody Child.
Sec. App. Macbeth ! Macbeth ! Macbeth ! [thee.
Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear
Sec. App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute ; laugh to scorn [born
The power of man, for none of woman
Shall harm Macbeth. [Descends.
Macb. Then live, Macduff : what need I fear of thee ? [sure,
But yet I'll make assurance double
And take a bond of Fate : thou shalt not live ; [lies,
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it
And sleep in spite of thunder.
Thunder. Third Apparition : a Child crowned, with a Tree in his hand.
What is this,
That rises like the issue of a king ;
And wears upon his baby-brow the round
And top of sovereignty ?
All. Listen, but speak not to 't.
Third App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care
Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are :
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until [hill
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane
Shall come against him. [Descends.
Macb. That will never be :
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree [bodements ! good !
Unfix his earth-bound root ? Sweet
Rebellion's head, rise never, till the wood [Macbeth
Of Birnam rise, and our high-placed
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath [heart
To time and mortal custom. Yet my
Throbs to know one thing : tell me, if your art [ever
Can tell so much : shall Banquo's issue
Reign in this kingdom ?

All. Seek to know no more.
Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know.
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this? [Hautboys.
First Witch. Show!
Sec. Witch. Show!
Third Witch. Show! [heart;
All. Show his eyes; and grieve his
Come like shadows, so depart!

A Show of eight Kings, the last with a Glass in his hand; BANQUO's Ghost following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo: down!
Thy crown does sear mine eyeballs. And thy hair, [first.
Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the
A third is like the former. Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start, eyes!
What, will the line stretch out to the crack of doom? [more:
Another yet! A seventh! I'll see no
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass [I see
Which shows me many more; and some
That twofold balls and treble sceptres carry:
Horrible sight! Now, I see, 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his.
[Apparitions vanish.
What, is this so?
First Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: but why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights:
I'll charm the air to give a sound
While you perform your antic round;
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.
[Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish, with HECATE.
Macb. Where are they? Gone? Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar!
Come in, without there!

Enter LENNOX.

Len. What's your grace's will?
Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?
Len. No, my lord.
Macb. Came they not by you?
Len. No, indeed, my lord.
Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride, [I did hear
And damn'd all those that trust them!
The galloping of horse: who was 't came by?
Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word
Macduff is fled to England.
Macb. Fled to England!
Len. Ay, my good lord.
Macb. [Aside.] Time, thou anticipatest my dread exploits:
The flighty purpose never is o'ertook
Unless the deed go with it: from this moment
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now, [thought and done:
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it
The castle of Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o' the sword [souls
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do before this purpose cool:
But no more sights! [To LENNOX] Where are these gentlemen?
Come, bring me where they are.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Fife. MACDUFF'S Castle.

Enter LADY MACDUFF, her Son, and ROSS.

L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?
Ross. You must have patience, madam.
L. Macd. He had none:
His flight was madness: when our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.
Ross. You know not
Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.
L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,
His mansion and his titles in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not;
He wants the natural touch: for the poor wren, [fight,
The most diminutive of birds, will
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.

All is the fear and nothing is the love;
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.
Ross. My dearest coz,
I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further;
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors
And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear;
But float upon a wild and violent sea
Each way and move. I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but I'll be here again:
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!
L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.
Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
It would be my disgrace and your comfort:
I take my leave at once. Exit.
L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead:
And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As birds do, mother.
L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?
Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.
L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net nor lime,
The pitfall nor the gin.
Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.
My father is not dead, for all your saying.
L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?
L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.
L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; and yet, i' faith,
With wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?
L. Macd. Ay, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor?
L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.
Son. And be all traitors that do so?
L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.
Son. And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?
L. Macd. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them?
L. Macd. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools; for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men and hang up them.
L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey! But how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.
L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,
Though in your state of honour I am perfect.
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:
If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fright you thus, methinks I am too savage;
To do worse to you were fell cruelty,
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!
I dare abide no longer. Exit.
L. Macd. Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world, where to do harm
Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly; why, then, alas!
Do I put up that womanly defence,
To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces?
First Mur. Where is your husband?
L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified
Where such as thou mayst find him.
First Mur. He 's a traitor.
Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain!
First Mur. What, you egg! Stabbing him.
Young fry of treachery!

Son. He has killed me, mother:
Run away, I pray you! [Dies.
[Exit LADY MACDUFF, crying, 'Murder!' and pursued by the Murderers.

SCENE III.—England. Before the KING'S Palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
Weep our sad bosoms empty.
Macd. Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men [each new morn
Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom: New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows [sounds
Strike heaven on the face, that it re-As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out
Like syllable of dolour.
Mal. What I believe, I'll wail;
What know, believe; and what I can redress, [will.
As I shall find the time to friend, I
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance. [our tongues,
This tyrant, whose sole name blisters
Was once thought honest: you have loved him well;
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something
You may deserve of him through me; and wisdom [lamb
To offer up a weak, poor, innocent
To appease an angry god.
Macd. I am not treacherous.
Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil
In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon;
That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose:
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,
Yet grace must still look so.
Macd. I have lost my hopes.
Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.
Why in that rawness left you wife and child, [knots of love,
Those precious motives, those strong
Without leave-taking? I pray you,
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours, [rightly just,
But mine own safeties. You may be
Whatever I shall think.
Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny! lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dare not check thee: wear thou thy wrongs;
Thy title is affeer'd! Fare thee well, lord: [think'st
I would not be the villain that thou
For the whole space that 's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.
Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke; [a gash
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day
Is added to her wounds: I think withal
There would be hands uplifted in my right; [I offer
And here from gracious England have
Of goodly thousands: but, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head, [country
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor
Shall have more vices than it had before;
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.
Macd. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth [poor state
Will seem as pure as snow, and the Esteem him as a lamb, being compared
With my confineless harms.
Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd
In evils to top Macbeth.
Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin [bottom, none,
That has a name: but there 's no
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters, [not fill up
Your matrons and your maids, could
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'erbear

That did oppose my will: better Macbeth
Than such an one to reign.
Macd. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne, [yet
And fall of many kings. But fear not
To take upon you what is yours: you may [plenty,
Convey your pleasures in a spacious
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink. [cannot be
We have willing dames enough; there
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclined.
Mal. With this there grows
In my most ill-composed affection such
A staunchless avarice that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce [should forge
To make me hunger more; that I
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.
Macd. This avarice
Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root [hath been
Than summer-seeming lust, and it
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear; [will,
Scotland hath foisons to fill up your
Of your mere own: all these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.
Mal. But I have none: the king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should [hell,
Pour the sweet milk of concord into
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.
Macd. O Scotland! Scotland!
Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.
Macd. Fit to govern!
No, not to live. O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-sceptred, [days again,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accursed,
And does blaspheme his breed? Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king: the queen that bore thee, [feet,
Oftener upon her knees than on her
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself
Have banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast,
Thy hope ends here!
Mal. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wiped the black scruples, reconciled my thoughts [Macbeth
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish
By many of these trains hath sought to win me [plucks me
Into his power; and modest wisdom
From over-credulous haste: but God above [now
Deal between thee and me! for even
I put myself to thy direction, and
Unspeak mine own detraction; here abjure [myself,
The taints and blames I laid upon
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was forsworn; [own;
Scarcely have coveted what was mine
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow; and delight
No less in truth than life: my first false speaking [truly,
Was this upon myself: what I am
Is thine and my poor country's to command: [proach,
Whither indeed, before thy here-ap-
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now we'll together; and the chance of goodness [are you silent?
Be like our warranted quarrel! Why
Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well, more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray you?

Doct. Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretched souls [vinces
That stay his cure: their malady con-
The great assay of art; but at his touch, [hand,
Such sanctity hath Heaven given his
They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor.
[Exit Doctor.

Macd. What's the disease he means?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king; [England,
Which often, since my here-remain in
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven, [visited people,
Himself best knows: but strangely-
All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures,
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks, [spoken,
Put on with holy prayers: and 'tis
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy;
And sundry blessings hang about his throne
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Ross.

Macd. See, who comes here?

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him not.

Macd. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God, betimes remove
The means that makes us strangers!

Ross. Sir, Amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross. Alas, poor country!
Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot [where nothing,
Be call'd our mother, but our grave;
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Where sighs and groans and shrieks that rend the air
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems [knell
A modern ecstasy: the dead man's
Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives
Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they sicken.

Macd. O, relation
Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal. What is the newest grief?

Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;
Each minute teems a new one.

Macd. How does my wife?

Ross. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Ross. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes it?

Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings,
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather, [foot:
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland [fight,
Would create soldiers, make our women
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be 't their comfort
We are coming thither: gracious England hath [men;
Lent us good Siward and ten thousand
An older and a better soldier none
That Christendom gives out.

Ross. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words [desert air,
That would be howl'd out in the
Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief
Due to some single breast?

Ross. No mind that 's honest
But in it shares some woe; though the main part
Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it. [tongue for ever,

Ross. Let not your ears despise my
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound
That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Hum! I guess at it.

Ross. Your castle is surprised; your wife and babes
Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.
Mal. Merciful heaven!
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;
Give sorrow words: the grief that does not speak
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break.
Macd. My children too?
Ross. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.
Macd. And I must be from thence!
My wife kill'd too?
Ross. I have said.
Mal. Be comforted:
Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.
Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty ones?
Did you say all?—O hell-kite! All?
What, all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?
Mal. Dispute it like a man.
Macd. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man:
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff,
They were all struck for thee! naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!
Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword: let grief
Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.
Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And braggart with my tongue! But, gentle heavens,
Cut short all intermission; front to front
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too!
Mal. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above
Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may:
The night is long that never finds the day. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. Ante-room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic, and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching! In this slumbery agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may to me: and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter LADY MACBETH, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here 's a spot.

Doct. Hark! she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One: two: why, then 'tis time to do 't.—Hell is murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife; where is she now?——What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here 's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gent. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands; put on your nightgown; look not so pale.—I tell you yet again, Banquo 's buried; he cannot come out on 's grave.

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed! there 's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand: what 's done cannot be undone: to bed, to bed, to bed! [Exit.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: unnatural deeds [minds
Do breed unnatural troubles: infected
To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets: [physician.
More needs she the divine than the
God, God forgive us all! Look after her; [annoyance,
Remove from her the means of all
And still keep eyes upon her. So, good night: [my sight:
My mind she has mated, and amazed
I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm, [duff.
His uncle Siward and the good Mac-
Revenges burn in them; for their dear causes [alarm
Would to the bleeding and the grim
Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood
Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Caith. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file [son,
Of all the gentry: there is Siward's
And many unrough youths that even now
Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Caith. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies: [hate him
Some say he 's mad; others that lesser
Do call it valiant fury: but, for certain,
He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause
Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel
His secret murders sticking on his hands; [faith-breach;
Now minutely revolts upbraid his
Those he commands move only in command, [his title
Nothing in love: now does he feel
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame
His pester'd senses to recoil and start,
When all that is within him does condemn
Itself for being there?

Caith. Well, march we on,
To give obedience where 'tis truly owed: [weal,
Meet we the medicine of the sickly

And with him pour we in our country's purge
Each drop of us.
Len. Or so much as it needs,
To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds.
Make we our march towards Birnam.
[Exeunt, marching.

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all: [ane
Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsin-
I cannot taint with fear. What 's the boy Malcolm?
Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know
All mortal consequences have pronounced me thus:
'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman
Shall e'er have power upon thee.' Then fly, false thanes,
And mingle with the English epicures:
The mind I sway by and the heart I bear [with fear.
Shall never sag with doubt nor shake

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-faced loon!
Where got'st thou that goose look?
Serv. There is ten thousand—
Macb. Geese, villain?
Serv. Soldiers, sir.
Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear, [patch?
Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers,
Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine [whey-face?
Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers,
Serv. The English force, so please you.
Macb. Take thy face hence.
[Exit Servant.
Seyton!— I am sick at heart,
When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will cheer me ever, or disseat me now.
I have lived long enough: my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age, [friends,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of
I must not look to have; but, in their stead, [our, breath,
Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-hon-
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.
Seyton!

Enter SEYTON.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?
Macb. What news more?
Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.
Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.
Give me my armour.
Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.
Macb. I'll put it on.
Send out more horses; skirr the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour.
How does your patient, doctor?
Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.
Macb. Cure her of that.
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased, [sorrow,
Pluck from the memory a rooted
Raze out the written troubles of the brain, [dote
And with some sweet oblivious anti-
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?
Doct. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.
Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.
Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff. [fly from me.—
Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes
Come, sir, dispatch.—If thou couldst, doctor, cast
The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull 't off, I say.— [tive drug
What rhubarb, senna, or what purga-
Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them?
Doct. Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation

Makes us hear something.
Macb. Bring it after me.
I will not be afraid of death and bane,
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane.
Doct. [Aside.] Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,
Profit again should hardly draw me here. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Country near Birnam Wood.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD and his Son, MACDUFF, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, ROSS, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand
That chambers will be safe.
Ment. We doubt it nothing.
Siw. What wood is this before us?
Ment. The wood of Birnam.
Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough,
And bear 't before him: thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us.
Soldiers. It shall be done.
Siw. We learn no other but the confident tyrant [endure
Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will
Our setting down before 't.
Mal. 'Tis his main hope:
For where there is advantage to be given, [the revolt;
Both more and less have given him
And none serve with him but constrained things
Whose hearts are absent too.
Macd. Let our just censures
Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.
Siw. The time approaches
That will with due decision make us know [we owe.
What we shall say we have and what
Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate, [trate:
But certain issue strokes must arbi-
Towards which advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still 'They come:' our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie
Till famine and the ague eat them up:
Were they not forced with those that should be ours,
We might have met them dareful, beard to beard,
And beat them backward home.
[A cry of Women within.
What is that noise?
Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord. [Exit.
Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears:
The time has been my senses would have cool'd [of hair
To hear a night-shriek, and my fell
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir [with horrors;
As life were in 't: I have supp'd full
Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

Re-enter SEYTON.

Wherefore was that cry?
Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.
Macb. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a word. [morrow,
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools [brief candle!
The way to dusty death. Out, out,
Life 's but a walking shadow, a poor player [stage
That struts and frets his hour upon the
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou comest to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do it.
Macb. Well, say, sir.
Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill, [thought,
I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, me-
The wood began to move.
Macb. Liar and slave!
Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if 't be not so: [coming;
Within this three mile may you see it I say, a moving grove.
Macb. If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive, [be sooth,
Till famine cling thee: if thy speech
I care not if thou dost for me as much.
I pull in resolution, and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth: 'Fear not, till Birnam wood [wood
Do come to Dunsinane:' and now a
Comes toward Dunsinane.—Arm, arm, and out!
If this which he avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here.
I 'gin to be aweary of the sun,
And wish the estate o' the world were now undone.
Ring the alarum-bell! Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD, MACDUFF, and their Army, bearing boughs.

Mal. Now near enough; your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle, [son,
Shall, with my cousin, your right noble
Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff and we [to do,
Shall take upon 's what else remains
According to our order.
Siw. Fare you well.
Do we but find the tyrant's power tonight,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.
Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Plain.

Alarums. Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly, [What 's he
But bear-like I must fight the course.
That was not born of woman? Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter Young SIWARD.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?
Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.
Macb. My name 's Macbeth.
Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title
More hateful to mine ear.
Macb. No, nor more fearful.
Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.
[They fight, and Young SIWARD is slain.
Macb. Thou wast born of woman.
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that 's of a woman born. [Exit.

Alarum. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face!
If thou beest slain and with no stroke of mine, [haunt me still.
My wife and children's ghosts will
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hired to bear their staves: either thou, Macbeth, [edge
Or else my sword with an unbatter'd
I sheathe again undeeded. There thou shouldst be; [note
By this great clatter, one of greatest
Seems bruited. Let me find him, Fortune
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarums

Enter MALCOLM and Old SIWARD.

Siw. This way, my lord; the castle 's gently render'd: [fight;
The tyrant's people on both sides do

The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.
Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.
Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.
[Exeunt. Alarum.

SCENE VIII.—Another Part of the Plain.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die [the gashes
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives,
Do better upon them.

Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn!
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee: [much charged
But get thee back; my soul is too
With blood of thine already.
Macd. I have no words:
My voice is in my sword, thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out!
[They fight.
Macb. Thou losest labour:
As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed:
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.
Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast served [mother's womb
Tell thee, Macduff was from his
Untimely ripp'd. [tells me so,
Macb. Accursed be that tongue that
For it hath cow'd my better part of man! [believed,
And be these juggling fiends no more
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear, [fight with thee.
And break it to our hope. I'll not
Macd. Then yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze o' the time: [are,
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
'Here may you see the tyrant.'
Macb. I'll not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet, [curse.
And to be baited with the rabble's
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane, [born,
And thou opposed, being of no woman
Yet I will try the last. Before my body [Macduff;
I throw my warlike shield. Lay on,
And damn'd be him that first cries 'Hold, enough!'
[Exeunt, fighting. Alarums.

Retreat. Flourish. Enter, with Drum and Colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD, ROSS, the other Thanes, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arrived.
Siw. Some must go off: and yet, by these I see, [bought.
So great a day as this is cheaply
Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son. [soldier's debt:
Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a
He only lived but till he was a man;
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd [fought,
In the unshrinking station where he
But like a man he died.
Siw. Then he is dead?
Ross. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow
Must not be measured by his worth, for then
It hath no end.
Siw. Had he his hurts before?
Ross. Ay, on the front. [he!
Siw. Why then, God's soldier be
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so his knell is knoll'd.
Mal. He 's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.
Siw. He 's worth no more:
They say he parted well, and paid his score: [newer comfort.
And so, God be with him! Here comes

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: behold, where stands
The usurper's cursed head: the time is free: [dom's pearl,
I see thee compass'd with thy king-
That speak my salutation in their minds;

Whose voices I desire aloud with mine:
Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland!

[Flourish.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time
Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,
Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour named. What 's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time,
As calling home our exiled friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life; this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So thanks to all at once and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

FRANCISCO at his Post. Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who 's there ?
Fran. Nay, answer me : stand, and unfold yourself.
Ber. Long live the king !
Fran. Bernardo ?
Ber. He. [upon your hour.
Fran. You come most carefully
Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve ; get thee to bed, Francisco.
Fran. For this relief much thanks : 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.
Ber. Have you had quiet guard ?
Fran. Not a mouse stirring.
Ber. Well, good night.
If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.
Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho ! Who is there ?

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Friends to this ground.
Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.
Fran. Give you good night.
Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier : Who hath relieved you ?
Fran. Bernardo hath my place. Give you good night. [Exit.
Mar. Holla ! Bernardo !
Ber. Say, What, is Horatio there ?
Hor. A piece of him.
Ber. Welcome, Horatio : welcome, good Marcellus.
Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night ?
Ber. I have seen nothing. [tasy,
Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fan-
And will not let belief take hold of him
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us :
Therefore I have entreated him along
With us to watch the minutes of this night ;
That, if again this apparition come,
He may approve our eyes and speak to it.
Hor. Tush, tush ! 'twill not appear.
Ber. Sit down awhile ;
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.
Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.
Ber. Last night of all,

When yon same star that 's westward from the pole
Had made his course to illume that part of heaven [myself,
Where now it burns, Marcellus and
The bell then beating one,—
Mar. Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes again!

Enter Ghost.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that 's dead. [Horatio.
Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it,
Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.
Hor. Most like: it harrows me with fear and wonder.
Ber. It would be spoke to.
Mar. Question it, Horatio.
Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night, [form
Together with that fair and warlike
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!
Mar. It is offended.
Ber. See, it stalks away!
Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! [Exit Ghost.
Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.
Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale:
Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you on 't?
Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.
Mar. Is it not like the king?
Hor. As thou art to thyself:
Such was the very armour he had on
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle, [ice.
He smote the sledded Polacks on the
'Tis strange. [at this dead hour,
Mar. Thus twice before, and jump
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.
Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not; [opinion,
But in the gross and scope of my
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.
Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same strict and most observant watch [land,
So nightly toils the subject of the
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon, [war;
And foreign mart for implements of
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task [week;
Does not divide the Sunday from the
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day:
Who is 't that can inform me?
Hor. That can I;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, [to us,
Whose image even but now appear'd
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway, [pride,
Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate
Dared to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet—
For so this side of our known world esteem'd him—
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands [queror:
Which he stood seized of, to the con-
Against the which, a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same covenant,
And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there
Shark'd up a list of lawless resolutes,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in 't: which is no other—
As it doth well appear unto our state—
But to recover of us, by strong hand
And terms compulsatory, those foresaid lands [fit,
So by his father lost: and this, I take
Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch, and the chief head

Of this post-haste and romage in the land.
Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so: [figure
Well may it sort that this portentous
Comes armed through our watch; so like the king [wars.
That was and is the question of these
Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye. [of Rome,
In the most high and palmy state
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead [streets.
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman
[1] As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood, [star
Disasters in the sun; and the moist
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands [eclipse;
Was sick almost to doomsday with
And even the like precurse of fierce events, [fates
As harbingers preceding still the
And prologue to the omen coming on,
Have heaven and earth together demonstrated
Unto our climatures and countrymen.
But soft, behold! lo, where it comes again!

Re-enter Ghost.

I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease and grace to me,
Speak to me:
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak!
Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death,
Speak of it: stay, and speak! [Cock crows.] Stop it, Marcellus.
Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan?
Hor. Do, if it will not stand.
Ber. 'Tis here!
Hor. 'Tis here!
Mar. 'Tis gone! [Exit Ghost.

[1] A preceding line has probably been lost here.

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.
Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.
Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing [heard,
Upon a fearful summons. I have
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, [throat
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning, [air,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine: and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.
Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock. [comes
Some say that ever 'gainst that season
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated, [long:
The bird of dawning singeth all night
And then, they say, no spirit dare stir abroad; [planets strike,
The nights are wholesome; then no
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm, [time.
So hallow'd and so gracious is the
Hor. So have I heard and do in part believe it. [clad,
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill:
Break we our watch up; and by my advice, [night
Let us impart what we have seen to-
Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him. [with it,
Do you consent we shall acquaint him
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?
Mar. Let 's do 't, I pray; and I this morning know
Where we shall find him most conveniently. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in the Castle.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death

The memory be green, and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one brow of woe,
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature
That we with wisest sorrow think on him, [selves.
Together with remembrance of our-
Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen, [state,
The imperial jointress of this warlike
Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious and one dropping eye, [in marriage,
With mirth in funeral and with dirge
In equal scale weighing delight and dole,— [barr'd
Taken to wife: nor have we herein
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone [thanks.
With this affair along. For all, our
Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking by our late dear brother's death [frame,
Our state to be disjoint and out of
Colleagued with this dream of his advantage, [message,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bonds of law, [much for him.
To our most valiant brother. So
Now for ourself and for this time of meeting. [here writ
Thus much the business is: we have
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,— [hears
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress [levies,
His further gait herein; in that the
The lists and full proportions, are all made [patch
Out of his subject: and we here dis-
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand, [Norway;
For bearers of this greeting to old
Giving to you no further personal power [shall the scope
To business with the king, more
Of these delated articles allow.
Farewell, and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. } In that and all things will we
Vol. } show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell.

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

And now, Laertes, what 's the news with you? [Laertes?
You told us of some suit; what is 't,
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane, [thou beg, Laertes,
And lose your voice: what wouldst
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking? [heart,
The head is not more native to the
The hand more instrumental to the mouth, [father.
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty in your coronation,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done, [toward France
My thoughts and wishes bend again
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave
By laboursome petition, and at last
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine, [will!
And thy best graces spend it at thy
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. [Aside.] A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i' the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not for ever with thy vailed lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust:
Thou know'st 'tis common; all that lives must die,

Passing through nature to eternity.
Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.
Queen. If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee?
Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not 'seems.'
'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly: these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.
King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation for some term
To do obsequious sorrow: but to persever
In obstinate condolement is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,
An understanding simple and unschool'd:
For what we know must be and is
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we in our peevish opposition
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe, and think of us
As of a father; for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And with no less nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire:
And we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.
Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Hamlet:
I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.
King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply:
Be as ourself in Denmark. Madam, come;
This gentle and unforced accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heaven shall bruit again,
Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.
[Flourish. Exeunt all but HAMLET.
Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw and resolve itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on 't! ah fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead! nay, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr; so loving to my mother,
That he might not beteem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: and yet, within a month—
Let me not think on 't—Frailty, thy name is woman!—
A little month; or ere those shoes were old
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,

Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even she— [of reason,
O God! a beast, that wants discourse
Would have mourn'd longer—married with my uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father
Than I to Hercules: within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married. O, most wicked speed, to post [sheets!
With such dexterity to incestuous
It is not nor it cannot come to good:
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Enter HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you:
And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?—
Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you. [To BER.] Good even, sir.
[To HOR.] But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord. [say so,

Ham. I would not hear your enemy
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore?
We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student; [wedding.
I think it was to see my mother's

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral baked meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables. [heaven
Would I had met my dearest foe in
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!
My father!—methinks I see my father.

Hor. O where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once; he was a goodly king. [all in all,

Ham. He was a man, take him for I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw? who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father!

Hor. Season your admiration for awhile
With an attent ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen, [watch,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their
In the dead vast and middle of the night, [like your father,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure
Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe,
Appears before them, and with solemn march [thrice he walk'd
Goes slow and stately by them:
By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes, [they, distill'd
Within his truncheon's length; whilst
Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Stand dumb, and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did;
And I with them the third night kept the watch: [time,
Where, as they had deliver'd, both in
Form of the thing, each word made true and good, [father;
The apparition comes: I knew your
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did;
But answer made it none: yet once methought
It lifted up its head and did address
Itself to motion, like as it would speak;
But even then the morning cock crew loud, [away,
And at the sound it shrunk in haste
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true; [duty
And we did think it writ down in our
To let you know of it.
Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.
Hold you the watch to-night?
Mar. } We do, my lord.
Ber. }
Ham. Arm'd, say you?
Mar. } Arm'd, my lord.
Ber. }
Ham. From top to toe?
Mar. } My lord, from head to foot.
Ber. }
Ham. Then saw you not his face?
Hor. O, yes, my lord; he wore his beaver up.
Ham. What, look'd he frowningly?
Hor. A countenance more in sorrow than in anger.
Ham. Pale or red?
Hor. Nay, very pale.
Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?
Hor. Most constantly.
Ham. I would I had been there.
Hor. It would have much amazed you. [it long?
Ham. Very like, very like. Stay'd
Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.
Mar. } Longer, longer.
Ber. }
Hor. Not when I saw 't.
Ham. His beard was grizzled? no?
Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.
Ham. I will watch to-night;
Perchance 'twill walk again.
Hor. I warrant it will.
Ham. If it assume my noble father's person, [should gape
I'll speak to it, though hell itself
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all, [sight,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this
Let it be tenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue: [you well:
I will requite your loves. So, fare
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.
All. Our duty to your honour.
Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: farewell.
[Exeunt all but HAMLET.
My father's spirit in arms! all is not well; [night were come!
I doubt some foul play: would the
Till then sit still, my soul: foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in POLONIUS' House.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd: farewell:
And, sister, as the winds give benefit
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.
Oph. Do you doubt that?
Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,
Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting, [minute;
The perfume and suppliance of a
No more.
Oph. No more but so?
Laer. Think it no more:
For nature, crescent, does not grow alone [waxes,
In thews and bulk; but, as this temple
The inward service of the mind and soul [loves you now;
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he
And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch [fear,
The virtue of his will: but you must
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth:
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends [whole state;
The safety and the health of the
And therefore must his choice be circumscribed [body
Unto the voice and yielding of that
Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you,
It fits your wisdom so far to believe it
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed; which is no further [withal.
Than the main voice of Denmark goes

Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs,
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd importunity.
Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes:
The canker galls the infants of the spring
Too oft before their buttons be disclosed;
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
Whilst, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own rede.

Laer. O, fear me not.
I stay too long:—but here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame!
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There; my blessing with thee!
And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledged comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel; but being in,
Bear 't, that the opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man,
And they in France of the best rank and station
Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Neither a borrower nor a lender be;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all: to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell: my blessing season this in thee!

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you; go; your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia, and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit.

Pol. What is 't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous:
If it be so—as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution—I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green girl,
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them? [I should think.
Oph. I do not know, my lord, what
Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby, [true pay,
That you have ta'en these tenders for
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;
Or—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, [fool.
Running it thus—you'll tender me a
Oph. My lord, he hath importuned me with love
In honourable fashion.
Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.
Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.
Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul [daughter,
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes,
Giving more light than heat, extinct in both, [ing.
Even in their promise, as it is a-mak-
You must not take for fire. From this time [presence;
Be somewhat scanter of your maiden
Set your entreatments at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet, [young,
Believe so much in him, that he is
And with a larger tether may he walk
Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia, [brokers,
Do not believe his vows; for they are
Not of that dye which their investments show,
But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds, [all,—
The better to beguile. This is for
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth, [leisure

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold. [air.
Hor. It is a nipping and an eager
Ham. What hour now?
Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.
Mar. No, it is struck.
Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: it then draws near the season
Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.
[A Flourish of Trumpets, and Ordnance shot off within.
What does this mean, my lord?
Ham. The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse,
Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring reels;
And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down, [bray out
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus
The triumph of his pledge.
Hor. Is it a custom?
Ham. Ay, marry, is't: [here
But to my mind, though I am native
And to the manner born, it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach than the observance.
This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduced and tax'd of other nations: [swinish phrase
They clepe us drunkards, and with Soil our addition; and indeed it takes
From our achievements, though perform'd at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chances in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them, [not guilty,
As, in their birth,—wherein they are
Since nature cannot choose his origin,—

Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason; [leavens
Or by some habit that too much o'er-

Carrying, I say, the stamp of one
Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,—
Their virtues else—be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo—
Shall in the general censure take corruption [of eale
From that particular fault: [1] the dram

[1] Of this corrupt passage no authoritative emendation has as yet been proposed.

Doth all the noble substance of a doubt
To his own scandal.
Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!

Enter Ghost.

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us! [damn'd,
Be thou a spirit of health or goblin
Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,
Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
Thou comest in such a questionable shape [thee Hamlet,
That I will speak to thee: I'll call
King, father, royal Dane: O, answer me! [tell
Let me not burst in ignorance; but
Why thy canonized bones, hearsed in death, [sepulchre,
Have burst their cerements; why the

To cast thee up again. What may
That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel, [moon,
Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the
Making night hideous; and we fools of Nature
So horridly to shake our disposition
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?
[Ghost beckons HAMLET.
Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.
Mar. Look, with what courteous action [ground:
It waves you to a more removed
But do not go with it.
Hor. No, by no means.
Ham. It will not speak; then I will follow it.
Hor. Do not, my lord. [fear?
Ham. Why, what should be the
I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
And for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?
It waves me forth again: I'll follow it.
Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord, [cliff
Or to the dreadful summit of the

And there assume some other horrible form, [of reason
Which might deprive your sovereignty
And draw you into madness? think of it: [tion,

Without more motive, into every brain
That looks so many fathoms to the sea
And hears it roar beneath.
Ham. It waves me still:—
Go on; I'll follow thee.
Mar. You shall not go, my lord.
Ham. Hold off your hands.
Hor. Be ruled; you shall not go.
Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.
[Ghost beckons.
Still am I call'd:—unhand me, gentlemen; [Breaking from them.
By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me! [thee.
I say, away! Go on; I'll follow

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination. [to obey him.
Mar. Let 's follow; 'tis not fit thus
Hor. Have after. To what issue will this come? [of Denmark.
Mar. Something is rotten in the state
Hor. Heaven will direct it.
Mar. Nay, let 's follow him.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Platform.

Enter Ghost and HAMLET.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak; I'll go no further.
Ghost. Mark me.
Ham. I will.
Ghost. My hour is almost come,
When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
Must render up myself.
Ham. Alas, poor ghost!
Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold.
Ham. Speak; I am bound to hear.
Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.
Ham. What?
Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;
Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night, [fires,
And for the day confined to fast in

Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature [I am forbid
Are burnt and purged away. But that
To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
I could a tale unfold whose lightest word [thy young blood,
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres, [part,
Thy knotted and combined locks to
And each particular hair to stand an end,
Like quills upon the fretful porpentine:
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, O, list! [love,—
If thou didst ever thy dear father
Ham. O God!
Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.
Ham. Murder!
Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is; [tural.
But this most foul, strange, and unna-
Ham. Haste me to know 't; that I, with wings as swift
As meditation or the thoughts of love,
May sweep to my revenge.
Ghost. I find thee apt;
And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed [wharf,
That roots itself in ease on Lethe
Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear: [orchard,
'Tis given out that, sleeping in mine
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denmark
Is by a forged process of my death
Rankly abused: but know, thou noble youth, [life
The serpent that did sting thy father's
Now wears his crown.
Ham. O my prophetic soul!
My uncle!
Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,— [power
O wicked wit and gifts, that have the
So to seduce!—won to his shameful lust [queen:
The will of my most seeming-virtuous
O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity [the vow
That it went hand in hand even with
I made to her in marriage; and to decline [were poor
Upon a wretch whose natural gifts
To those of mine!
But virtue, as it never will be moved,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven, [link'd,
So lust, though to a radiant angel
Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
And prey on garbage.
But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air; [orchard,
Brief let me be. Sleeping within mine
My custom always of the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial,
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leperous distilment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man [through
That swift as quicksilver it courses
The natural gates and alleys of the body; [posset
And with a sudden vigour it doth

And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd: [sin,
Cut off even in the blossoms of my
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unanel'd;
No reckoning made, but sent to my account [head:
With all my imperfections on my
O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! [not;
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursuest this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive [to heaven,
Against thy mother aught: leave her
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge, [at once!
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well
The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire:
Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me.
[Exit.

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! what else?
And shall I couple hell? O, fie! Hold, hold, my heart;
And you, my sinews, grow not instant old, [thee!
But bear me stiffly up. Remember
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat [thee!
In this distracted globe. Remember
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past, [there;
That youth and observation copied
And thy commandment all alone shall live [brain,
Within the book and volume of my

That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark: [Writing.
So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
It is 'Adieu, adieu! remember me.'
I have sworn 't.

Hor. [Within.] My lord! my lord!
Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet!
Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!
Ham. So be it. [lord!
Hor. [Within.] Hillo, ho, ho, my
Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How is 't, my noble lord?
Hor. What news, my lord?
Ham. O, wonderful!
Hor. Good my lord, tell it.
Ham. No; you will reveal it.
Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.
Mar. Nor I, my lord.
Ham. How say you then; would heart of man once think it?—
But you'll be secret?

Hor. } Ay, by heaven, my lord.
Mar. }

Ham. There 's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark
But he 's an arrant knave.
Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave
To tell us this. [right;
Ham. Why, right; you are i' the
And so, without more circumstance at all, [part:
I hold it fit that we shake hands and
You, as your business and desire shall point you; [desire,
For every man hath business and
Such as it is; and for mine own poor part,
Look you, I will go pray.
Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.
Ham. I'm sorry they offend you, heartily;
Yes, faith, heartily. [lord.
Hor. There 's no offence, my
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,
And much offence too. Touching this vision here, [you:
It is an honest ghost, that let me tell
For your desire to know what is between us,
O'ermaster 't as you may. And now, good friends,
As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.
Hor. What is 't, my lord? we will.
Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.

Hor. } My lord, we will not.
Mar. }

Ham. Nay, but swear 't.
Hor. In faith,
My lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.
Ham. Upon my sword. [already.
Mar. We have sworn, my lord,
Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Ah, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, true-penny?
Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,—
Consent to swear.
Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.
Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Hic et ubique? then we'll shift our ground.
Come hither, gentlemen, [sword:
And lay your hands again upon my

Never to speak of this that you have heard;
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' the earth so fast?
A worthy pioneer! Once more remove, good friends.
Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!
Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.
There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.
But come; [mercy,
Here, as before, never, so help you
How strange or odd soe'er I bear myself,— [meet
As I perchance hereafter shall think
To put an antic disposition on,—
That you, at such times seeing me, never shall, [head-shake,
With arms encumber'd thus, or this
Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As 'Well, well, we know,' or 'We could, an if we would,'
Or 'If we list to speak,' or 'There be, an if they might,' [note
Or such ambiguous giving out, to
That you know aught of me: this not to do, [help you,
So grace and mercy at your most need
Swear.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! [They swear.] So, gentlemen,
With all my love I do commend me to you; [is
And what so poor a man as Hamlet
May do, to express his love and friending to you, [in together;
God willing, shall not lack. Let us go
And still your fingers on your lips, I pray. [spite,
The time is out of joint: O cursed
That ever I was born to set it right!
Nay, come, let 's go together. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Room in POLONIUS' House.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.
Rey. I will, my lord.
Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,
Before you visit him, to make inquire
Of his behaviour.
Rey. My lord, I did intend it.
Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look you, sir,
Inquire me first what Danskers are in Paris, [where they keep,
And how, and who, what means, and
What company, at what expense; and finding [question
By this encompassment and drift of
That they do know my son, come you more nearer [touch it:
Than your particular demands will
Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;
As thus, 'I know his father and his friends, [this, Reynaldo?
And, in part, him:'—do you mark
Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.
Pol. 'And, in part, him; but,' you may say, 'not well:
But if 't be he I mean, he 's very wild,
Addicted so and so:'—and there put on him [none so rank
What forgeries you please; marry,
As may dishonour him; take heed of that; [slips
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.
Rey. As gaming, my lord.
Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling,
Drabbing: you may go so far. [him.
Rey. My lord, that would dishonour
Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge. [him,
You must not put another scandal on
That he is open to incontinency;
That 's not my meaning: but breathe his faults so quaintly
That they may seem the taints of liberty,
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,
A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.
Rey. But, my good lord,—
Pol. Wherefore should you do this
Rey. Ay, my lord
I would know that.
Pol. Marry, sir, here 's my drift;
And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant

You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,
Mark you, sounding,
Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate assured crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assured
He closes with you in this consequence;
"Good sir," or so; or "friend," or "gentleman," according
According to the phrase or the addition
Of man and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this—he does—what was I about to say? By the mass, I was about to say something: where did I leave?

Rey. At "closes in the consequence," at "friend or so, and "gentleman."

Pol. At "closes in the consequence," ay, marry; He closes with you thus: "I know the gentleman; I saw him yesterday, or t' other day, Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say, There was 'a gaming; there o'ertook in 's rouse; There falling out at tennis:" or perchance, "I saw him enter such a house of sale," Videlicet, a brothel, or so forth. See you now; Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth: And thus do we of wisdom and of reach, With windlasses and with assays of bias, By indirections find directions out: So, by my former lecture and advice, Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord!

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord.

Pol. Farewell! Exit REYNALDO.

Enter OPHELIA.

How now, Ophelia! what's the matter?

Oph. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted!

Pol. With what, i' the name of God?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,
Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbraced;
No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ancle;
Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;
And with a look so piteous in purport
As if he had been loosed out of hell
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;
But truly I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;
Then goes he to the length of all his arm,
And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face
As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;
At last, a little shaking of mine arm,
And thrice his head thus waving up and down,
He raised a sigh so piteous and profound
As it did seem to shatter all his bulk
And end his being: that done, he lets me go:
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
For out o' doors he went without their help,
And to the last bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me: I will go seek the king.
This is the very ecstasy of love;
Whose violent property foredoes itself
And leads the will to desperate undertakings
As oft as any passion under heaven
That does afflict our natures. I am sorry.
What, have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did command,
I did repel his letters and denied
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorry that with better heed and judgment
I had not quoted him: I fear'd he did but trifle,
And meant to wreck thee; but beshrew my jealousy!
By heaven, it is as proper to our age

To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king: [close, might move
This must be known; which, being kept
More grief to hide than hate to utter love.
Come. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern! [see you,
Moreover that we much did long to
The need we have to use you did provoke [you heard
Our hasty sending. Something have
Of Hamlet's transformation; so call it,
Sith nor the exterior nor the inward man [should be,
Resembles that it was. What it
More than his father's death, that thus hath put him [himself,
So much from the understanding of
I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,
That, being of so young days brought up with him,
And sith so neighbour'd to his youth and 'haviour, [our court
That you vouchsafe your rest here in
Some little time: so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather, [glean,
So much as from occasion you may
Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,
That, open'd, lies within our remedy.
Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;
And sure I am two men there are not living [please you
To whom he more adheres. If it will
To show us so much gentry and good will
As to expend your time with us awhile,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance.
Ros. Both your majesties
Might, by the sovereign power you have of us, [command
Put your dread pleasures more into
Than to entreaty.
Guil. But we both obey,
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded.
King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenstern.
Queen. Thanks, Guilderstern and gentle Rosencrantz:
And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed son.—Go, some of you, [let is.
And bring these gentlemen where Ham-
Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices
Pleasant and helpful to him!
Queen. Ay, amen!
[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and some Attendants.

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
Are joyfully return'd.
King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.
Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God and to my gracious king; [of mine
And I do think,—or else this brain
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath used to do,—that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.
King. O, speak of that; that do I long to hear.
Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;
My news shall be the fruit to that great feast. [bring them in.
King. Thyself do grace to them, and [Exit POLONIUS.
He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found [distemper.
The head and source of all your son's
Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main; [marriage.
His father's death, and our o'erhasty
King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Welcome, my good friends!

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway? [and desires.
Volt. Most fair return of greetings Upon our first, he sent out to suppress His nephew's levies, which to him appear'd To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack; But, better look'd into, he truly found It was against your highness: whereat grieved,— [tence That so his sickness, age, and impo- Was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests [obeys, On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, Receives rebukes from Norway, and in fine [more Makes vow before his uncle never To give the assay of arms against your majesty. That it might please you to give quiet pass [prise, Through your dominions for this enter- On such regards of safety and allowance As therein are set down.
King. It likes us well; And at our more consider'd time we'll read, Answer, and think upon this business. Meantime we thank you for your well-took labour: [together: Go to your rest; at night we'll feast Most welcome home!
[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.
Pol. This business is well ended. My liege, and madam, to expostulate What majesty should be, what duty is, Why day is day, night night, and time is time, [and time. Were nothing but to waste night, day, Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, [flourishes, And tediousness the limbs and outward I will be brief. Your noble son is mad: Mad call I it; for, to define true madness, [mad? What is 't but to be nothing else but But let that go.
Queen. More matter, with less art.
Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all. [pity That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true 'tis And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure; But farewell it, for I will use no art. Mad let us grant him then: and now remains That we find out the cause of this effect, Or rather say, the cause of this defect; For this effect defective comes by cause: [thus. Thus it remains, and the remainder Perpend: [mine— I have a daughter—have while she is Who, in her duty and obedience, mark, Hath given me this: now gather, and surmise. [Reads.
'To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia,'—
That 's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautified' is a vile phrase: but you shall hear. Thus: [Reads.
'In her excellent white bosom, these,' etc.
Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful. [Reads.

'Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt I love.

'O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers; I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu.
'Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him,
'HAMLET.'
This in obedience hath my daughter shown me;
And more above, hath his solicitings, As they fell out by time, by means, and place, All given to mine ear.
King. But how hath she Received his love?
Pol. What do you think of me?
King. As of a man faithful and honourable.
Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think, When I had seen this hot love on the wing— As I perceived it, I must tell you that, Before my daughter told me—what might you, [think, Or my dear majesty your queen here,

If I had play'd the desk or table-book,
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb, [sight;
Or look'd upon this love with idle
What might you think? No, I went round to work, [bespeak;
And my young mistress thus I did
